will address the citizens of Chilton county on the issues of the day at

CLANTON

SATURDAY, JANUARY 6, 1906.

EVERYBODY INVITED.

Pilgrims' Rest.

Editor Banner—Please allow me a small space in your paper to write a few words to the people of our county about this community.

Pilgrims' Rest is a good and growing community. This is a broad expression but we say this after viewing the community from every side. We have an evergreen Sunday school, which I think determines the very character of any neighborhood. Our literary school is larger and better than it has been in recent years. These things cause us to believe we are on the road of prosperity, and with these and the assistance of others we hope to be a light in our county.

Our Christmas tree at this place was a grand success. We believe that its success was largely due to our teacher, Prof. J. O. Williams, who had the students of the school and Sunday school to prepare and recite several nice recitations. Also we had a fine Santa Claus who did much to make it pleasant to all.

With best ishes to the Banner we will close expecting to come again if this finds its way to the readers of the Banner.

Indigestion is easily overcome by the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, because this remedy digests what you eat and gives the stomach a rest—allows it to recuperate and grow strong again. Kodol relieves Indigestion, Belching of Gas, Sour Stomach, Heart-Burn, etc., and enables the digestive organs to transform all foods into the kind of rich red blood that makes health and strength. Perfection can only be attained in the physical by allowing Nature to appropriate and not dissipate her own resources. For coughs and colds no remedy is equal to Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar. It is different from all others—better, because it expels all cold from the system by acting as a cathartic on the bowels. Affords immediate relief in Croup, Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, etc. Children love it. Sold by Upchurch Drug co

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years from rheumatism," says W. H. Howard of Husband, Pennsylvania. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton, A. Horn, Thorsby.

...w of Resistance Kept Up, ...Strikers Are Negotiating Terms of Surrender.

...Petersburg.—The past week has ... one of bloodshed and riot, but ...ng to the loyalty of the troops of ... czar and the inclination towards ...w and order evinced by the better ...lass of citizens, the revolutionists have been decisively beaten and it will be many years before they will again attempt to substitute anarchy and oppression for lawful and peaceful government.

The suppression of the insurrection at Moscow and the certainty that similar uprisings elsewhere will be crushed, mark the collapse of the first attempt of the "reds" to overthrow the government arms, and administer a defeat from which it is not believed in government circles the revolutionaries can quickly recover.

Now that the smoke of battle is clearing away, the utter hopelessness of the conflict seems to be apparent. The populace held aloof and not a single military unit actually joined the revolutionaries. Even the general strike crumbled under the feet by their challenging and precipitating a conflict before the proletariat organizations were prepared.

The government secured a comparatively easy though ruthless victory, and it is believed in high official circles that the organizations have been so demoralized and disrupted by the blow, and by the arrest of their most able leaders, that it would be impossible for them to attempt the coup planned for the anniversary of "bloody Sunday." In desperation undoubtedly the revolutionaries will again have recourse to acts of terror which they will spring at the most unexpected moment.

The country has quieted and the cabinet now hopes the selection of the douma is assured, and that the government can devote its time to the suppression of the revolt in the Baltic provinces and more especially to the solution of the agrarian question. If means cannot be found to in some measure satisfy the land hunger of the peasants before the spring, the universal opinion is that the peasants everywhere will rise. The landed proprietors seem to be convinced of this to such an extent that the landlords in the neighborhood of Minsk are calling their tenants together and are voluntarily arranging the distribution of a portion of their private holdings and terms satisfactory to the peasants.

Mrs. Jane Stanford Was Not Poisoned.

Denver.—President David Starr Jordan, of Stanford university, announced in an interview that a full report of recent discoveries in connection with the death of the late Mrs. Jane Stanford would soon be made public. He is alleged to have accused several Honolulu officials and servants of the deceased to getting big fees from the estate.

He is also said to have declared, that it has been established beyond a doubt that Mrs. Stanford died a natural death, and that the story of murder was originated to invalidate if possible a bequest to Miss Berner, her private secretary.

Former Governor Killed By Bomb.

Bois, Ia.—Frank Steunenberg, former governor of this state, was killed at 6:40 o'clock Saturday night at his home in Caldwell. A dynamite bomb had been placed at his front gate with a contrivance with which it was exploded as he entered. Both legs were blown off and he lived but twenty minutes. There is no known reason for the outrage, but it is charged to some member of the famous "Inner Circle, of the Couer d' Alene Dynamiters," whom he prosecuted so relentlessly in 1899, while he was governor.

Governor Gooding is in communication with the authorities of that county, and is prepared to put the full support of the state behind the officials there in running down the perpetrators of the crime.

Governor Gooding has notified the Cannon county officials that the state will offer a reward of $5,000 for the apprehension of the murderers.

Snow in Texas.

Dallas, Tex.—The first snow of the season fell in Texas Saturday.

Minister Changed.

Berlin.—Baron Mumm Von Schwartzenstein, the German minister at Pekin, has been appointed ambassador of Germany at Tokio.

TwentySix Men Drowned at Sea.

Victoria, B. C.—About twenty-five men and one woman, it is believed now, were drowned with the British ...of Melfort, which found... ...Amphitrite Point.

Marshal Thornton Shot.

Toledo, O.—Marshal Frank Thornton, of Perrysburg, was shot in the abdomen while attempting, with his deputy, William Scott, to arrest five men suspected of robbing a car barn in Toledo last Sunday morning. Marshal Thornton was tonight taken to the Toledo hospital for an operation. His condition is critical.

Cleveland Men Plead Guilty.

Cleveland.—The three officers of the Cleveland Retail Commercial Association indicted on the charge of violating the Valentine anti-trust law pleaded guilty in common pleas court and were sentenced to pay a fine of $500 and costs.

Mrs. Lewis Hanged Herself.

Hot Springs, Ark.—Mrs. H. J. Lewis, wife of the cashier of the Illinois Club, committed suicide by hanging at her home on Dell street. She tied a clothes line to the stairway and jumped off. Ill health is supposed to have prompted the deed.

Macedonians Prepare for Uprising.

Budapest.—The Turkish government has presented a note to the Hungarian government informing it that the Macedonians in Bulgaria are preparing for an uprising in Macedonia in the coming spring. The porte says it thinks that it is its duty to call the attention of the powers to this dangerous movement, so as to enable them to take suitable steps at Sofia.

Last Shot of the War.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Thursday night some boys were out hunting on the mountain, and when near the top of "Camel's Back," the highest point, they built a fire at the foot of a large dead pine tree. They spent some time warming around the fire. After leaving there occurred the most terrific explosion heard in this section in many years. Everybody in the town heard it. It sounded like the explosion of twenty-five or thirty sticks of dynamite. The windows in the houses rattled like an earthquake was in progress.

Investigation showed that a cannonball or shell, fired during the civil war, and imbedded in the pine tree, which was probably the cause of the tree dying, had gotten hot from the fire the hunters had built and had exploded. The explosion tore the tree into fragments, leaving a part of the stump standing and a part of the shell still imbedded in it. The hunters had gotten a mile or more away when the explosion came or they would doubtless have been killed. It was a Christmas gun all right, and doubtless the last echoes of the war that will ever be heard in the hills of "High Jackson."

Kirk Jackson Leaves.

Montgomery, Ala.—Hon. J. Kirk Jackson, private secretary to the governor, left for New York Saturday to deliver the Class C renewal bonds of Alabama, recently sold to the First National Bank of Montgomery. The bonds are to be delivered through the state's financial agent, the Trust Company of America, of 135 Broadway.

The bonds amount to $966,000 and were sold a few months ago for a premium of $19,320 by Governor Jelks. On the acceptance of the bonds, those which are to be refunded on January 2d will be taken up by the state's agent.

New Law Goes Into Force.

Montgomery, Ala.—Sunday was the last day on which retail liquor dealers of Montgomery were allowed to conduct saloons under the old city ordinance. At 12 o'clock Sunday the Teague ordinance, recently adopted by the city council, went into effect, and all other ordinances, previously adopted by the council, become void.

Under the new measure, all restaurants must not be connected with saloons, and every saloon is required to have its bar so arranged that on Sunday a clear view of the bar may be seen from the sidewalk. No one except the proprietor of a saloon or one of his clerks is allowed to enter the saloon on Sunday. The fine for the violation of this ordinance is heavy. Bars connected with clubs are excluded.

Died by Own Hand.

Mobile, Ala.—Edward Carew Rice, 33 years old, local representative of the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., and a prominent club man, was found dead in his office Thursday. He left a telegram and letter showing that the act was a deliberate one. He came from Ninety Six, S. C., and the body will be shipped to that point.

$15,000 Willed Dog and Parrot.

New York.—The fact that Cecila Woolsey, who was formerly a performer on the vaudeville stage under the name of Lillian Western, bequeathed $15,000 for the care of her dog, parrot and cage of live birds, became known when her will was filed. Miss Woolsey died a week ago.

Reversed Verdict for Seven Thousand Damages.

Fort Payne, Ala.—The supreme court has reversed and remanded the case of J. H. E. Guest, administrator, vs. Alabama Great Southern Railroad Co. Mr. Guest brought suit against the road for the killing of William Dean and secured a judgment for $7,000. The railroad appealed the case and the court has reversed the judgment of the circuit court and sent the case back for a new trial.

First Blood Shed.

New Orleans.—The first bloodshed in the strike of the carriage drivers against the undertakers occurred Saturday, when Paul Joseph, a driver, was shot and fatally wounded by Clarence Enos, a non-union man. Enos was driving a carriage for undertakers who refused to sign the strikers' agreement.

While he was emptying a funeral load he was attacked by strikers and their sympathizers, and drew a pistol and fired into the crowd.

Big Fire in Bay City.

Bay City, Mich.—The entire plant of the American Shipbuilding company in this city was destroyed by fire Saturday night, entailing a loss of $350,000. The fire started about 11:30 in the furnace shop and quickly spread to the other buildings. Late reports are to the effect that there was no insurance on the burned buildings. The plant employed 950 men.

TAMED WILD BEASTS

STRANGE ANIMAL STORIES TOLD BY BRITISHERS.

Mission to Seis'an Had Some Queer Experiences—Hunting Mad Jackals One of the Chief Pleasures of a Monotonous Trip.

Some strange stories about animals are told by the members of the British arbitration mission to Seistan, who have recently returned home. There was in particular a tame wolf which followed the mission for a long time because it had the kindliest feelings toward the generous cook. Nothing would induce the animal to leave the camp until at last the mission, having to return to India, conveniently lost it in the jungle, although it had become quite tame. One of the terrors of the mission were the mad jackals. One night they bit seventy-eight natives, of which forty died. The rest were natives who succumbed soon after to hydrophobia. If these jackals were a terror, they also gave much pleasure to the arbitrators and members who hunted them just as they would chase the fox. Jackals are in many respects intermediate between the wolf and the fox. The picture of the shepherd is quite a familiar one to all visitors to the northern latitudes in India and Persia. There is something curiously reminiscent of the old-fashioned illustrations of our Bibles in this up-to-date photograph which was taken by one of the officers with the Seistan mission.

Sportsmen in India may have their choice in shooting tigers, leopards, bison, bears, deer, and last, but not least, wild elephants, and one of the most exciting experiments is to witness these last being caught alive in a "keddah." The government of India has a large keddah establishment in Mysore, from which tamed elephants are sent all over the presidencies, the finest being sold to great rajahs for their state processions, sometimes selling for as much as $9,000 or $10,000. By the kaddah system a herd of wild elephants is driven into a stockade, and there impounded alive and tamed by trained elephants. Sometimes the "drive" may take weeks, or even months, the beaters behind gradually gliding inward as the great beasts retreat before them until at last the order to close in is given and the herd passes into the keddah, the great gate falling with a crash behind them. Then the tame keddah elephants file in with their riders and "corner" the most obstreperous in such a way that he is unable to resist the noose and ropes which are passed round him. Two or three months later he passes out with his mahout, completely tamed, a "government servant" for the rest of his days.

Used Cow to Decoy Geese.

Those who attended the Cheney sale Tuesday witnessed a singular hunting performance, probably never put into execution by any one else than the stranger who managed the affair.

He was seen walking in a crouching position by the side of a cow that kept going about in a circle that constantly narrowed. Suddenly the animal stopped, apparently at a word of command, and the man quickly pulled a gun to his shoulder and fired at a lot of wild geese that had permitted his approach to within shooting distance, deceived by the apparently innocent cow, which protected her master from their view. At least thirty birds were killed.—Tehama Correspondence Sacramento Bee.

Wanted Ladder to Reap Corn.

A farmer at Crows Fork, Mo., inquired the height of a ladder used by an aerial diver. Receiving the reply that it was about 90 feet, he said: "I just wanted to know, for I'm thinking of trying to borrow the thing to use in gathering some creek bottom corn I've got this time. Corn is so tall down my way this fall that a ladder like that would be just the trick when I get to gathering."

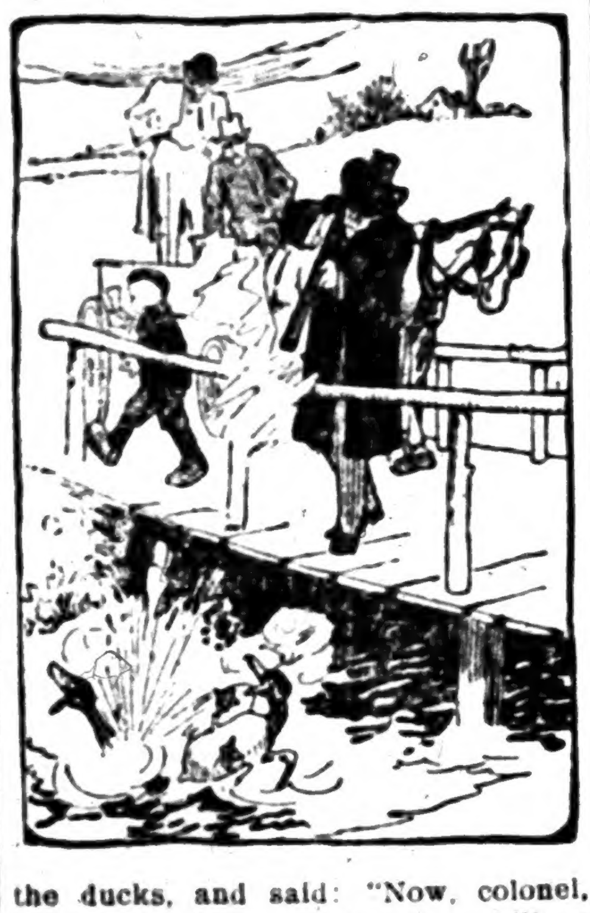
COL. POPE'S EXPENSIVE DUCKS

Small Boy Gave Promise of Becoming Great Financier.

Some years since, Col. Pope, E. D. Jordan and the late Marcellus Eldredge became interested, with others, in building a new hotel at Chatham, says a writer in the Boston Herald. These gentlemen late in the autumn made a trip down the Cape to select the site for the hotel. Thinking there might be some gunning, they took their guns along, but on the third day were returning in a large wagon across the sand to the railroad station without having seen any game.

As they approached a bridge over a small stream a boy was observed standing beside a pond some distance from the road, keeping watch over a flock of fine large tame ducks swimming about in the pond.

One of the party called attention to the ducks, and said: "Now, colonel, there is a chance to try your skill as a marksman."



The driver stopped the wagon, and Col. Pope, dismounting, called out to the boy: "What will you take to let me shoot at your ducks and have all I kill?"

The boy, after thinking a minute, replied: "You can have one shot from the bridge for $5."

The colonel at once said he would accept the offer. Calling the boy to the bridge, he gave him a crisp $5 bill; and, carefully taking aim, fired. Three ducks fell over dead.

Turning to the boy, one of the party said: "Well, boy, you have got a good price for your three ducks."

"Yes," said the boy, "but I don't give a d——n how many he killed; they ain't my ducks. I was only looking at 'em when you came along. I guess they belong to that house up there," pointing to a farm house nearby, where in a short time Col. Pope was seen settling with the owner for the damages to his flock of ducks, while the other members of the party were trying in vain to catch a small boy running across the sand hills.

Alarmed at Fall of Black Snow.

City dwellers are familiar enough with black snow a few days after a fall, but in the Swiss canton of Grisson there has been a fall of black snow, which has aroused the superstitious.

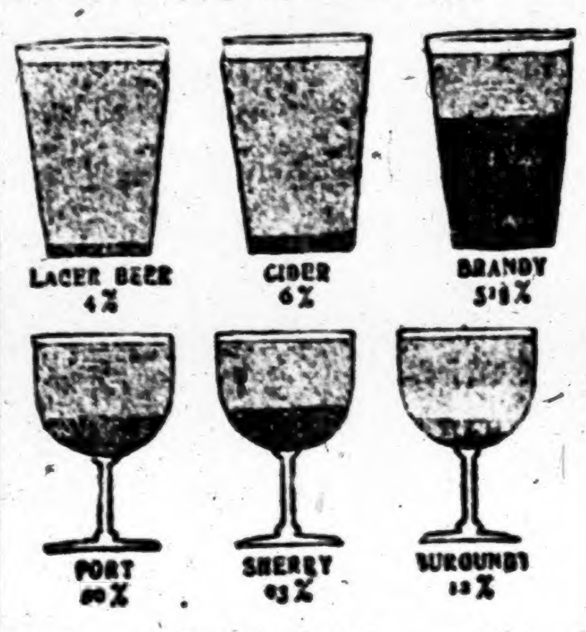
A short while ago the snow-capped mountains suddenly became a jet black and the people who are familiar enough with the red snow produced through a parasitical vegetable growth, were moved to terror at the sight.

Several guides climbed to the snow belt and found that the surface was infested with a small insect in such numbers that the snow beneath was entirely hidden.

The insect is unprovided with wings and moved about like a grasshopper through the use of two legs much longer than the others.

Alcohol in Liquors.

The tumblers represent half a pint, and the wine glasses half a gill. The dark shading shows the amount of alcohol contained and the figures below give its percentage of the bulk.



Pelican's Peculiar Motions.

The pelican, the chief of swimming and fishing birds, has many peculiar motions. He is a strong flier, and when alighting on the water to swim brings his feet, which had before been stretched out behind, into a standing position, and, as it were, slides along the surface for several yards before settling into a swim. In diving for fish he invariably performs a somersault under water, for, descending as he always does, diagonally, not perpendicularly, his head emerges looking into the direction opposite to that in which it was looking before.

Has Letter of Trafalgar Sailor.

A Manchester, N. H., man has a letter written by Hugh Folland on board of "his majesty's ship Bellona," July 12, 1812. He was taken prisoner by 12, 1812. He was taken prisoner by the Americans at the battle of Lake Champlain. He was afterward exchanged, but preferred to remain in this country. He spent the rest of his life in Vermont.

EACH WORE THE OTHER'S COAT

An Amusing Incident Between a Short Man and a Tall Friend.

A coat comedy occured recently in a Chicago press bureau. Two employees of the concern, one extremely short, the other tall, had been detained overtime, and did not leave the office until the hooks in the coatroom were practically bare.

The short man entered first, and after washing his face and hands turned to the hook where he was accustomed to leave his overcoat every day. What was his surprise and disgust to find nothing there. Then began a search among the divers garments which remained hanging on the wall to reveal the missing coat, but to no purpose. Finally giving up in despair, the little man seized the first coat he could lay his hands on and set out for home. It proved a fair fit, and although his heart was filled with anger at the usurper of his rightful coverings he was partially satisfied.

"Who Stole My Coat?"

A few minutes later the tall man entered the coatroom and went through the same lavatory exercises as had his predecessor. This man was addicted to the use of an office coat. Removing the latter, he was surprised to find no garment where he was used to leave his undercoat while at work. After appropriately cursing the thief, he also seized the nearest coat available, and worrying his overcoat on over it, wended his way homeward.

The two met the next morning in the coatroom.

"I had a funny experience last night," said the small man, thereupon relating his difficulties.

"Why, you've got my overcoat," exclaimed the tall man sliding out of his garment which the short man had worn home the evening before.

The latter turned in astonishment and surveyed his tall friend with amazement. But his eyes opened still wider as he was unable to suppress the statement:

"You've Got My Overcoat."

"But, by thunder, you wore my overcoat for an undercoat."

And then both laughed.

Blackcock in Vermont.

Harry Noyes of Hyde Park, Vt., shot this season a pair of birds that I think were without doubt hybrids, a cross between ruffed grouse and blackcock.

The birds were found in Cambridge, this state, not far from Middlebury, where the writer had some years ago a few pair of blackcock released. These hybrids were fully one-half larger than a large ruffed grouse, and the dark bands were a light chestnut color.

For several years after blackcock were released we had favorable reports of their breeding, and have no doubt that they have by this time spread over a considerable extent of territory, and if they are crossing with our native grouse it will please the majority of sportsmen, as they will make a larger mark to shoot at, and also give a little more meat in the pot.—Sheldon Correspondent of Forest and Stream.

Earth Breathes.

That the earth breathes is a well known scientific fact. It is often to be verified by that peculiar earthy smell which arises immediately after a thunderstorm, the lowering of the barometeric pressure causing the flow upward of air, just as it is once more squeezed downward when the barometer rises.

A resident of Geneva has discovered a natural barometer at Ferney-Voltaire. It is a deep natural well or cave, with a very small opening. When this opening is made small enough just to fit a whistle the different sounds as the earth inhales or exhales the air warn the neighbors of the coming weather. A lighted match or a feather shows the direction of the flow as well. It is said to be an excellent weather prophet.

Town Clerk in Petticoats.

Miss Clara McAlpine, the young daughter of William McAlpine of New Hartford, Conn., and recently a student at the Gilbert preparatory school, is the only woman town clerk in the state, having qualified to act in the absence of F. A. Jewell of New Hartford, who has gone to Buffalo for an extended stay.

She issues marriage licenses and discharges the other duties of the office satisfactorily to all applicants.

Proof of Elm Tree's Age.

An elm, said to be over 100 years old, was cut at Bennington, Vt., the other day. When the tree was chopped proof of its age was discovered near the heart in the shape of an old-fashioned hand-forged nail.

MAN'S BEARD CAUSE OF JEERS

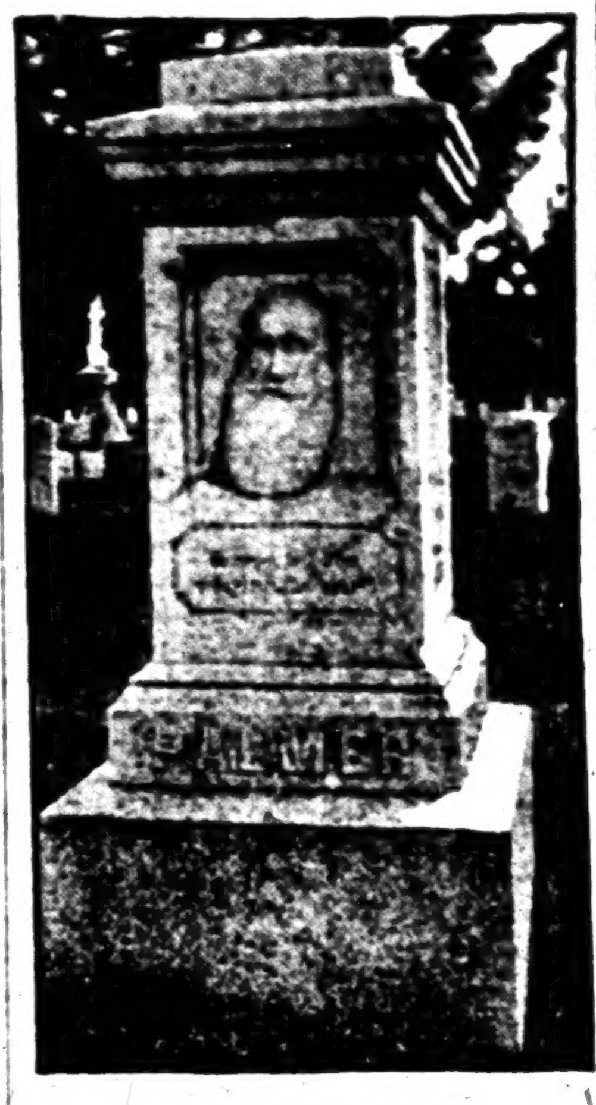
Wore Hirsute Adornment to Show His Independence.

Among odd gravestones is one in Leominster, Mass., which bears a portrait carved in marble, and the following iscription:

"Persecuted for wearing the beard."

These few words gave but a faint view to the unique personality who had this unusual memorial of himself chisled on his monument.

Joseph Palmer died in Leominster, Oct. 30, 1873, at the age of 84. He is not mentioned in the town directory, yet tradition has many interesting stories to tell of him.



Palmer's Tombstone.

It is said that he gloried in espousing the unpopular side in any controversy and posing as a martyr.

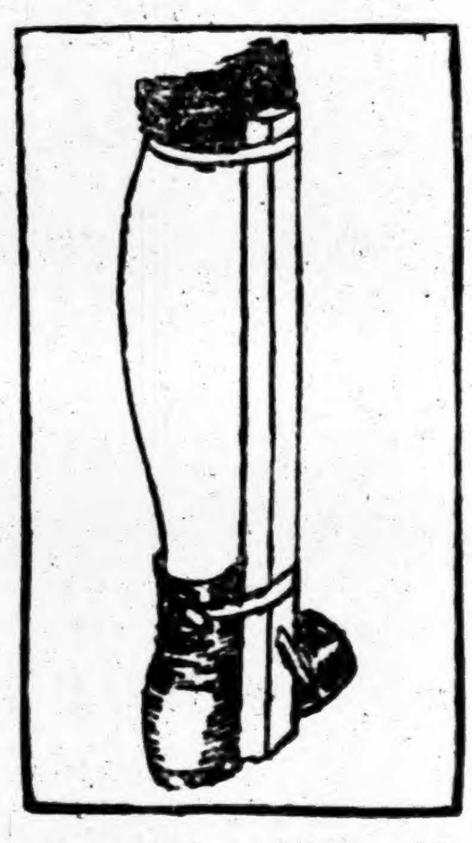
Early in the 19th century it was fashionable for men to go smooth shaven, so Joseph Palmer determined to wear a beard, not because of its beauty, but to assert his right to be contrary if he wanted to be. Men and boys used to jeer at him, much to his gratification.

Once a crowd of young fellows seized him in a hotel in Fitchburg and started to cut off his beard. He attacked his persecutors with a kife and wounded one of them. For this deed he was summoned into court, and he ever afterward felt himself a much persecuted man for conscience's sake.

According to one of the older residents of Leominster, Mr. Palmer was much interested in the transcendental philosophy founded by Amos Bronson Alcott, father of Louise May Alcott, the well known writer of stories for children. It is said that Mr. Palmer contributed toward the purchase of Brook farm, and, when the community came to an end, the property passed into Mr. Palmer's possession.

To Climb a Tree.

The tree climbers are made from two pieces of wood, each 15 inches long, and 2 inches wide, and 1 inch thick. Three inches from the bottom drive a large nail, about four inches long. The nail is not to be driven into the wood at right angles, but slanting towards the bottom in such a way that the point coming out on the other side can be stuck into the tree. Then strap on your climbers, one on the inside of each leg, as shown in the picture, and climb.



Curious Struggle.

A certain family living in Gera, Germany, and the authorities of the town are involved in a curious struggle. Fifteen years ago a member of the family died, and it was decided to engrave on his tombstone the words, "We shall never see you again, yet will always remember you." This was construed by the police and the ecclesiastical authorities as an open denial of the doctrine of the immortality of the soul and resurrection of the body, and they gave orders to have the words "never" and "yet" plastered over with cement. For fifteen years the family attempted to have the cement removed, and, failing, took the law into their own hands, again exposing the offending words. Again the town authorities plastered over the words, at a cost of 35 cents, and sent a bill for that sum to the family. The latter declined to pay, and are being sued.

Phrase Traced to Milton.

It is claimed by some authorities that Milton was the first to employ the word "intoxicating" in reference to the use of liquors. In his "Tetrachordon," published in 1644, he used it as a then novel derivative from the Latin "toxicum," the poison which was used on arrow points.

MOST BEAUTIFUL MUSIC-STAND

Fairylike Structure in Golden Gate Park, San Francisco.

San Francisco can truthfully boast of having probably the largest, most expensive, and most beautiful music-stand in the world. It is constructed entirely of fine granite, and is located in the famous Golden Gate park. The center, or music-stand proper, consists of a square, towerlike structure rising nearly eighty feet high above the foundation.

Though massively constructed it has a light, airy, and very graceful architectural effect. On the front side is the vast "sounding shell," or concave, over fifty feet in height, under which the musicians sit on a platform capable of accommodating over 100 musicians.

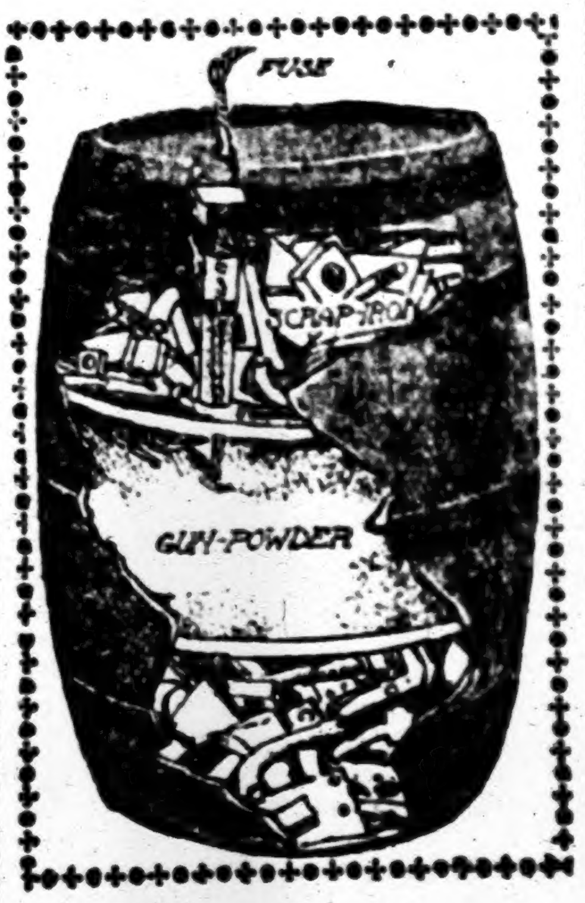
Extending north and south are two long, winglike colonnades, each about 60 feet in length and 45 feet high, and each supported by thirty-two beautiful Corinthian columns 36 inches in diameter at the base and tapering gracefully upward. Leading up to the base of these polished and shapely columns are broad, massive stone steps.

There is not a stick of timber, or bolt or bar of metal, in the entire structure, everything being built of California granite and sandstone. The cost of the structure was $75,000.

MEANT TO KILL MUSIC LOVERS

Infernal Machine Found at Door of New York Tenement.

Hideous and incredible as it seems, this story from New York city is true. A bomb placed in the tenement house at 64 Leroy street, Wednesday of this week, endangering the lives of twenty-five families, was the act of some revengeful person or persons who objected to the singing and piano playing of three Italian girls, in front of whose door the destructive keg of gunpowder had been left.—Chicago American.



Barrel filled with gunpowder and scrap iron, with lighted fuse attached, discovered by a janitor.

Wears Shoes Fifty Years Old.

Mrs. J. A. Livingston of Lima, Miss., claims to be possessed of the oldest pair of shoes still in active service in the United States. The venerable lady is celebrated for having the smallest feet in the state. This fact has enabled Mrs. Livingston to wear the same pair of shoes her father presented to her more than fifty years ago.

It was in 1830 that she received the shoes. Since then she has raised ten children, the youngest now 21 years of age. She still wears the shoes on all occasions.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

When Sailors Wore Earrings.

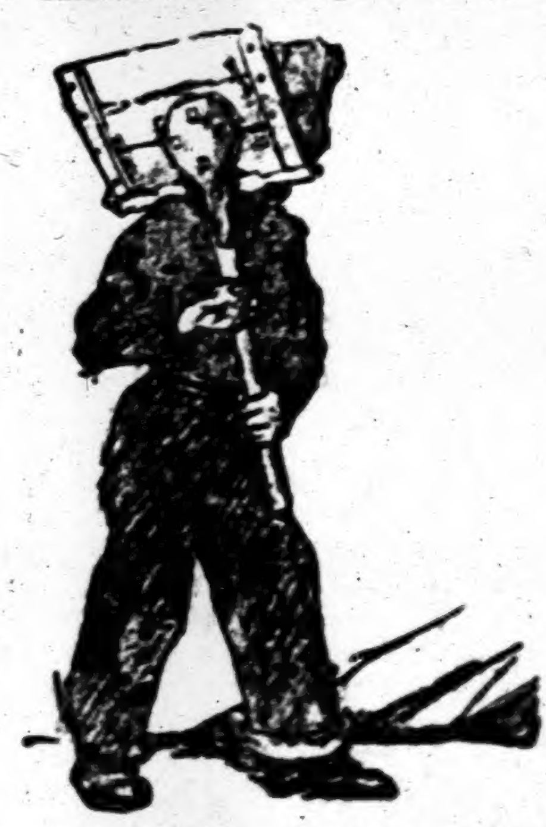
"Sailors don't wear earrings as they used to," said a city ship chandler. "In the past I had a jewelry case and sold earrings of all kinds. Lately I did away with it, for there is now no money in sailors' earrings at all.

"But there used to be. Every salt had his ears pierced and was as proud of his earrings as a lady. For some varieties I got as high as $50 a pair.

"A sailor would never wear precious stones, like diamonds or pearls, in his ears. The only stone he would wear was agate. That was a funny fact, wasn't it?"

Woman Hodcarrier.

The sex of this German hodcarrier is unmistakable, though she wears masculine attire. It is interesting to observe that she holds on to the handle of the hod just as she would hold on to the handle of a broom.



Not Quite "Priceless."

Among the rare pieces which caused hot bidding at a coin sale in New York the other day was an old New Hampshire cent of 1776. This coin is down in the catalogue as "priceless" and "unique." The buyer had to lay down $60.50 to get possession.

HAWTHORN TREE THEIR MASCOT

Scottish Family Fears Disaster With Decline of Relic.

In two notable cases in Britain the family mascot is a tree. The foundation of Cawdor castle, near Nairn, are built round a hawthorn tree, and there is an ancient tradition to the effect that the disappearance of this tree will be a sign that dire misfortunes will shortly overwhelm the family. "Freshness to the hawthorn tree of Cawdor" is consequently the happiest form of felicitation to the Campbells of Cawdor. The tree must be about five hundred years old, according to the most moderate computation, so that there cannot be very much "freshness" about it at the present day, but it still has its roots in the soil and its stem rises through the floor of one of the dungeons, where it may still be seen keeping the ancient legend in countenance.

DOG'S NAME IS IN DIRECTORY

Put Down on the List as "Robert Badgero, Watchman."

"Robert Badgero, watchman, 39 West street," is the way it read in the Utica city directory, and the woman who responded to the bell call told the man at the door that "Bob" was in.

"I'd like to see him," remarked the caller, for he was in search of a watchman for his establishment.

"Here Bob! here Bob!" called the woman, and a lively bull terrier rushed into the hall.

And then the woman laughed, for the Robert Badgero in the directory was none other than "Bob," the mascot of the Utica & Mohawk Valley Railway company, who had been listed in the directory as a "watchman" because that's just what he was.

Bob is probably the only dog on record who has his name in a city directory. He is the property of Milford Badgero, private secretary of General Manager Allen of the street railway. Bob is known by all employes of the line, and is always a welcome passenger, who need pay no fare.

A short time ago Bob went to Rome with the company's claim agent, and became strayed there. When the claim agent reached home Bob was there. He had taken an earlier trolley.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Smallest Known Rose.

This is an exact life size photograph of the smallest rose which has been achieved by the florist's art. Its appropriate name is "Baby Rambler," and in every way it takes first place among the diminutive specimens of floriculture. It seldom grows to a height greater than three inches, and the blossom measures but half an inch in diameter. The rose is owned in Chicago.

Girl Is Hunting a Bachelor.

Miss Anita Westton, West Somerville, Mass., has written to the South Dakota census department asking to be put in communication with some bachelor. She calls attention to a clipping showing the preponderance of men over women in South Dakota, and says:

"It almost takes my breath away to think of all those bachelors out there. Here, it is just the opposite. Now, if the bachelors are really so plentiful, do put me in communication with some of them right away.

"Consider it your duty as a Christian, only please don't infer from this that any man will do."

Census Commissioner Robinson is doing his best.

On Saturday Hon B. B. Comer will address the citizens of Chilton county at Clanton, at 11 a.m., and a big crowd is expected.

LAST week the railroid people apparently had been taking too much Christmas. First, they lost the paper on which to print The Banner, it should have arrived here Wednesday, and when it did not get here by Thursday night, we telegraphed to Birmingham for a fresh supply, but it was Saturday before we could print and mail The Banner—a bad ending of 1905. Let us hope it will always be on time in 1906

Road building is a recognized function of government in every civilized country but ours. No country has ever witnessed systematic road construction except by government aid. Our national experience is ample to justify the declaration that the Sates of the Union will never have systematized road building until the general government leads the way in co operation with the States.

Everybody concedes the necessity for good roads. The Department of Agriculture has figured from carefully gathered statistics that bad roads cost the farmers of the United States $1,500,00 every time the sun goes down. That is a fearful showing. Refusal to relieve this condition is the same to the farmers as if the government should annually come along and confiscate that much of their products, or as if Congress should order it destroyed by other means. We need good roads legislation more than any special thing just now, and we hope the 59th Congress will do justice to the people and either enact the proposed Brownlow-Latimer bill, or some similar measure, into law.

Hats In Korea.

The traveling hat of the monks in Korea is a large, umbrella-like framework of cane, a foot and a half in diameter at the brim and closing to a sharp point at the top. The whole is covered with smooth rush matting, bound at the brim into a hexagon by a narrow edging of white cotton and fitted inside with a circle of cane to clasp the head. Nuns may often be seen trudging along, staff in hand, and their hats are even more striking—a wisp of fine, flexible straw, elaborately bound at one end, cut sharply off at the other, so as to make it a foot long, and quaintly dumped on the crown of the head. The courtiers also have their distinctive hats. They are of huge dimensions, in some cases two or more feet in diameter, and are made of clay.—"Far Eastern Impressions," by E. F. T. Hatch, M. P.

A Fair Exchange.

An original scheme evolved by a certain tobacco merchant to introduce his goods worked to the satisfaction of a physician to whom this dealer sent a box of cigars with a bill for $5 and an explanatory letter, which read:

"Although you have not ordered these cigars, I take the liberty of sending them, feeling sure you will find them excellent."

After the doctor had smoked the cigars, says the Medical Times and Hospital Gazette, he mailed five prescriptions to the tobacconist, with a note, saying:

"Although you have not asked for my professional advice, I take the liberty of sending you these prescriptions, feeling sure you will find them excellent."

TO WEAK WOMEN

Of Clanton and Vicinity, We Make the Following Proposition.

"There are hundreds of women in this vicinity who are dragging themselves through life in pain and misery, without vitality, strength or health," said a member of Upchurch Drug co. "They get no happiness out of life and are just in a condition to be attacked by almost any disease. They need a vitality-making and strength-creating tonic.

"Now at our expense we want to ask every such woman in Clanton to try our cod liver oil preparation, Vinol, which contains in a highly concentrated form all of the medicinal elemenrs of cod liver oil, but no oil or grease. It is delicious to take, creates a healthy appetite, makes pure, rich, red blood and gives strength and vigor to every organ of the body better than any medicine we have ever sold in our store, and when a woman is in poor condition it makes life worth living When we say 'at our expense,' we mean that if the medicine you buy from us and pay for does not benefit you, we will refund every cent paid us for it."

Miss Mary A. Woodward says: "I think Vinol is the best remedy in the world for a weak, tired, worn-out system. I was just in that condition when I commenced to take Vinol. It gave me new life and energy. I feel well, strong and better than I have for years."

"We can only ask Clanton women to try Vinol on our guarantee." Upchurch Drug co.

A Story of False Imprisonment.

One of the strangest of stories of false imprisonment comes from France. A woman was sentenced to imprisonment for life for having caused the death of her husband and brother. The three had lived together at Malaunay, near Rouen, in a cottage, the lower part of which was used as a wine shop. When the woman was sent to prison other people took the wine shop, but the new tenants suffered, the man from fainting fits, his wife from nausea, from which she died. Another couple tried their fortune, but they, too, were overcome by the "spell of the accursed place," as they thought it. They were subject to fainting and loss of memory. At last a scientific examination of the premises was made. Then it was found that adjoining the inn was a lime kiln. In the wall dividing it from the cottage were many fissures, so that whenever lime was burnt monoxide of carbon escaped into the inn. This was the secret of the deaths for which the woman was suffering. She was brought out of prison after six years of servitude.

A Doctor of the Old School.

Father was a doctor, a genuine, hemp sewed, corn fed country physician of the gray haired class of our oldest school. He neither wore kid gloves nor practiced in them. His patients either had to get well or die, with no loitering on the way. He felt the pulse with one hand and poured castor oil with the other.

"Put your trust in castor," was father's creed, and he lived it and administered it.

Castor oil was both his diagnoser and his curer. He gave it any way. If it worked, well and good; if not, he used some other lubricant or else administered liberal doses of more energetic concoctions. There were no milk and water mixtures in his medicine case.

But castor oil first; castor oil, the disease seeking chaser of everything within its reach, and by the great tablespoon it reached about everything.—"Gumption," by N. C. Fowler, Jr.

When Folks Feared Gas.

In the early days of the last century, when illuminating gas was first used in London, timorous people talked of the dangers of suffocation and of explosions to which the gas, which was still imperfectly purified, exposed the citizens. Scientists confirmed these assertions, and the first gasometers erected in London by Samuel Clegg so terrified the people that no workman would venture to light the gas jets which had been placed on Westminster bridge. But Clegg soon overcame this difficulty by lighting a torch and applying it to the burners with his own hands. On another occasion before a committee of the Royal society of London he bored a hole in the gas holder and put a lighted candle to it, to the great alarm of the spectators, but without causing the slightest accident. Gradually the eyes even of the most prejudiced were opened to the truth.

A Feminine Failing.

I was being rowed across a Canadian lake by a party of Indians and was told I must not break the stillness or the spirits of the place would be offended, says a woman writer in the Indiana Farmer. It was a calm, cloudless day, and the canoe sped like an arrow across the smooth waters. Suddenly, when in the middle of the lake, I determined to prove to these simple folk the folly of their belief. So I lifted up my voice in a wild cry that woke every echo of the hills. The Indians were filled with consternation. They uttered no word, but, straining every nerve, rowed on in frowning silence. They reached the shore in safety, and I had triumphed. But the leader of the Indians looked on me in concern.

"The great spirit is merciful," he said. "He knows that the white woman cannot hold her peace."

Wants and Needs.

The moment the monthly salary crosses the bare necessity line, that moment the horizon of wants begins to widen, says Harper's Bazar. For every dollar the salary increases the imagination finds a place for $2, $3, $4 or $5. A great part of the demands existing in the world today are romantic. How shall the imagination be schooled, where shall the line be drawn?

It should be considered a part of morality to live within the income, but on every side there seems to be an attempt to stretch the $1,000 income to a $2,000 scale, the $2,000 income to a $3,000 scale, $3,000 is made to do duty for $5,000 and $5,000 is thinly stretched to the breaking point to stimulate a $10,000 income. With every added dollar the horizon of wants will widen unless the imagination is wisely schooled. Sadly do we need training to draw the line between wants and needs.

Tall Wives, Short Men.

Big men are usually shy and diffident and lacking in self assurance. The woman who appeals to them is usually some sparkling, vivacious, fairylike creature with kittenish ways and roguish glances. The little man, on the contrary, is seldom burdened with humility. He is a being of great aspirations and stupendous ambitions. He believes in himself, which is the reason why he generally can get the woman of his choice to smile upon him. The dainty, Titania-like woman has no charms for him, says Woman's Life. The five foot six or seven man likes a woman to be one or two inches his superior and thoroughly mature. He dreads any trace of the bread and butter schoolgirl. His ideal resembles the strong, heroic women Shakespeare has pictured, full of character and spirit, with a fair spice of temper.

The Penang Patrol Wagon.

Writing of the local patrol wagon the Penang correspondent of the Straits Times, Singapore, says: "It forcibly calls to mind at first sight a four wheeled baker's cart, bar the fact that it is drawn by about the slowest pair of bullocks in the settlement. There is nothing grim at all about it, for it is commanded by a sleepy Malay constable perched on the box; its roof and sides are formed of white canvas, and it has no door to close at the back, but merely an opening in which another Malay constable half slumbers. Two or three other constables ride inside sitting on the benches with the prisoners, who seem to be too struck with novelty of the ride to make any attempt at escape. I should say that an escape from this prison van would be as easy as falling off a log."

Just a Misplaced Comma.

An article on the milk supply of large cities in the British Medical Journal contains this remarkable passage:

"The man having finished milking, his cow offered to take me into an adjoining room where the milk was cooled."

A Similarity.

"He's quite wealthy and prominent now," said Mrs. Starvem, "and they say he rose practically from nothing."

"Well, well!" remarked Mr. Border. "That's just what I rose from—at the breakfast table this morning."

Impoverished Soil

Impoverished soil, like impoverished blood, needs a proper fertilizer. A chemist by analyzing the soil can tell you what fertilizer to use for different products.

If your blood is impoverished your doctor will tell you what you need to fertilize it and give it the rich, red corpuscles that are lacking in it. It may be you need a tonic, but more likely you need a concentrated fat food, and fat is the element lacking in your system.

There is no fat food that is so easily digested and assimilated as

The Preferred.

Dumley—What they call preferred stock is the stock that pays dividends, isn't it? Wiseman—Not at all; but the stock that does pay dividends is always preferred.—Exchange.

Aims of a higher order, even though they be not fulfilled, are more valuable than lower ones entirely fulfilled.—Goethe.

Facts About Cigars.

Few cigar smokers are aware that all cigars are named according to their color and shape. A dead black cigar, for instance, is an "Oscuro," a very dark brown one is a "Colorado Maduro," a dark brown is a "Colorado," a medium brown is a "Colorado Claro," and a yellowish light brown is a "Claro." Most smokers know the names of the shades from "Claro" to "Colorado," and that is as far as most of them need to know. As to the shapes, a "Napoleon," the biggest of all cigars, is seven inches long; a "Perfecto" swells in the middle and tapers down to a very small head at the lighting end; a "Panatela" is a thin, straight up and down cigar without the graceful curve of the "Perfecto;" a "Conchas" is very short and fat, and a "Londres" is shaped like a "Perfecto," except that it does not taper to so small a head at the lighting end. A "Reina Victoria" is a "Londres" that comes packed in a ribbon tied bundle of fifty pieces instead of in the usual four layers of thirteen, twelve, thirteen and twelve.

Boomerang Testimonials.

The oriental point of view is an instructive one, as is shown by the following:

At Allahabad, India, there has just been issued the report of the Hospital For Women, and the Pioneer of that city prints a couple of graceful letters quoted in the report. The first addressed the lady at the head of the institution thus:

Dear She—My wife has returned from your hospital cured. Provided males are allowed at your bungalow, I would like to do you the honor of presenting myself there this afternoon, but I will not try to repay you—vengeance belongeth unto God. Yours noticeably.

The second was in a strain of even more punctilious courtesy. It ran:

Dear and Fair Madam—I have much pleasure to inform you that my dearly unfortunate wife will be no longer under your kind treatment, she having left this world for the other the night of the 27th ult. For your help in this matter I shall ever remain grateful. Yours reverently.

Little Brains.

Help thy brother's boat across, and, lo, thine own has reached the shore!—Hindoo Proverb.

One Phase of Life.

"So they live in the same hotel, eh?"

"Yes; he has a room on the second story."

"And she?"

"Oh, that's another story."—Chicago News.

The saddest part of all our accumulating catastrophes lies in the waiting welcomes that are never claimed.

A Modern Miracle

"Truly miraculous seemed the recovery of Mrs. Mollie Holt of this place," writes J. O. R. Hooper, Woodford, Tenn., "she was so wasted by coughing up puss from her lungs. Doctors declared her end so near that her family had watched by her bed side forty eight hours, when, at my urgent request Dr King's New Discovery was given her, with the astonishing result that improvement began, and continued until she finally completely recovered, and is a healthy woman to-day." Guaranteed cure for coughs and colds. 50c and $1.00 at Upchurch Drug co. Trial bottle free.

Betting on a Sure Thing.

A certain captain in Colombo was an inveterate gambler. He had had such bad luck he determined to go home to his friends in Europe. The night before he was to sail he stayed at a friend's house and the next morning at breakfast remarked apropos of nothing, "What a high table this is!"

"Is it?" said his host carelessly.

"Why, it cannot be less than—yes, I should say it was quite thirty inches. Bet you what you like it's thirty inches."

"I thought you had given up betting."

"This is my last bet in Ceylon. Shan't have another chance."

"As you like."

A measure was brought and the height ascertained. It was found to be twenty-nine inches exactly.

"I've lost," said the captain ruefully, "yet I would have sworn it was thirty inches."

"I know you would. Shall I tell you why? When I was shaving this morning my bedroom door was open. I saw your reflection in the glass. You were measuring the height, and, knowing what was to follow, I took the precaution while you were out for a stroll of having an inch sawed off the legs!"

No Dissection In Jersey.

In many states the law assumes if a dead man has no friends to bury him there will be no objection made if the body is dissected. For this reason all unclaimed bodies are given to medical colleges. Although there are more than 150 medical colleges in the United States, not one is in operation in New Jersey because dissection of the human body is prohibited by law in that state.

The brunette, with a sweet, clear laugh, replied:

N INTEREST IN RELIGION

It Seems to Be the Most Absorbing Topic in the World.

ESPECIALLY THE CASE IN ENGLAND AND AMERICA.

RELIGIOUS congresses of all shades of opinion have as a constant subject for discussion the difficulty of attracting people to church, the secularization of Sunday, and the alleged general tendency to disregard the claims of religion. Statistics apparently support the pessimists, and yet it is extraordinary how largely the leaders of religion loom in the general life of the community, and how persistent is the public interest in their doings.

The columns of the newspapers during the past week are a curiously striking proof of these facts. Putting aside the Anglo-Japanese treaty and the tragedy at Merstham, a large proportion of the most interesting portion of the contents of the morning paper has been intimately connected with religion.

General Booth's emigration scheme still fills columns and is discussed by men in railway trains, by women at "at homes," and even by the omnibus driver, who always focusses what is really of public interest. There can be no question that next to King Edward, General Booth is the most popular man in the country.

Every one wants to know what he is planning and what he is thinking. Where Mr. Balfour and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman have their thousands of interested readers, General Booth has his tens of thousands. This may be largely due to the force of a wonderful personality, but is undoubtedly also to be traced to the perennial interest in religion.

"HYMNS, ANCIENT AND MODERN."

The new edition of "Hymns Ancient and Modern" is an even more striking example, because here there is no collateral personal element to be considered. The space given in the secular press to the omissions and substitutions in the popular church hymnal proves how keenly the public mind was stirred by the changing, to quote one instance, of the lines of "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing."

Whether or not one goes to church regularly, these hymns are a part of the national life, and to lay hands upon them is to interfere with old, familiar friends. And, accordingly, the subject was of immense interest to thousands of persons who are not numbered among regular churchgoers.

It is safe to say that if an enterprising publisher proposed to issue a rewritten "Pickwick," an abridged "Vanity Fair," or a Bowdlerized "Hamlet," he might irritate to madness the literary purist, but would leave the man in the street and the man driving the omnibus entirely indifferent. But a hymn book is another matter.

Among the other interesting topics of the past few days one recalls at once the parson on the stage at Peckham, the Bible play at the Coliseum, the Rev. Mr. Carlile's Church Army emigration scheme, the Bishop of London in the witness box, and the Archbishop of Canterbury's idea for a school of theology for women.

ONLY A PARSON IMPORTANT.

Had a lawyer appeared for one night only at the Crown Theatre, Peckham, or a politician, or even a labor leader, no one would bother; but a parson on the stage is at once of real interest. Some people might applaud the ingenuity of the advertisement, others might deplore it, but every one talked about it.

And so with the Bible story of Joseph at the Coliseum. Dramatize a story from any book in the world, and it is a matter that concerns dramatic critics and ardent playgoers, but the Bible is regarded as a book apart even by persons who rarely read it, and to use its characters in a dumb play is to make a daring innovation that arouses endless discussion and causes sharp divergence of opinion.

Perhaps England and America are more constantly interested in matters pertaining to religion than are any other countries. Here the Welsh mission of Mr. Evan Roberts was regarded as an event of the first national importance. In America millionaires conduct Bible classes, and every new religion (and they occur frequently) is sure of wide publicity and discussion.

But the importance of religion and the religious leader is not confined to the Anglo-Saxon race. In France, in Belgium, in Germany, in Austria, the "clericals" are an important factor in politics, and their attitude to the church the most vital part of the programme of every political party. In Italy, the division between the whites and the blacks still continues, even under the benign rule of Pius X. In Ireland, the parish priest is the trusted leader of his flock in matters mundane.

THE GREAT DIVIDER.

Indeed, all over the continent, men are either devoted to religion or antagonistic to it. No one ignores it, no one can forget it. It may be regarded as good or as evil, but it is real, a thousand times more vital today in the days of wireless telegraphy and motor cars than ever before.

In Republican France there are vast pilgrimages to Lourdes; in Germany there is a versatile Emperor who preaches sermons; in free England bishops join Salvation captains and preach on the sands.

The Jesuit is still surrounded with a mythical reputation that almost causes his opponent to shudder, and the many dreadful struggles that have been caused in the world by religious differences have had a repetition during the last few weeks in Baku and the Caucasus.

It is said, probably with some truth, that the Nonconformists, organized, be it remembered, on a very definite theological basis, hold the next general election in the hollow of their hand, and, anyhow, they have the statue of Oliver Cromwell outside Westminster Hall to remind them of the political power they once wielded.

Meanwhile the columns of the Times are filled with a technical correspondence on liturgical vestments, and no one forgets the intense excitement in Scotland that was caused recently by the decision in the church case in the House of Lords.—London Express.

KING HAAKON VI.

The Story of Norway's Rulers of Years Gone By.

It is commonly reported that if Prince Charles of Denmark becomes the ruler of Norway he will assume the title of King Haakon VI. Thereby hangs a tale from Norway's history.

The last King Norway had as an independent kingdom was Haakon V. He flourished in the fourteenth century. He was known by the somewhat undignified nickname of "Longlegs," but nearly all the rulers of his day had some sort of adjective or noun prefixed or affixed to their names, so there was no reason why the feelings of Haakon should be hurt by "Longlegs." In fact, there were many nicknames far worse, like that of Harold Bluetooth, of Denmark, or Erik Bloodaxe, or Haakon the Sleepy, a kinsman of "Longlegs." Haakon's reign was one continuous war with Denmark. Finally, in 1319, the king's life came to a close. So did the life of Norway as a separate and independent nation, for his daughter—he left no male heir to succeed to the throne—married Erik, son of King Birgersson, of Sweden, and carried the kingdom along with her into alien hands.

From that blessed day to this Norway has been ruled by some other nation's king. Now once more the country becomes a free and distinct Government, and so the prospective king harks back to the old period of Norway's independence and revives the name of the last King.—Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal.

Carl Schurz's First Editor.

At prose, too, I tried my hand. Once after having written a composition on Schiller's "Maid of Orleans," which struck me as especially good, I found it difficult to resist the ambitious desire of seeing myself in print. I made a clean copy of the composition and carried it to the office of the Cologne Gazette, with a letter addressed to Levin Schucking, a well-known novelist of the time and the literary editor of that great journal. In my letter I begged the privilege of a personal interview. A courteous answer fixed the day and hour of my visit, and soon I stood, with loud heart beats, at the great man's door, who, so I believed, held my literary future in the hollow of his hand. I found in him an amiable gentleman, with pleasant features and large blue benevolent eyes. He received me very kindly, talked upon a variety of subjects, and finally returned my manuscript to me with the remark that it contained much that was excellent, but that I would do well to regard it only as a "study." I departed completely crushed with disappointment and mortification; but after all I lived to become sincerely grateful to good Mr. Schucking for his timely counsel. Much that I have since written has, in pursuance of his sound advice, been quietly treated as a "study" by myself.—From "Reminiscences of a Long Life," by Carl Schurz, in McClure's.

Wasted His Sarcasm.

The man had business which detained him for a few days in a small town, and finding himself in need of new insoles he sought the local shoe shop.

"I wish to buy a pair of insoles for number eight double A shoes," he said to the clerk, and flattered himself that he had stated his needs successfully.

The clerk contemplated him with the mild gaze of the provincial and asked:

"Do you wish to wear them in your shoes?"

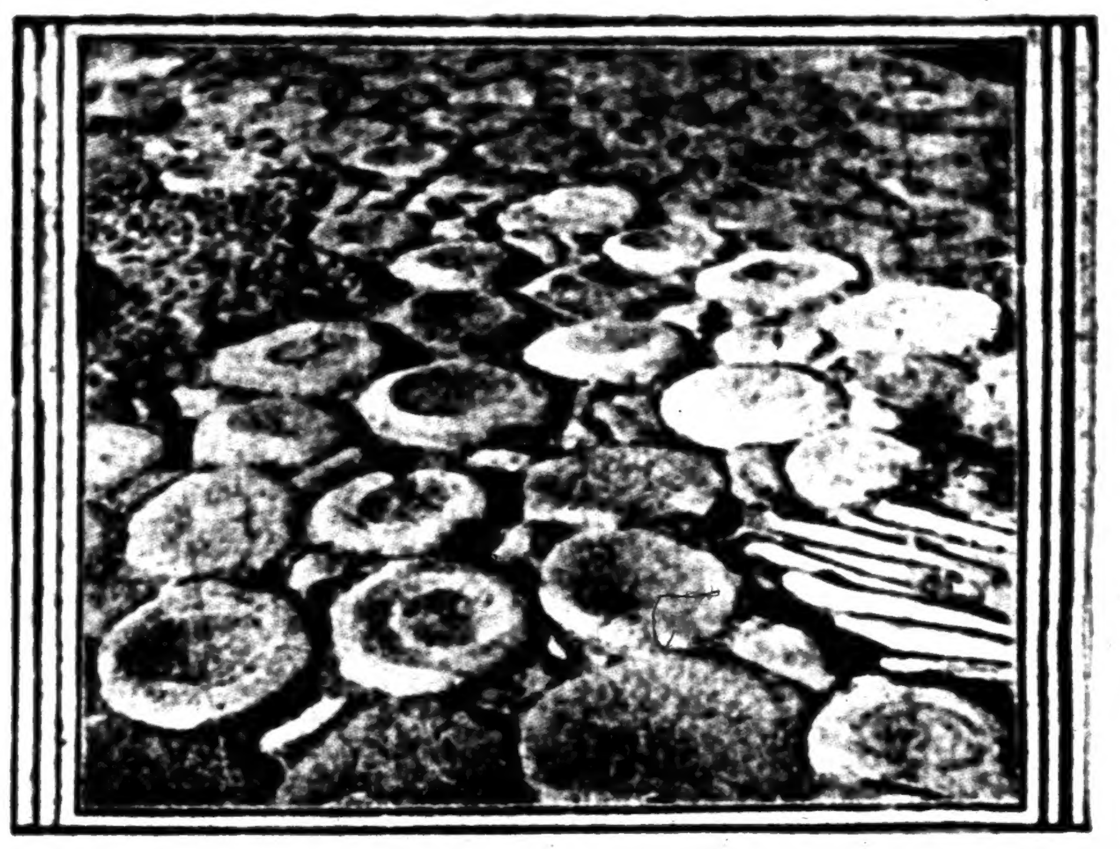
"No," said the New York man, with guarded thoughtfulness, "I was thinking of having filet of sole for my luncheon;" and when he left the shop the clerk was still batting his eyes.—New York Press.

Women's Clubs.

The number of women's clubs in London at the present time is far in excess of the demand, and the management of these clubs, with the exception of the few which are under the control of mere man, demand from their unfortunate victims submission to a series of petty discomforts which would be sufficient to close the doors of any man's club within six weeks.—New Album.

A PAVEMENT OF WHALES' BONES

BY ARTHUR INKERSLEY.

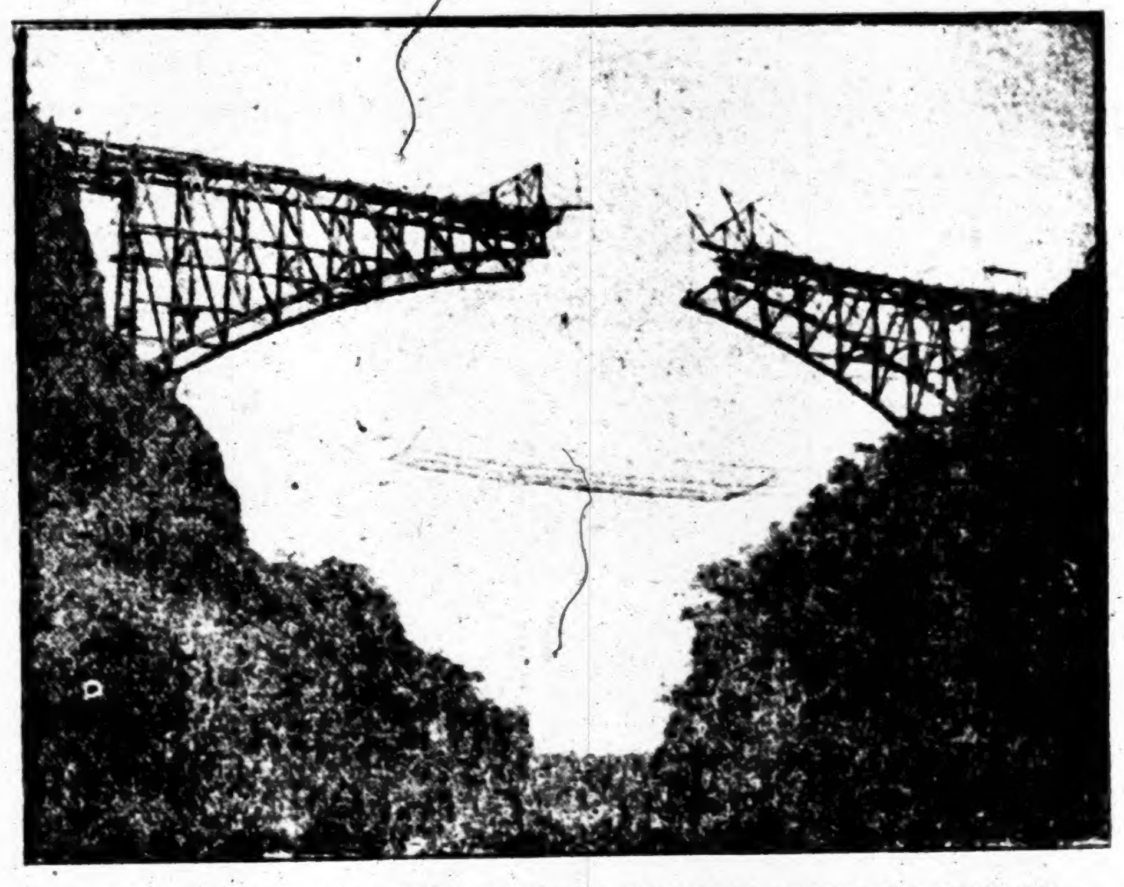


One of the most picturesque towns in California or on the Pacific Slope is Monterey. Historically, it is the most interesting town in the Western States. It was the capital of Alta, California, where the Spanish held sway in the days "before the Gringo came." Father Junipero Serra landed at Monterey, which is on the bay of the same name, on June 3, 1770, more than six years before the signing of the Declaration of Independence. The missionary priest preached to the Indians and founded the mission church of San Carlos, which is still in excellent preservation. Many relics of Spanish rule are to be seen at Monterey, such as the old custom house, the jail, etc.

Besides being the capital of the Spanish province, Monterey was an important whaling station, many of those great mammals being found in Monterey Bay. The walk leading from the street to the main door of San Carlos mission church is paved with the vertebrae and other bones of whales. The accompanying photograph, made at the end of August last, shows the composition and present condition of this remarkable pavement.—Scientific American.

THE ZAMBESI RIVER BRIDGE, VICTORIA FALLS, RHODESIA.

The great steel arch bridge designed to carry the northern extension of the Rhodesia Railways across the gorge of the Zambesi River just below the famous Victoria Falls in South Africa, was opened to traffic on Sept. 2, 1905. The 500-foot span of the Zambesi arch ranks it among the large steel arch bridges of the world. To this feature of interest is added the novelty that the bridge was erected thousands of miles from its place of manufacture and in a part of the world which not many years ago had been reached only by a few intrepid explorers.



VIEW OF ZAMBESI ARCH BRIDGE DURING ERECTION.

A PIPE-ARCH BRIDGE.

An engineering curiosity, said to be unique in this country, and to have but one parallel example in Europe, is the pipe-arch bridge over the Sudbury River, which carries Boston's water supply. The span is eighty feet, and the steel pipe, seven and one-half feet in diameter, rises five and one-half feet above the horizontal at the centre. The pressure on the abutments when the pipe is filled with water is very great, and is resisted by a mass of concrete forty feet thick behind each abutment. Across the curved top runs a hand-railed foot-bridge. The steel of the pipe in the arched portion is five-eighths of an inch in thickness.

Hunting and Rest Cure.

Several young married women, ticketed as "smart," have adopted a simple form of rest cure, which they practice when settled in their winter hunting quarters. After a hard day's run (and they often hunt five times a week) they ride home, have tea and a bath, go straight to bed, and eat their dinners safely tucked up in their "downies." This means rest and sleep for perhaps fourteen hours.—London Ladies' Field.

WORKS OF ART THIRTY-FIVE CENTURIES OLD.

In 1897 the French Government established a special archeological mission at Susa, in Persia. The mission was under the control of M. de Morgan, the former director general of antiquities in Egypt, and the Government has allowed $20,000 per year for expenses. Recently the results so far obtained were placed on exhibition in the Louvre, and a writer in the Illustration, of Paris, describes them as follows: "The chief feature of the collection is a bronze statue of Napir Ason, the wife of King Ountach Gal, who lived some 3500 years ago. This statue was presented by the king to his wife, and it has remained for centuries buried at a depth of sixty feet in the ruins of the acropolis of Susa. During the past year the laborers employed in the excavation brought the statue to light. The figure was intact, but the head was missing. However, as only some 280,000 cubic meters have been excavated up to the present of the 1,220,000 cubic meters which represent the area of the acropolis, it is only reasonable to suppose that the head will eventually be found. On the base of the statue are carved the names of the queen, and behind her are two enameled lions which went through the fire of the kiln at least 2000 years before Christ.

"In addition to the statue the Hamurabi code was found carved in granite. This stone is of great value, since it gives us the civil code of the Chaldeans 2000 years before our own era. Further, the commission has found 'Koudourous' or property deeds engraved on stone which are 5000 years old, bronze vases, magnificently chased and dating back 5000 years before the Christian era, and other relics of a past age which are of immeasurable value."

Glass Umbrellas.

The latest adjunct to glass novelties is the glass umbrella, which is covered with "silk" spun from glass. These umbrellas, of course, will afford no protection from the rays of the sun; but they possess one obvious advantage—namely, that they can be held in front of the face when meeting the wind and rain, and at the same time the user will be able to see that he does not run into unoffending individuals or lamp-posts.—Chicago Journal.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. EDWARD NILES.

Subject: Godliness in Form.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rev. Edward Niles preached at the White Church Sunday evening from II Timothy iii:5: "Holding a form of godliness, but having denied the power thereof." He said:

That "distance lends enchantment to the view" is true of time as well as space. The older we grow the more immaculate appear the imagined days of youth. Christian believers are purer in our eyes in proportion to the number of centuries that intervene. Within the covers of every volume of sermons, whether written in one age or another, are the well nigh certain jeremiads over "these times of extreme worldliness, unequaled love of money, peculiar indifference to spiritual things," followed by laudations of the apostolic age as the golden era of Christianity.

A reconstruction of conditions existing in those New Testament churches from materials afforded us in the epistles, warrant no such assumption. Heresies then were rampant, inconsistent lives numerous, backsliders distressingly frequent. The things of sense made cogent appeal. The husks of the gospel often satisfied to the disregard of its kernel. Paul's description of "the last days" was based upon facts about him. As he penned the sentence of our text, he probably had in mind fellow communicants who held the form of godliness, but denied the power thereof.

Since then outward changes have been many, kingdoms have come and gone, languages have died and been born, church order and ritual been metamorphosed. Human nature is unaffected by time or clime. So the New Testament is not a graveyard, with epitaphs of only antiquarian interest, but is photographic of contemporary heart throbs.

In our Borough of Brooklyn are 156,679 people holding to the Protestant form of godliness. While statistics are unable to figure out how many hold to the Protestant power thereof, if form and power were identical not one of the buildings where divine worship is being held to-night would have a vacant seat and every theatre and hall would be utilized for overflow meetings.

The original of "deny" has as its root meaning "not to seek." "Holding a form of godliness, they have not sought for its power." The world has much to say about hypocrites. I believe the outcry against them is out of all proportion to their numbers. The conscious hypocrite to-day is a rare bird. I have made frequent hunts for him. Despite the most diligent search, I have seldom found him.

The number of those called hypocrites, who would rightly be catalogued as formalists, is legion. They are not striving to deceive others. They succeed in their striving to deceive themselves. Satisfied with the appurtenances, the trappings of godliness, they inquire no further. Attendants upon the services of the church, members of it, supporters of its outward activities, they fancy themselves to be godly. Branded as Christians, they but feebly apprehend what disrepute they bring upon the name by their inferiority to the real article. Their gullibility is wrongly taken for hypocrisy. They submit to the drudgery of religion to pacify troublesome consciences and impose upon themselves.

An important reason for so many lapses from church membership is because so many become dissatisfied with a form, yet fail to seek the reality, so give up all.

Almost every one in this congregation has a form of godliness. You look good. I find little to criticise in what you do, for there is so little you do on which to base a criticism. The trouble lies in what you do not. You may have called me here to predigest your spiritual food, to relieve you from first-hand study of the Bible, to represent your church not only in classis but in the tenement, to be your proxy in heart to heart work for souls, your substitute when the battle is on between good and evil, while you go your business and household ways during the week and on Sunday enjoy your cushioned pews, criticise the sermon and singing.

The Lord never called me to any like task. If there has been any such tacit agreement I now repudiate it. I am called of God to point out the forms of godliness as means of obtaining its power.

The imperative needs of our inventive age have almost bodily transferred to our language the Greek here rendered "power," in the word dynamo. I believe in forms, just as the railroad engineer believes in the third rail, as he believes in the elevated structure on the Williamsburg Bridge. But the mass of iron is a senseless eyesore until it is connected with the main line. Even then it is useless until related to the power house, until the power, the fire-fed dynamo, sends forth the electric current, enabling the cars to carry thousands of wage-earners to and from their places of everyday toil. What private concern would be so insane as to sink for two years such a wealth of money in an enterprise for accumulating rust?

The forms of religion are essential as preliminaries to the accessories of power. Churches, ministers, Bibles were instituted and have been perpetuated because divinely ordained and humanly tested to be good for making the kingdom of heaven "go" upon earth. In themselves, they have no value. The power of godliness generated in Christian lives must electrify them or they are encumbrances.

You are commissioned to lead others to Christ. Your commission gives you "power to act." Are you availing yourself of that privilege? I find no verse in the Scripture which reads "Be good and you will be a Christian." I find reiterated, over and over, "Do good."

Christianity is not colorlessness. It has no minus sign. It is ever positive. A negative being is peculiarly abhorrent to Him whose biography is epitomized by "He went about doing good." "I would thou wert either cold or hot" is His message to such torpid professors. "Because thou art lukewarm, I will spew thee out of My mouth." California's Oldest Building.

A tablet has been placed on the old Hispano-Mexican customs house at Monterey by the Landmarks Club. This is the oldest building in California, except the missions. It is a very interesting relic, as it has served as the recpient of customs for three nations. The customs house was built soon after the foundation of the Pueblo in 1722. A galleon came once a year from Spain with supplies for the colonists, who, it seems, could not gain a support in this fertile land of varied resources. The galleons from the Philippines, laden with gold plundered from the natives, touched at Monterey, and pirates laid off the California coast waiting for the treasure ships. In 1818 the bold Bouchard landed at Monterey, plundered the mission, burned the town, took all the treasure in the customs house and sailed away. The old customs house was the only building left standing except the mission. When Mexico gained its independence in 1821 the broad banner of Spain was lowered and that of Mexico was hoisted, to be in turn displaced by the "Star-Spangled Banner" in 1846.

The Natalie, which was the brig in which Napoleon escaped from Elba, was wrecked off Monterey. Some of the timbers are still to be seen on the beach. At the customs house was also landed the printing press upon which was printed the first newspaper in California.

In Norway much progress has been made in the use of air-tight cooking boxes, in which food that has been thoroughly heated continues to simmer till it is cooked. In Germany progress is slow. Cooks are proverbially conservative and do not seem to understand how the same feathers and wool that keep people's bodies warm can prevent the escape of heat stored in food by previous exposure to fire.

It is said that 7,700 wives were deserted by their husbands in New York last year.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JANUARY 7.

Subject: The Shepherds Find Jesus, Luke ii., 1-20—Golden Text, Luke ii., 11—Memory Verses, 13, 14—Topic: The Savior Revealed to Man—Commentary.

I. The birth of Christ (vs. 1-7). 1. "In those days." After the birth of John and before the birth of Jesus. "Caesar Augustus." The first of the Roman emperors. "All the world." All of the Roman world. At that time the Roman empire extended further than ever before, or than it has since, and was called "the empire of the whole earth." "Taxed." Enrolled. 2. "First made." There must have been two enrolments. "Cyrenius." This is the Greek form of Quirinus or Quirinius. 3. "Into his own city." The Roman custom was to enrol persons at the place of residence, but the Jewish custom required the enrolment to take place in the native city. 4. "Went up." From Galilee to the much more elevated region of Bethlehem. "City of David." Where David was born. 5. "With Mary." It is uncertain whether her presence was obligatory or voluntary, but it is obvious that, after what she had suffered (Matt. 1:19), she chose to cling to the presence and protection of her husband. "Espoused wife." Better, "who was betrothed to him." R. V. 6. "While—there." Caesar Augustus was but an instrument in the hand of providence to fulfil the prophecy of Micah. 7. "Her first-born son." That excellent and glorious person, who was the first-born of every creature, and the heir of all things; whom all the first-born in the Old Testament prefigured; whom the angels adore (Heb. 1:6); and in whom those that believe become the first-born and the first-fruits of God's creatures. "Swaddling clothes." Strips of cloth; these were wound around the infant. "In a manger." It seems clear from the text that the manger was not in the inn, hence there is good reason to believe, with Dr. Thompson, that the birth actually took place in an ordinary house of some common peasant, and that the babe was laid in one of the mangers, such as are still found in the dwellings of the farmers.

II. The angelic message (vs. 8-14). 8. "Same country." Near to Bethlehem. "Shepherds." The announcement was not made to rulers or priests but to humble men who were ready to receive the glad news. "In the field." They undoubtedly had tents or booths under which they dwelt. "Keeping watch—by night." Or, "keeping night-watches." R. V., margin. They watched by turns, against wild beasts and robbers. The fact that the shepherds were in the fields affords no ground for concluding that the nativity could not have taken place in the winter. The average temperature at Jerusalem for five years was, in December, fifty-four degrees. 9. "Angel." Divine messenger. "Came upon them." Stood over them. "Glory of the Lord." That extreme splendor in which the deity is represented as appearing to men, and sometimes called the Shechinah — an appearance frequently attended, as in this case, by a company of angels. "Sore afraid." Terrified with the appearance of so glorious a being.

10. "Good tidings." The literal meaning of "gospel." I am come to declare the loving kindness of the Lord. My message will cause great joy. It is a message to "you" (Jews) first, and it also reaches to "all the people" (R. V.), to the whole human race. See Gen. 12:3; Matt. 28:19; Luke 2:28-32; 24:46, 47; Col. 1:21-23. 11. "Is born." Isa. 9:6; John 1:14. "David's greater Son begins His earthly career in His ancestor's home. Seven hundred years before a prophet had predicted the Messiah's birth at Bethlehem" (Micah 5:2). "A Saviour." 1. A deliverer. 2. A restorer. 3. A preserver. See Matt. 1:21. "Not, 'shall be' a Saviour, but 'born' a Saviour." "Christ." The Anointed One.

12. "A sign." The very thing that would have caused them to doubt was made the sign unto them. "Any fear as to whether they may approach the new-born King and offer Him their homage is dispelled by the intimation of His lowly condition while their carnal views of the nature of His kingdom are thereby counteracted." 13. "A multitude." They descended to honor the Prince of Peace. "Heavenly host." The army of angels.

14. "Glory to God." Christ was the highest expression of God's glory. "In the highest." 1. In the highest strains. 2. In the highest heavens. 3. In the highest degree. "On earth peace." Peace with God; peace to man; peace of conscience. "Good will." God has shown His good will by sending the Messiah. "Toward men." We should show good will both to God and man.

III. The visit of the shepherds (vs. 15-20).

15. "Let us now go." There is no time to lose. Let us go now. "This is the language of obedience, desiring to receive assurance and strength," by seeing for themselves "this thing which is to come to pass." 16. "With haste." Filled and thrilled with holy joy that could not linger. "And found." It is probable that by communicating their experiences to one another their faith was increased.

17. "Made known abroad." As soon as they had seen the child they began to tell the glad news to every one they met. They were true preachers of the gospel. 18. "Wondered." The story of Jesus is the most wonderful story to which human ears ever listened, and it still causes those who hear it to wonder. 19. "Pondered them." Weighing or carefully considering them. Every circumstance was treasured up in her memory. 20. "Glorifying and praising." These simple men returned to the care of their flocks giving glory to God for all they had seen.

REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature,"—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

The Story of a Brook.

To lovers of outdoors there are few things in the wide world which are more enchanting, more altogether delighting, than just such a brook, whose course—whose life, so to speak—I have been trying to bring to the mind of those who know all its turns and whims and caprices in summer and in winter, in spring and in autumn, when much rain had maddened it and when none had caused it to shrink into a warped thing of nature without form and void. We may be hundreds of miles from the brook which we know best, but we know it is flowing just as it used to do, and there is ever the thought that if we cannot see it in its daily moods there are others who may do so. And, no matter the name of the peaceful valley through which it flowed or where that valley may be, it was the brook of our childhood, and there is a brook, or ought to be, away back somewhere in the mind of every one whose heart and memory take him back to the scenes where at least some younger days were spent.—Outdoors.

His Money All In Stocks.

"There's money in stocks," said the man who is young and enthusiastic.

"Yes," replied his seasoned friend, "I'm sure there is. I have been putting half my salary there for the last four years, and it's all there yet."

A Dinner.

The bosom of a mallard duck stewed down until there are no juices going to waste, a baked potato about the size of a goose egg, two slices of Boston brown bread right out of the oven and spread with butter that has no athletic reputation, a spoonful of raspberry jelly, a cupful of Young Hyson of moderate strength, a piece of pumpkin pie, man's size, and you have a dinner that ought to keep you in a good humor until curfew rings.—Nebraska State Journal.

The Black Watch.

The title of "Black Watch" conferred on the Forty-second regiment, now the Royal highlanders, originated in the time of the Jacobite risings in Scotland in 1730, when companies of the loyal clans were set to watch the highlands, forming a corps of military police under the title of the Royal Highland Black Watch, the color having reference to the dark tartan worn by the men.—London Standard.

He Didn't Say It.

"There was a queer thing about that reformer's speech the other evening."

"I thought it was a pretty good talk."

"It was. Original too. He didn't once say 'When the people rise in their might.'"—Chicago Record-Herald

God's Will Be Done.

The death angel of heaven called at the home of Mr. William Jones on the 3d of January, 1906, and took away the sweet little suffering baby whom they all loved so well It has gone to heaven where its sufferings are no more. The little body was laid away at Big Spring to await the great judgment day. The burial services were conducted by Rev. Charley Hill. The best words to the bereaved family is to trust in God and learn His will and do it and the balance will be added unto them, and the day will come when they can go to meet the little one who is at rest. Billingsley.

In memory of our much esteemed brother, W. H. Hand, whom the Lord called from our midst about 1:30 a.m., December 30, 1905, at the home of his son, J. W. Hand, at Calera,

We have been acquainted with our deceased brother for a period of 20 years, and we desire to say his life was one well spent in the service of his Master. Brother Hand was born Oct. 31, 1838; age 67 years. He lived a consistent member of the Baptist church for 50 years. To know Bro. Hand was to love him, for his pleasant manner and his religious conversations, so void of offense, void of strife, ever ready to make peace in time of strife. But alas, the Lord in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to call him from our midst, and now we have to battle along through life, through strife and conflicts without him. But oh, what a loss, what a disappointment to the bereaved family. They are made to wonder why the Lord should so suddenly, so unexpectedly, call him from their midst. We pray God's blessings upon the bereaved family and may they truly realize that they to are fast pasengers from time to eternity, and that they must soon answer the summons of death. And grant, our Father, that they may follow the example given them by their deceased father; that in that critical hour of death they may fear no evil.

After a careful survey of the modern bridegroom, the depressing conclusion is forced upon one that no man is too hideous, to old, too effete, too stupid, too generally appalling, to find a wife. The worst of it is that they find such charming ones, thinks the Ladies' Field.

It is said that the people of Russia are too ignorant for self-government, but there appear to be a number of them who know how to manage a campaign so as to quickly bring the most powerful autocracy the world has ever known to its knees, the Dallas News observes.

There are so many nice girls named Ida that the Idaho is bound to be a popular ship among the tars. In time of war, thinks the Philadelphia Record, they will be particularly solicitous about the dear thing, and will go into a hot fight with the battle cry: "Who dares to hurt our Ida, ho!"

The Mikado is giving warm encouragement to the introduction of football in Japan. The Jap soldiers, inured to the strenuosity of war, might be a menace to the civil life of Japan if they were not given an outlet of this kind for their surplus energy. Football should make the transition from war to peace easy, concludes the Atlanta Constitution.

There are men who love dollars simply for the sound of their jingle, and others who seek riches simply for the power they bring, but the great mass of these who are trying to roll up fortunes are in pursuit of the social privileges that wealth affords. If it were plain to all these last that stolen money was a bar, not a hoist; that to be a thief was to forfeit one's chance to enter the coveted circles, then the real remedy for the rot that has spread so wide would be at hand. But, sadly concludes the Hartford Courant, there are precious few signs of any such sentiment.

The notion still lurks in some quarters that there are college men who are interested in other things than football; that somewhere in unregarded corners may be hiding students who are not adequately represented by half-page portraits of fierce fullbacks and mountainous centres. Such a class does exist, continues the New York Evening Post in a more serious vein, and while there is life in it, there is hope for the future of our colleges. What its interests are, what it studies, what it reads, what it thinks, may reasonably claim consideration, even though it be a mere concern to education.

It seems somewhat surprising at first to find a lower degree of illiteracy among the children of foreign-born parents than among the children of native parents, relates the Scientific American. For the former the proportion of illiteracy is 8.8 per 1000, for the latter 44.1 per 1000. This difference, however, does not prove that immigrants are more anxious than natives to secure for their children the advantages of an elementary education. It is explainable by the fact that the foreign-born are concentrated in the larger cities to a much greater extent than the native population. Comparison for individual cities indicates that there is little difference in illiteracy between the two classes of children living in the same community. But such differences as can be detected are usually in favor of the children of native parents.

"Exit" signs in the Boston subway have come down and plain Saxon "Out" signs have been put in their places, states the Rochester Democrat. It was discovered that the Latin immigrants coming to this country didn't know what the Latin "Exit" meant. Only Boston high-school culture was equal to it. The New York Mail quotes from the park signs the following elegant phrase: "The public is requested to deposit all refuse in the receptacle provided." As a substitute for that the Mail suggests this: "Put rubbish in the tub." Everybody who can read English will understand that. It is gratifying to discover, as the Mail also notices, that in place of "Gentlemen" (or worse, that abomination, "Gents") and "Ladies" over the waiting rooms in railway stations one now sees the straight, honest words "Men" and "Women." Good, plain Saxon is good enough for anybody in this country.

INSANE WOMAN

Naked and Crazy Forced to do Bidding of Fire Bugs.

MAN DIRECTED THE ACTION.

Strange Pair Overseen by Tenant Who Raised an Alarm, the Real Criminal Escaping.

New York.—A naked and insane woman, directed by a man warmly clad and wearing an overcoat, was detected applying a torch to the hallway of a five-story tenement house in Eldridge street about daybreak Saturday. The strange pair fled when discovered, but the woman was captured. She said her name is Helen Brauer, and that she is housekeeper of the building she was trying to set fire to, but no one there knew her. One of the tenants of the building was awakened by the noise the pair made and discovered them in the hall. The woman wore nothing but a stocking. She was shivering in the cold.

The man stood over her and she shrank from him as if afraid. In the woman's hand was a torch made of rags and inflammable stuff and saturated with kerosene. The woman stuck the torch into the gas blaze and as it caught fire she fell to her knees and began feeling her way about the hall, rubbing the blazing torch against the wall and wainscoating, which were saturated with oil.

All the time the woman mumbled like a crazy person. She was directed by the mysterious man.

Seeing that there was danger of burning the building the watching tenant called for help, and when the other tenants came rushing from their apartments, the man and woman started to run for the roof. The man got away but one of the tenants tripped the woman. When she was questioned, she returned a blank stare, but finally gave the name of Helen Brauer and said she was thirty-three years of age. She looked very old and was covered with filth, her hair was tangled and her cheeks were sunken. She was taken to Bellevue hospital.

She did not disclose the name of the man, but it is suspected they have been connected with other incendiary fires. They had not succeeded in setting fire to the hallway this time.

Traffic in White Girl Slaves.

Vancouver, B. C.—The following is an extract from a report made to the government regarding the slave trade among British Columbians, the report being signed by C. J. South, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society:

"Girls with white skins, thick brown hair braided down their back, big innocent childish eyes, are being sold today and have been sold for years in British Columbia to the highest bidders.

"The slave masters are the Cape Mudge Indians. The slaves are white because their grandmothers were sold before to white men and when their grandmothers wandered back to the tribe, deserted and abandoned, they brought baby girls with them and in course of time the male relatives of these abandoned creatures sold these baby girls, too, when they grew up to young girlhood.

"Dealers have created a market which is constantly growing and the demand has become so great that other markets have been sought and it is reported that Rockbay Indians are engaging in this awful industry."

No Indemnity to Be Paid.

St. Petersburg—Referring to the demands made by foreigners for indemnity as the result of damages sustained by foreign property during the riots in Russia, the foreign office says that in case of riots, as in the case of civil war, military necessity governs the situation, and foreigners have to take their chances with the native population.

The officials instanced the revolution in Poland in 1863, and the Paris commune, and pointed out that the issue could not be compared with the Chinese or Turkish riots which were directed against the foreign inhabitants of China and Turkey.

Big Panic Coming.

New York—Unless there is currency reform a panic beside which former panics will seem insignificant, was predicted by Jacob H. Schiff, head of the banking firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., in a speech before the New York chamber of commerce.

Mr. Schiff said he did not regard such a panic as imminent, but believed it will come unless something is done to remedy the lack of elasticity of the present currency sustem.

Sane Enough to Break Jail.

Greenville, Ala.—Five prisoners escaped from jail early Saturday morning between midnight and day.

A young negro of unsound mind was confined in the corridor, awaiting the time to be sent to the asylum. He used a piece of iron pipe and broke the lock of the upper cell, liberating four negroes who were awaiting trial for horse stealing, burglary and wife beating.

CHINESE AFFAIRS CRITICAL.

More Troops to Be Sent.—Uprising May Surpass Boxer Movement.

Washington.—The internal affairs of China are regarded here as critical. It is the confident belief that an uprising of the people may be expected at any time which will surpass in magnitude the Boxer movement of several years ago. That the United States government is preparing to preserve the rights of American citizens was made evident by the order sending additional troops to the Philippines, among the general officers being Gen. John F. Weston, a native of Louisville, and only a few months ago assigned to St. Louis. These troops are to take the places of the American forces which before long, under Bliss or Funston, may be in Chinese territory.

It was announced at the war department that two brigade posts are to be established in the vicinity of Manila, one at Fort McKinley and another at Fort Stotzenberg, to be commanded by brigadier generals. With reference to the sending of two additional regiments to the Philippines, it was admitted at the war department that the possibility of conditions that may arise in China had an influence on the sending of additional forces. It was explained, however, that the government has no knowledge of any situation in China at this time which makes it even probable that any emergency might arise, but that as China is undergoing a change there is the possibility that American interests may require protection, and this government desires to be in the forehand in the matter of precautionary measures.

It was stated that Generals Bliss and Funston may be assigned to the brigade posts.

Result Depends on Germany.

London.—So long as Germany confines her demands at the conference to opening Morocco to foreign trade on an equal basis, there will be no difference of opinion at Algeciras, said an official of the foreign office to the Associated Press.

There is some fear that the German delegates may insist on regulations clashing with what France considers her special privileges, for instance the policing of the frontier. In fact, it is said in trustworthy circles that Germany may introduce a claim to placing German soldiers in Morocco. This France is certain to refuse and under the agreement, Great Britain must uphold her contention. Otherwise there is no danger of a disagreement, but it is impossible to say what might happen, as Germany is maintaining the strictest secrecy regarding her intentions.

Six Days in An Open Boat.

Pensacola, Fla.—Six days in an open yawl boat with waves constantly dashing over them and with only a few tins of canned beef and one gallon of water, is the experience of Captain Boden and the six members of the crew of the American schooner Nokomis.

The men reached here Thursday, being brought from St. Andrews, where they were washed upon the beach in an almost unconscious condition, with limbs swollen and benumbed, and almost dead from exposure. They were rescued by a party from a small settlement nearby and given attention until they were able to be placed in a boat and brought to Pensacola, where the vessel is owned.

Eaten By Cannibals.

Liverpool.—The steamer Olenda of geria, of which Dr. Stewart, of the horrible story of cannibalism in Ni-Southern Nigerian government was the victim. The doctor accompanied an expedition to the interior, but was separated from the main body. With only a few carriers he proceeded to Calabar river. He was riding a bicycle and being outstripped by the carriers, missed the main road, and ran into the village of a hostile tribe.

The carriers returning found Dr. Stewart's bicycle and later parts of his body. Joining the main force they give information as to their discovery. The investigation which followed showed that the body had been horribly mutilated, and there was undoubted evidence that it had been partially eaten.

It is stated that the village is only two days from Calabar river. It is known that the natives there indulge in cannibal feasts.

Standard Drove "Dad" To Wall.

New York.—Mrs. Ida Butts, whose father was an oil producer in Marion, O., testified at the Standard Oil inquiry Saturday that the Standard was responsible for driving her father out of business.

Chicago.—It is reported that 1,000 pounds of dynamite exploded near the stone crushing plant of Dolese & Sheperd at Cary, Ill., about twenty miles from this city, and that four men have been killed.

Rescued by Lawyer.

Dothan, Ala.—County Solicitor Ernest Hill at dark Saturday afternoon kicked open the door of the burning home of Albert Stegall, a painter, just in time to drag Stegall, who was intoxicated, out into the open air.

The flames consumed the house in a few minutes, and Stegall's escape from incineration was narrower than he will ever realize.

DON'T TALK MUCH

Standard Oil Men do not Want to Answer Questions During Investigation.

MISSOURI IS INVESTIGATOR.

One Man Talks a Little, But the Other Takes Refuge in Positive Declination to Answer.

New York.—It developed from the questioning by Attorney General Herbert S. Hadley, of Missouri, of Henry H. Rogers, vice president and director of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, that one of Mr. Hadley's chief purposes in conducting an examination of officers of that company in this city is to find out whether that company owns a controlling interest in the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Missouri and the Republic Oil Company. This, Mr. Hadley said, be regarded as a step in the direction of excluding the three latter companies from doing business in Missouri.

To the most important questions asked by Mr. Hadley bearing directly on the question of stock ownership, Mr. Rogers declined to give any answer "on the advice of counsel," and Mr. Hadley requested Commissioner Frederic H. Sandborn to certify the question and Mr. Rogers' refusal to the supreme court of this state for a determination as to whether or not Mr. Rogers must answer them or be adjudged in contempt.

Mr. Rogers declined to reply to questions as to whether he controls the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, whether W. T. Vanburen, of New York, holds a controlling interest in that company with the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, whether the New Jersey company controls the Standard Oil Company of Indiana or the Waters-Pierce Company, and whether two-thirds of the dividends of the Waters-Pierce Company are not paid to H. M. Tilford, who Mr Rogers said has an office at 26 Broadway, this city.

Mr. Rogers did say, however, that he never heard of an agreement between the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and the Waters-Pierce Company to divide the trade of Missouri, and that he did not believe it was ever made.

Mr. Hadley said afterwards he had an injunction against a division; that he was unable in Missouri to show from the officers of the oil companies that they are owned by the same parties. This is what he is aiming to show in the New York hearing.

Attorney General Hadley, of Missouri, said that he probably would ask for a hearing in the supreme court in this city on Wednesday or Thursday to determine whether H. H. Rogers and other directors of the Standard Oil Company must answer questions at the hearing before Commissioner Sanborn regarding the control of oil companies operating in Missouri.

"I do not care, of course," he said, "to have anybody committed for contempt. I shall ask the court to have the witnesses directed to answer certain questions which they have declined to answer. If the court orders them to answer, and they still refuse I shall have to leave to the court the question of contempt. A refusal to answer in such a case would be next best for my purpose as to an answer in the affirmative, since it would be equivalent to an admission."

Another Record of 1905.

New York—Among the notable records established in 1905, none is more remarkable than the number of political and business bosses who have been forced into entire or partial retirement by the power of public opinion. In the field of politics, Durham, of Philadelphia, and Cox, of Cincinnati, have been overthrown. Murphy and McCarren, in New York, have had their power clipped. Odell has been repudiated by the better portion of his party and is struggling for bare existence. In other cities there has been a slaughter of bosses and machines.

In the field of business, Alexander and Hyde, McCurdy and McCall, heads of the three greatest insurance companies, and most powerful in finance have fallen.

This has been a healthy manifestation of the power of public opinion, and it works for higher ideals and better methods in both politics and business.

It is a matter for national congratulation and optimism that a year of unexampled agricultural and industrial prosperity has been also a year of disaster for crooked manipulation in finance and politics.

Trains Crash in Big Snow Storm.

Cory, Pa.—As the result of a head on collision between passenger train No. 4 of the Pennsylvania and Erie railroad and a freight engine running light, three trainmen were killed and twenty passengers were more or less seriously injured. The accident happened during a severe snow storm at Horn Siding, ten miles east of this city.

GIRL TRAFFIC.

Germans Charge That Hundreds of Ayres Firm.

Berlin.—The German people are greatly shocked at the grave accusations which have been made against officials of two of our greatest steamship companies in the Spanish magazine El Censor.

It is stated that there are in the possession of the writer of the article in question ample proofs to show that the commanders of all the great liners plying between German ports and Buenos Ayres are implicated in the "white slave trade," and that hundreds of German girls are annually sold to a Buenos Ayres firm, Cohn & Co. which pays fixed commissions on all girls delivered into their hands.

The girls, who are all in the ages between 14 and 18, are sold at auction at Buenos Ayres at prices which run from $1,000 to $1,200.

A thorough investigation of the accusations will begin within a few weeks, and if they are found to be true the guilty parties will be punished with the utmost severity.

Kansas Shaken By Earthquake.

Kansas City.—A distinct earthquake shock with a motion from north to south lasting from twenty-three seconds to one minute in duration was felt in western Missouri, eastern Kansas and southern Nebraska at about 6:17 o'clock Sunday evening. The territory affected extends from Nebraska on the north nearly to the Oklahoma and Indian Territory line on the south and from Salina, Kans., on the west to Kansas City, St. Joseph and Joplin, Mo., on the east. No damage was reported, although persons ran to the streets in some places in fear that their houses would tumble in.

Exports of Manufactures.

Washington—Manufacturers participated to the extent of more than a billion dollars in the 2 1-2 billion dollars' worth of commerce of the United States during the eleven months ending with November, 1905. Figures just supplied by the Department of Commerce of Labor, through its Bureau of Statistics, show that the value of manufacturers' materials imported in the eleven months ending with November was 513 million dollars, speaking in round terms. This by far exceeds in both imports of material and exports of manufactures the figures of any earlier year.

Bank Wreckers Get Ten Years.

Denver, Col.—Leonard B. Imboden and James A. Hill, convicted of conspiracy to wreck the Denver Savings bank and divert its funds to their use were sentenced by Judge Palmer in the district court to be confined in the state prison in New York for ten years at hard labor.

Judge Palmer denied the motion for a new trial, but granted a stay of 30 days to enable the attorneys of the convicted men to appeal to the state supreme court.

Mob Wanted White Man.

Fayetteville, Tenn.—A mob of armed men compelled Sheriff Taylor to show them through the jail here. They wanted W. C. Baird, a white man charged with wife murder, but were disappointed. The sheriff had been apprised of their coming and had sent the prisoner to safer quarters. Being satisfied that Baird was not there, the mob left quietly. They were unmasked, but no one was recognized.

Italians Clash With Russians.

Washington, Pa.—Celebration of the Russian Christmas by miners of that nationality at the Meadowlands coal works, four miles from here, caused a race riot between Russians and Italians, in which one man's skull was fractured, a woman with a child in her arms was knocked down with a brick and others received serious injuries.

Cotton Conference.

New York—A conference will be held in New York on January 24th between representatives of the Southern Cotton Association and representatives of New England, outhern and Manchester, England, cotton spinners with a view to arriving at a satisfactory price for raw cotton.

Vetoed Merger Act.

New York—Governor Vardaman has vetoed the act of the Mississippi legislature permitting the merger of the Mobile and Ohio and the Southern railway. Friends of the measure, which has caused a state-wide controversy, allege influence of the Illinois Central.

Atlanta Faces Coal Famine.

Atlanta, Ga.—Atlanta is facing a coal famine and a consequent rise in fuel prices, which local dealers claim is due to the scarcity of cars. It is declared that a cold snap would find the city entirely unprepared, and dealers say they see no hope of relief within the next few days.

Half Million Loss in Kansas City Fire.

Kansas City.—A revised estimate of the losses in Friday night's fire places the total damage at slightly more than half a million dollars, and the insurance at two-thirds of that amount. The property damaged and Destroyed occupied Ninth and Tenth streets. The fire was under control at 2:30 o'clock Saturday morning.

It Pays

It pays to wear a smiling face
And laugh our troubles down,
For all our little trials wait
Our laughter or our frown.
Beneath the magic of a smile
Our doubts will fade away
As melts the frost in early spring
Beneath the sunny ray.

It pays to make a worthy cause
By making it our own;
To give the current of our lives
A true and noble tone.
It pays to comfort heavy hearts,
Oppressed with dull despair,
And leave in sorrow darkened lines
A gleam of brightness there.

A MASTER STROKE

BY ANDREW J. HOWELL, JR.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Randall Forsyth had been enthralled by an idea since his visit to Miss Juliet Glensmore the night before. He lay awake for hours pondering it; and, now that he was at his desk, he realized that he was preoccupied, decidedly to the detriment of his work.

"This will never do," he thought impatiently, collecting himself; "I oughtn't to hesitate so. If it is a good opportunity I ought to take it and not wait on any other person's judgment. I only lack the grit; that's the English of it." His foot came down on the floor with a sudden stamp to indicate that his spirit was rising to the occasion.

He closed his ledger, found his hat, and excused himself from the office on a matter of business. He hurried to the rooms of Krigshaw & Maclaine, attorneys at law. He was now bold in his determination.

On the way he ran into Colonel Krigshaw himself, who was coming out of a barber's shop, and he entered at once upon his subject. The colonel was in a hurry and could not be detained, so he stopped Forsyth's lengthy explanation by a cheery, "All right, Randall; you'll get the stock. Put your acceptance in writing, and inclose a decent check on account."

The die was cast, and he looked the proposition in the face, believing that he could carry the plan through to a successful issue. He walked slowly back to the office, reviewing the matter with a calm satisfaction. First there was Miss Juliet, level headed and resourceful. He would pay an unstinted tribute to her inspiration. In fact, she had suggested the scheme. Then the stock—it was rather curious that the $12,000 block of stock in the Norburg Mills should have carried with it through three transfers the office of vice president and manager. It was a small part of the hundred thousand, but the precedent in its favor would seem to be established. Yet he was determined to win the influence of certain other holdings to insure his election. As to the payment—ah, that would test his mettle! But it was as plain as daylight. There was his cash payment of $2,000. He would borrow the balance on the stock as security, obligating himself to pay $2,000 more per year and live on the remaining $1,000. The office had always paid $3,000. In five or six years he would be comfortably settled in business as a man of influence and position.

There were numerous other side details of the scheme which he rehearsed while walking slowly back to the office, one of which had a decided bearing upon Miss Juliet—how could he afford to marry and live in a suitable style upon the $1,000 per year? He had always felt that Miss Juliet's manner had been one of condescending kindness. From her position as daughter of Mr. Asbury Glensmore capitalist and banker, and sister of two rising stars in the commercial world, she could look upon a clerk in an insurance office from no other standpoint. Yet he was constantly indulging day dreams with reference to her and longed for the time when he would be in position to allow himself to love her. Would his good fortune extend to that happy fruition?

After an hour or more he dispatched his formal letter to the legal firm, closing the purchase of the Norburg stock. His duties at the office became menial and exasperating, and he was constantly at the point of apprising his employers of his intention to leave their service, but he desisted as yet. At lunch time, as fortune would have it, he espied Miss Juliet. She was beaming from her carriage, a captivating vision of green and lace.

"I have done it!" he said enthusiastically. "I have bought the stock and I am now at work for the election to the office."

"Now that is good!" she responded with a display of happy feeling. "I am going to tell papa, and maybe he can help in the matter. Randall," she continued, with a little touch of confidence, "I believe you will do well as manager of the mills."

He gave her a long look. There was something in her manner that awoke a strange sensation and suddenly infused a confidence in his feelings towards her that he had never known before. He answered, "With your interest I can do anything."

She flushed confusedly and turned the conversation. He was at the zenith of unclouded happiness—in the full flush of a brilliant prospect.

Later in the day Forsyth found his way into the attorneys' offices. Maclaine was in his sanctum, dictating to a stenographer, and greeted him with a bland, patronizing manner. "My dear fellow," he said at once, "I am sorry your note came too late. I have just written you a letter advising you that our friend Crosby had bought that stock belonging to the Miller estate. He came in some time before we heard from you, and closed the trade at a slight advance on your figures."

"But," interrupted Forsyth hurriedly, "I settled the matter with Colonel Krigshaw early this morning; that is, at about 9:30. He will tell you about it."

"The colonel has left the city," replied Maclaine. "Besides, the whole matter has been placed in my hands. I am truly sorry, but I can see no way to alter the settlement that has been made. Really, old fellow," he continued with a sympathizing assurance, "I am afraid you will have to give it up this time."

Forsyth paled. "I will not," he said positively; "I bought the stock, and it is mine in all fairness." It was a plea in desperation.

"Well, now, if it comes to that," said the lawyer, with a tantalizing smile, "perhaps I know my business. You seem to know yours. Suppose you get the stock."

"It's a great shame!" Forsyth exclaimed. "I'll see what I can do." Then he wheeled out of the room.

"Crack your whip," responded the lawyer calmly, as he retreated.

It was evidently a case where the play would be against legal shrewdness, and he realized his disadvantage. In a short while his ire cooled, and his fall from the exalted height of a fond dream to an abyss of despair was sudden and dizzy. He yielded to disappointment, which fell like a crushing blow. His one happy stroke in business life had turned to naught, and he felt that there could be no other.

Miss Juliet—he made a desperate resolve to go away at once, so that he could avoid seeing her again. When the next morning came he still adhered to this purpose. In the early afternoon he had resigned his position and was en route to the depot to go he cared not where, only to leave the city. He was still suffering the pangs of a deep, heavy disappointment.

He stood waiting at the station, impatient for the gate to open, so that he could board the train. In the confusion and clatter of voices around him he became aware of some one calling, "Mr. Forsyth, Randall!"

Turning, he espied Miss Juliet. When he reached her, she grasped his hand warmly, and, smiling cheerily, she asked, "Glad I've come to tell you good-bye?"

He stood speechless.

"You foolish boy," she continued. "Papa heard about the trick they tried to play on you and made the matter all right with Krigshaw & Maclaine and Mrs. Miller. She said you were entitled to the stock and should have it. Papa is looking for you everywhere, but I stole a march on him, and came here. Shall we go back together?"

OLD BOSTON TOLLHOUSE SOLD

One of Many Relics of Bygone Days—in Disuse Since 1858.

For the paltry sum of $25 the old tollhouse, one of the many relics of bygone days in the city of Cambridge, which, during its existence has held probably many thousands of dollars, has been sold, says the Boston Transcript. The house stood for more than a century at the Cambridge end of the West Boston bridge, but during the last few years had been so badly in need of repairs that it was more of an eyesore than a thing to be admired as having been handed down by our forefathers.

The house had been in disuse since 1858, and from the appearance of it at the time of its demolition one might readily believe that no repairs had been made upon it since that time. It is probable that, so great was the rejoicing when the west Boston bridge was made a "free" bridge, there was no place in the hearts of Cambridge citizens for sentiment, and none arose in the hearts of their descendants to prompt them to preserve the old landmark. The toll house was first used when the West Boston bridge, known as the "great bridge," was completed in 1793. No person was allowed to pass over without first visiting the tollhouse to pay the pittance which was demanded of him. In 1803 Moses Hadley was made the toll collector, and continued in that capacity until 1858, when the bridge was made a "free" bridge.

A Mood.

It is good to strive against wind and rain
In the keen, sweet weather that autumn brings.
The wild horse shakes not the drops from his mane,
The wild bird flicks not the wet from her wings,
In gladder fashion than I toss free
The mist-dulled gold of my bright hair's flag,
What time the winds on their heel-wings lag,
And all the tempest is friends with me.

None can reach me to wound or cheer;
Sound of weeping and sound of song—
Neither may trouble me; I can hear,
But the winds' loud laugh, and the sibilant, strong,
Lulled rush of rain through the sapless weeds.
O rare, dear days, ye are here again!
I will woo ye as maidens are wooed of men—
With oaths forgotten and broken creeds!

Ye shall not lack for the sun's fierce shining—
With the gold of my hair will I make ye glad;
For your blown, red forests give no repining—
How are my lips; will ye still be sad?
Comfort ye, comfort ye, days of cloud,
Days of shadow, of wrath, of blast—
I who love ye am come at last.
Laugh to welcome me! cry aloud!

For wild am I as thy winds and rains—
Free to come and to go as they;
Love's moon sways not the tides of my veins;
There is no voice that can bid me stay.
Out and away on the drenched, brown lea!
Out to the great, glad heart of the year!
Nothing to grieve for, nothing to fear;
Fetterless, lawless, a maiden free!

A Rare Doubloon.

William D. Gebhard, a Schoharie county New Yorker, holding a position in the United States sub-treasury, owns a gold coin which comes very near having a history. It is a Portuguese doubloon of about the value of $17, and is dated 1729. On one side it is inscribed "Ionnes V., D. G. Port. et Alg. Rex," around a woman's head, and on the other is the coat of arms of Portugal. Its mintage mark is R., wherever that is. Its milling, or booking, instead of being of the modern design, is composed of a wreath, or chain, about the edge of the coin. It is, so far as the wear and tear of circulation are concerned, as new as it was in the year of its birth, for in that year it came into the hands of John Gebhard, burgomaster of Frankfort-on-the-Main, and for 176 years, six generations, it has remained in the family. The sturdy burgomaster bequeathed it to his posterity with the proviso that it should not be parted with except for bread. Thus far no Gebhard of that family has needed bread sufficiently to part with the heirloom.

Yellow Times.

"Ef dese oin't de funnies' times I eber see den I done gone blin'," said Toot the other day.

"Wot's de mattah?" asked Mr. Hudson.

"Yaller," replied Toot; "dat's wot de mattah, Mr. Hudson. Eberyt'ing yaller—les'wise dat's de onlies' color we yere 'bout dese days. "An' dey's all evils, too," declared Mr. Hudson.

"Dey is," replied Toot; "an' yaller evils ter boot, an' look lak de whole worl's gittin' dat way, too. But lemme tell yo' dis, Mistah Hudson; right yere I t'ank de Lawd fo' bein' black, an', wot's mo', I's gwine ter stay black."—A. R. Holcombe in Judge.

Medicine Men Keep Secrets.

Bishop Hanlon of Uganda, in describing some of his experience in central Africa, said recently that though many of the medicine men had been converted, they could not be induced to carry their confession so far as to divulge their undoubted valuable remedies for native disease. Some of the converted medicine women were not so reticent, but their revelations were generally worthless.

Ethiopian Revolution.

At the recent meeting of the German Colonial Congress in Berlin, Dr. Marensky, formerly a missionary in South Africa, said, in speaking of the negro propaganda of "Africa for the Africans," there was no doubt whatever that a great Ethiopian uprising would take place sooner or later in South Africa, menacing alike British, German and Portuguese authority.

BOYCOTT SPREADS TO RELIGION

Queer Phase of the Recent Movement in China.

Writes a Canton correspondent of the China Mail: "The fierce struggle to which the boycott has given rise has now entered the sphere of religion and concerned itself with ceremonial observances. Everybody in China knows of the great moon feast held about the middle of September. One of the special features of this feast is the preparation of a peculiar species of moon cakes, which are very popular with all classes. In the preparation of these cakes for many years the finest quality of American flour has been used. It has now been decided by the ladies of the Canton, whose business it is to attend to these matters, that they will not buy any cakes made of this flour, but will content themselves with fried rice cakes instead.

"Moreover, in regard to the cakes usually presented to the servants, it has been decided that money shall be given instead. Indeed, through the medium of the planchette, the far-famed god of war has made known his will in the matter and has warned all to keep from the orthodox luxury or they will incur his fierce displeasure. In addition to this most important decision, it has been decided that at weddings and such felicitious occasions the same rule shall apply.

"I have touched only on the fringe of the subject here, for the native accounts cover a wide scope of what shall not be eaten, if any American flour is used. And so it will be found that this problem will solve itself, for the owners of the cake shops were perplexed as to what they should do were they to boycott American flour, and now the people themselves have decided for them."

A Little Parable.

Hatred and Selfishness fell in love with each other because they saw that their deeds were alike evil.

So they sought Beelzebub and asked him to marry them.

"I will do it," he said, "but it must be on one condition."

"What is the condition?" they asked.

"That the two of you, when legally made one, shall take a new name."

"It is agreed," they said.

So they were wedded with much pomp and ceremony.

"Now what is our new name?" they immediately inquired.

"Human Folly," was the answer. "That name hereafter will include the both of you, as, indeed, it practically has done heretofore."

So the united two wander over the earth, covering it with unhappiness and frequently we refer to them by their former names, but not the less does their wedded name apply to either or both of them.—San Francisco Call.

A Crystal Mine.

One of the oddest mines in the world is described by Malcolm McDowell in his article, "Strange Fluor-Spar Mine," in the Technical World Magazine. Says Mr. McDowell:

"The shaft, but little larger than the cylindrical steel skip used for transporting the spar and miners, descends on a decided slant to the working levels and the man with patent leather shoes need have no fear of soiling them by going down in to the mine, for no dirst, muck or clay is found in this crystallized bore. The water is clear, for there is nothing to discolor it. The air drills, boring holes for the blasts, send bell-like vibrations through the subterranean galleries, for the steel cutters are continually pounding into solid, glasslike mineral. The air, though warm, is sweet, for there are no carbonized gases to peril the lives of the miners."

Particles of Dust Fatal.

In an article entitled "Four Years' Work on One Lens" John L. Gowan shows what extreme care is necessary to the perfect completion of a great lens. He writes:

"For the larger lenses, the polishing and correcting are done on massive machinery in an apartment where the temperature is kept absolutely constant. The windows are never opened here when a lens is in process of manufacture, as a stray particle of dirt from the outside world might work irremediable havoc, and the workman and the precious piece of glass in his hands are protected by a huge umbrella or other nonporous covering from dust particles that might fall from the ceiling.

"This extreme caution is none too great, as the optician must now deal with errors not greater than the five hundred thousandth part of an inch."

Sweeter.

Where the river brawls loud
In the depths of the glen,
And the trees bend above,
I can see you again;
I can see the blue grapes,
And can hear the stream call
Us away to the meadows,
Where daisies are tall.

And the cliffs are as high
And as broken and brown,
And the path that of old
We so oft clambered down
Still twists down its face
As it then used to do,
Past each steep where of old
I was glad to help you.

And I know the huge rock
Splits the torrent in two,
And I know where the shallows
Sang sweetest to you,
And I know that these mem'ries
Are sweeter by far
Than the scenes of to-day
That I wander in are.

WITH THE HUNGARIAN GYPSIES

Down in some grassy valley about an open wagon the family has its camp and here the mother sews and putters over the cooking while father and sons fell the giant Lombardy poplars that make beautiful this section of gypsy land, says Felix J. Koch in the Pilgrim. These trees, be it said to the shame of Croatia, the government is now selling to the gypsies at an average price of $2 apiece, for the nomads to fell and cut up into timber, to be sold to manufacturers of wooden wares.

Picturesque, indeed, are these men with their long hair braided across the top of the head, so that approaching them from the rear, as they repose for a moment from their labors, it is difficult to tell the men from the women. Others are horse trading, as are most of their kin in Turkey proper (not a few are itinerant smiths besides), whom one meets traveling the roads with long trains of steeds that take one back in fancy to the Arabs of the desert, or with a portable bellows like those seen on the New England pikes. Now and then the women come into the villages to beg or barter, or, as the village folk hint, to steal, telling fortunes to those who may harken, as incentive to other business.

Seated on one of the crude rock walls that hem in the flats of corn land in the shadows of the Lombardy poplars, these gypsies, men and women, smoking their pipes and chattering in their curious lingo, ever tempt the much-abused camera. For background there will be some old Magyar castle, its turrets peeping through the aisle of trees, and with the sentinel at its gate—a soldier in uniform but a gypsy at heart, for while they pay no taxes in Hungary, they are forced to do military service, much as they rebel against it.

Less and less each year grow the number of the gypsies, less and less frequent their visits, until it will doubtless not be long before, like the Arabs, they will have folded their tents for all time and silently stolen away.

DISPOSING OF ADIPOSE TISSUE

A man has actually appeared upon the scene who says that he has hammered off his adipose tissue with a mallet and at the same time hardened his flesh to the proverbial consistency of nails. It is rather difficult to feel convinced of the truth of this statement, in view of the fact that a similar kind of xylophone gymnastics is daily practised upon all beefsteaks of the boarding house variety for the purpose of rendering them juicy and tender. Though the mosquito may seem entirely irrelevant to the foregoing, it rather obviously pops up and into the argument, and in so doing suggests the question as to whether or not this winged auger could penetrate the leathern envelope of a subject so hammered into the pink of cast iron perfection; and also if an expert with a pair of antifat mallets could not, while discoursing impromptu moonlight fantasies on his anatomy with the same, hit the mosquitoes as they light upon him, and thereby cause them to explode and scatter to the misty realm of otherwhere. It is rather a difficult question to answer satisfactorily on the fly and without a considerable investment of thought. In fact it may be regarded somewhat in the light of a recondite proposition in view of its importance from both a physical and a hygienic point of view; for when the performer gracefully carroms on himself and the persistent pest he rids himself of worthless fat and destroys a natural conservator of malaria, thus killing two birds with one stone, or rather two mosquitoes with one hammer. It only remains to add that there is a colossal fortune awaiting the man who can find in the above a suggestion upon which to produce a hammer which shall prove to all lovers of good government an instrument with which the fat can be ruthlessly whacked off a political sinecure while it flattens the skulls of the human mosquitoes that would convert the body politic into a fountain of unadulterated financial joy.—Exchange.

HIS FIRST POLITICAL SPEECH

"Spatters's" father was to deliver a stump speech at San Diego in his own behalf as a candidate for governor of California. While practicing the speech, mounted on a hogshead, he fell in and broke his leg.

Spatters had been a rapt listener to his father's eloquence and in the evening the little boy appeared before the meeting to deliver the speech from memory:

"Gentlemen, I know the speech and it's a corker. This is it: 'Friends, San Diegans, behind us lies the past; before us lies the future.'" His freckled little right hand stretched to the future while the left pushed back the past. "'It has been nobly said that we shall reap as we have sown; in many cases, therefore, we must reap the fruit of poisonous seeds. But each year brings its new sowing; what do we now choose to plant?'"

The crowd was surging toward the platform in its enthusiasm, but Eary and Bill held it back and motioned to the child to proceed.

"'The choice is worthy of consideration,'" the speech flowed on, every word, every gesture as he had heard and seen. "'The whole country will hail the day,'" he cried, and finally, "'Arise, San Diegans, I stand here before you to emphasize—to emphasize—'"

He turned cold with fear. He could not remember what came next. He struck the platform savagely with his right foot, struck it over and over, but the gesture did not bring the words. Then he remembered why. "Oh, I didn't hear no more," he said, forgetting the paternal warning. "That was where dad fell into the hogshead." Big tears began to streak his cheeks. "Oh, if I could only say the rest I could make you vote for us sure," he burst out, "but won't you do it anyway? I'll be an all-right governor's son and he'll make the best governor you ever had 'cause he's an A No. 1 dad."—Sarah Comstock in Lippincott's Magazine.

HIS ARTISTIC TASTE IMPROVED

"We are proud of you, papa," said the man's three handsome daughters.

"Ah, you are?" he said, beamingly. "What have I done now?"

"You have acquired taste in art," said the handsomest of the trio. "I don't mind telling you now, that there was a time when we despaired of your ever appreciating the classic. Thank goodness, you have improved, under our tuition, until you can pick out the really beautiful every time. Instead of admiring the razzle-dazzle, topsy-turvy designs in architecture and decorations that formerly pleased you, you now choose the simple easy lines of pure art."

"Thank you, my dears," said the man. "I am glad you kept hammering away at me so persistently."

When his daughter had left the room the man took off his glasses and rubbed them thoughtfully.

"Well, what do you think of that?" he said. "I have become artistic, have I? And why? Because my eyesight is so poor. That is the only reason. Those fantastic, curlycue figures that used to please my taste no longer appeal to me because they hurt my eyes. I am driven to classic lines in self-defense. Most people of my age are. I once heard an art dealer say that half the people who thought they had developed the artistic temperament with years, had only ruined their eyes and needed glasses. That is my case exactly. I like those outlandish patterns in wall paper and carpets and things as well as ever, but I wouldn't have the girls know it."

CONVERSION OF JOHN TEMPLIN

Once upon a time in Tennessee there lived a man named John Templin. He seldom did any work, not even chores. He was called the laziest man in Bledsoe county. He had no pride, and would rather beg than work.

Now there was an exhorter preacher named Fentress who occasionally filled various pulpits, and on one occasion he filled the pulpit where John Templin worshiped, when he was not too lazy to worship. Rev. Fentress opened the Bible and began reading the 36th chapter of Exodus. When he came to the 19th verse, he stopped and looked hard at Templin, until everybody saw by his demeanor that he was going to say something unusual, and then he read that verse:

"And he made a covering for the tent of rams' skins dyed red; and a covering of badgers' skins above that."

"There, brethren," shouted Fentress, "I was sure that it was in the Old Testament somewheres. You see what they did to beggars in those wise old days. They skinned 'em. Now, I ain't namin' no names. Now, then, I ain't makin' no 'sinuations. But I'm just thinkin' that in this neighborhood there's at least one that goes about beggin' 'stid o' workin'. An' I'm ony thinkin' that mebbe a good skinnin' on a moonlight night mought be a good thing for this neighborhood. That kind o' folks ought to be skinned, and stuck up on a pole, too."

John Templin went to work the next day. He never begged afterward.—Los Angeles Times.

THE MARRIED MAN'S LAMENT

A wonderful fellow was he whom I sing,
So courteous, manly and clever,
Who scorned to resort with a sarcastic fling
And spoke with cold irony never;
Though, of course, you have ne'er with this paragon met,
Since he lives in a past that's been buried,
His virtues you're never allowed to forget—
The man whom your wife might have married.

He never spoke crossly, he never complained
When things weren't in apple-pie order,
And when she was worn, languid, nervous or pained
He sat on anxiety's border;
Her wish was to him inexorable law
And her cares on his shoulders he carried—
You've been taught to believe that he hadn't a flaw—
The man whom your wife might have married.

He was gifted indeed, he could both play and sing,
And he sketched with the art of a master;
He could fashion a verse of most metrical swing,
Or carve bas reliefs out of plaster;
Since you've often been thrilled when, in pets, she'd repeat
His list of accomplishments varied,
What a pity it is that you can't hope to meet
The man whom your wife might have married.

B. B COMER AT CLANTON.

Saturday morning the Hon. B. B. Comer, candidate for governor, made his first speech to the citizens of Chilton county, which was well received.

Mr. F. A. Gulledge introduced the speaker, who at once began as follows, the length of the speech precluding us from giving it in full.

Ladies and Gentlemen:—I have been very much interested in the meeting that preceded this, your farmers' meeting.

I say to you before commencing that, notwithstanding I am a stranger in your County—this is the first time I have ever been here—I have passed through many times on the road, but this is the first time I have ever met you face to face, and it affords me great pleasure to do so—I feel that I am amongst friends. At the last election, and you know what it was, you stood by me as men; stood by me when I needed it and I thank you. I thank you indeed. It was a great kindness you did me in those days and it required manhood to do it. Chilton county gave me a majority at that time and I thank you before commencing this meeting that you did so.

Mr. Comer spoke for nearly two to an attentive and appreciative audience.

Pay your poll tax this month. The money goes to educate the children of the county, and therefore is money well spent. Then a special election for local taxation for the public schools is coming on, and unless your poll tax is paid before Feb. 1, 1906, the voter can have no voice in that election. A stock law and road law election is also likely to be called before long, and surely every citizen wants to be represented in these vital questions at the poll, State and County officers are to be elected, and unless poll tax is paid by Feb. 1 the voter is debarred from participating.

A Modern Miracle

"Truly miraculous seemed the recovery of Mrs. Mollie Holt of this place," writes J. O. R. Hooper, Woodford, Tenn., "she was so wasted by coughing up puss from her lungs. Doctors declared her end so near that her family had watched by her bed side forty-eight hours, when, at my urgent request Dr. King's New Discovery was given her, with the astonishing result that improvement began, and continued until she finally completely recovered, and is a healthy woman to-day." The Forsaken North.

A teacher in one of our public schools was having a lesson upon latitude and its effect upon climate.

"Now, who can tell me," she inquired, "why it grows colder as we travel toward the north?" A youngster cried, "It's because you get farther away from the creator!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

ADVICE OF A FRIEND

And its Happy Results.

Mrs. Florence Stewart of Evansville, Ind., writes, "Any woman who can appreciate what it means to be restored to health and vigor after being so run down and anaemic as to make life a misery will understand why I cannot express my gratitude for Vinol.

"I had been in this condition for years, and had tried many remedies prescribed by physicians, but without benefit. When a friend suggested a cod liver preparation, called Vinol, I must confess I had not much faith in it, but I decided to give it a trial, and after taking it a short time I began to feel better. I continued its use, and today am as strong and hearty as can be, and I feel that Vinol saved my life.

"I advise any woman who is in need of a blood maker and strength creator to try Vinol, and I know she will thank me, as I thank the friend who suggested it to me."

A member of the Upchurch Drug co., says, "Vinol is not a patent medicine, but it is the most valuable and delicious preparation of cod liver oil, the greatest health restorer and strength-creator we have ever sold, and we ask every run-down, nervous, debilitated, aged or weak person in Clanton, and every person suffering from stubborn colds, hanging-on coughs, bronchitis or incipient consumption to try Vinol on our guarantee to return money if it fails to give satisfaction." Preachers' Pay.

THE THOUGHTLESSNESS OF PEOPLE WHO IMPOSE UPON THEM.

Some preachers have a serious time with their finances. They are expected, above all men, to pay their debts and many require that they do nothing else but a preacher's work such as preaching the finest of sermons, attending faithfully at the bedside of the sick, burying the dead and dressing fine enough to perform the ceremony at the wedding of a king. All this means costly libraries, big dry goods and laundry bills, railroad fare or stable bills. We know a large number of preachers who are expected to do all these things on about $400 a year paid mostly at the end of the year.

There are many people who think preachers never have any expenses at all. For instance we know of a preacher serving a church nearly a hundred miles from home. They pay him a paltry sum of $100 a year. He gets letters and telegrams constantly to marry them or bury their dead, pays his own railroad fare and does not receive a cent of money to even pay his expenses. Another time he was warned to be at home that he would be sent for to go an entire hundred miles to bury another, but had to ride twenty miles through the mud and cold weather to reach the old family burying ground and got a cent. Another preacher was told by a large farmer that he must be on the lookout for a notice to come bury his aged mother's remains. The preacher replied, "All right, send a team up after me." "Well," said the farmer, "I am mighty busy plowing. You can hire a team at the stables." The preacher hired the team at the stables and paid for it himself, and went and attended the funeral of the good farmer's mother, For they told so.

We know a preacher who said 'one citizen got mad with him for rapping his dog on the nose when he was trying to bite him out in the streets. He also had to strike a man's horse in the face to keep him from running over him. The driver wanted to know why he struck his horse

"Because," said the preacher, "I could not strike you."

Now it might be said preachers should live on their work. That is true but many large sections have no peachers living among them of any kind and we do not wonder!—Dale County News.

I ask the publication of the above extract because of its striking oppositeness and similarity to a state of things existing in many other localities than that spoken of by the writer. The category might have been extended as to what preachers are expected to do, as for example: To lead in subscriptions to distresed widows and orphans; educational institutions, charitable donations and the like.

To set an example by making liberal offerings to all church work, including orphans' homes, superannuated ministers, missions, etc.

To throw open the doors of his home and entertain visiting preachers to his community, agents for religious enterprises, traveling evangelists, and humanitarians of every kind and degree. To make frequent pastorial calls on the members of his flock, over wide areas of territory, often without means of transportation, and in the face of cool receptions and evident indications that his presence is not acceptable. To visit socially his members, many of whom do not invite him once a year to do so; forgetting, apparently, that when a man becomes a minister of the gospel, the highest and most sacred calling on earth, he is not called upon to sacrifice a reasonable pride or forego his rights to be treated as a gentleman. When attending his appointments Bro. Jones or Bro. Smith always invite their pastor to go home with them, and he does so frequently for the want of an invitation elsewhere, and forthwith he is dubbed "Jones preacher" or "Smith's preacher," or it is "cut and dried beforehand he is to go with them," when the critics have constantly failed to treat him with ordinary courtesy or hospitality. These observations are not intended to be insidious or personal, but if any of us come within the scope of this application, let us make a "new year's resolution" to amend our ways, and for the future be more just and considerate for our pastor's reputation, more charitable towards his foibles, and more thoughtful and helpful for his comfort and happiness.

Love on Earth and in Heaven.

The difference between love on earth and love in heaven is not to be conveyed in words, but in tranquil and pure moods it may even on earth be apprehended by the sight of the spirit. Love in heaven has realized all that earthly love aspires to, and from that goal its progress begins, never to cease. The sky toward which it yearned in the world has become the ground on which it stands here, but now another sky is above it. We forecast heaven as repose and peace, the fulfilling of the heart's desire, the immortal presence with us of beauty and happiness. But man is not so poorly content. We leave behind us on earth the obstacles of the body, and in heaven we labor not for bread, raiment and shelter; hearts are not parted by space and time; we deceive not, strive not one against the other, scheme not to outdo others for the gain of our own name and fame. Yet in heaven are labor, emulation, ambition, love's holy fear and humility deeper than hell is deep below the heavens. Tears we have also and awe of that want which only the divine fullness can supply.—Julian Hawthorne in Century.

A Strange Survival.

It is illegal to sing, hum or whistle the "Dead March" outside of a church or a cemetery. At one time this law was very strictly enforced, and even today a soldier found guilty of singing or otherwise rendering the famous march other than at a military funeral would be severely censured.—London Household Words.

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

RECOLLECTIONS

OF EARLY SETTLEMENT OF TALLAPOOSA COUNTY AND ITS CITIZENS.

From the Dadeville Spot Cash.

Benjamin Walker came from Upson county, Georgia in the winter of 1838-39 and settled south west of Camp Hill, and opened up a farm since known as the Brummet place. He built about the first frame house in that section. He married a Miss Sweney. Having inherited a considerable landed estate in Upson, he returned about 1849 and died there at the advanced age of over ninety years.

His oldest son, William, died soon. James married [illegible] Thomas Benjamin, Jr. a Russell. Newton died in confederate army at Washington.

His daughters—the oldest married Meadows, Sarah a Pearson, Martha a Dix, Almira a Hart, Elizabeth a Tyus, and Sophronia a Wilmont. His children and his decendants are first class citizens. Providence has granted most of them a long life. Of the eleven children seven are living after sixty-seven years.

Mr. Walker was a man of strong will. He had been a life user of tobacco and on one occasion he attended preaching service at a private house, held in the best room. Having arrived a little late, he was forced to an inconvenient position to get out. He forgot his chew of tobacco and had no convenient place to spit, and after a struggle with his conscience and his sense of decency, spat upon the floor. So disgusted with his act, that when he got out, he threw away his chew and said he would no longer submit to a habit that would cause him to do such a thing, and he never used it again.

Robert Gillam was one of the first setters of Tallapoosa county. He resided about five miles from Dadeville on the Dudleyville road. He was a member of the old Concord church near his residence. He belonged to the old school of honest citizen, a good example of his class. By his first marriage he had two daughters and one son. The daughters married Doss and Taylor. His son, Harry Gillam, married first, Caroline Morgan, in 1837, and a second time a Miss Johnson, of Macon county, Alabama, formerly of Heard county, Georgia. The late Chancellor Harry Gillam, was the son of this marriage. There was also a daughter, a well educated and intelligent lady.

He represented the county in the legislature and died in the prime of life universally lamented by his people.

Old Man.

Repartee.

Upon Fenelon telling Richelieu that he had seen the portrait of his eminence at the palace, the cardinal sneeringly asked, "Did you ask it for a subscription for some poor friend of yours?"

"No. The picture was too much like you."

Webster's Wit.

Most men of weight dislike the frail gilt and satin chairs which accidentally fall to their lot in a crowded drawing room. They were in use in Mr. Webster's time. At an evening reception given to some western lawyers soon after the accession of President Tyler and the dissolution of President Harrison's cabinet Mr. Stanberry, late attorney general, was accompanied by his bashful friend, Mr. Leonard, who immediately retired to a corner and selected this gilded trifle as a resting place. In order to withdraw still farther from notice he tilted the frail structure backward. Down it went, smashed into a dozen pieces, and Leonard the embarrassed was Leonard the observed by all. Mr. Webster immediately rushed to the rescue of his unfortunate guest and raised him from the floor with the reassuring remark, "Why, my dear Mr. Leonard, you should have remembered that no cabinet work would hold together here."

Cured Lumbago.

A. B. Canman, Chicago, writes March 4th, 1903: "Having been troubled with Lumbago, at different times and tried one physician after another, then different ointments and liniments, gave it up altogether. So I tried once more, and got a bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment, which gave almost instant relief. I can cheerfully recommend it, and will add my name to your list of sufferers." ALABAMA STATE EVENTS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

Tornado in Pike Kills Two Boys.

Montgomery.—A special to the Advertiser from Troy, Ala., says:

A tornado struck the school house of Josie beat and two boys were killed by falling timbers. The dead:

Twelve-year-old son of Albert Pittman.

Aaron Lee, aged 11.

The school house was demolished and none of the occupants escaped without injury, although the injuries of only fourteen are serious.

The neck of the Pittman boy was broken, while the head of Aaron Lee was crushed.

Ramah church was damaged by the tornado, the residence of Cato Green was wrecked and the postoffice and many outbuildings were damaged.

When the high wind struck the school building the sides of the structure gave way and the roof fell in upon the occupants.

Collects the Money.

Huntsville.—A man who gave his name as Dr. Heller and claimed to be a German specialist, has victimized several Madison county people during the last few weeks, and has left with several hundred dollars of their money. The alleged specialist confined his operations to invalids and collected money in advance for treatment he never gave them.

Shooting in Lauderdale.

Florence.—News has reached Florence of a killing which occurred at Wright, a small settlement in the western end of the county. The dead man is Edgar Sharp, and his slayer is a man named Dean. Sharp and Dean had a difficulty a few days previous to the shooting and Dean swore out a warrant for Sharp's arrest. Dean was deputized by the constable to assist in making the arrest and he claims that Sharp drew a pistol on him. Sharp, who lived several days after the shooting, denied this and claimed that he was backing away from the officer when Dean shot. The weapon used by Dean was a shotgun charged with small shot.

Warehouse Proves Too Small.

Huntsville.—The Farmers' warehouse has proved to be a success far beyond expectations and although it was finished late in the season, it has 3,300 bales in storage and is nearly full. The directors have decided to duplicate the present plant and double its capacity. The work of construction will begin in time to have the addition ready before the opening of the next cotton season. The warehouse is owned by farmers and local capitalists and was not established as an investment so much as to provide storage for cotton when the price of cotton is unreasonably low.

Jury Finds Cline Guilty.

Anniston.—The jury in the case of William Cline, charged with the murder of J. E. Phillips, rendered a verdict of guilty in the second degree. The jury recommended a sentence of 25 years, and Judge Pelham acted accordingly. The execution of the sentence was suspended for an appeal to the supreme court.

Cline when asked by the court if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed, replied that he had not had a fair trial, owing to the absence of material witnesses. The murder of Phillips occurred in December on a highway while Phillips was returning from Anniston after his son had completed a runaway marriage with Cline's daughter. After a few words Cline emptied the contents of a shotgun into the head of Phillips, killing him instantly.

Bill for New Judgeship.

Washington.—Representative Richardson, of Alabama, Saturday introduced a bill providing for an additional federal judge in Alabama. This judge is to be a resident of the Northern district and exercise the same power in that district as usually belongs to federal judges.

There is considerable conflict of opinion in the delegation over the question of the new judge, all of which will be thrashed out at the hearing January 15, when it is hoped that a bill satisfactory to the state bars can be drawn.

Charged With Arson.

Birmingham.—William Harmon, Sr., William Harmon, Jr., and John Harmon, father and two sons, were brought to the city jail and locked up on charges of arson. It is alleged that the men knew something about a fire which destroyed the business house of George Cogwell, near Lewisburg, early in December.

Mexican Cotton Crop 30,000 Bales.

Mexico City.—The cotton crop for the year is now estimated at less than 90,000 bales. The loss in the Laguna district by heavy rains is not so great as was at first thought.

Fire in Elyria, O.

Elyria, O.—The Hotel Andwur and the block in which it is located were destroyed by fire Sunday morning. The loss is estimated at $100,000. There were no fatalities.

Dean in Jail at Florence.

Florence.—John Dean, the man who fired the shot which caused the death of Edgar Sharp at Wright, ten miles west of Florence, was brought here and confined in the county jail. Dean applied for bond, but the matter is out of the jurisdiction of the Florence officers and will have to be fixed by the magistrate who committed Dean at Wright. The constable, Pope McCorkle, had gone around another way to head Sharp off when the shooting occurred and was not a witness to the tragedy. Dean claims that he shot in self-defense, but his statement is not corroborated by some girls who were witnesses to the shooting.

Delegates to New Orleans Cotton Convention.

Greenville.—The Cotton Growers' association, recently organized, held an enthusiastic meeting Thursday, presided over by J. N. McBride. Seven delegates had attended the state meeting in Montgomery the previous day and reports were heard from them and other business attended to. The following delegates were chosen to attend the meeting at New Orleans, La., which convenes Wednesday, the 10th inst: T. H. Crenshaw, R. G. Shanks, W. H. Shanks, J. R. White, C. C. Stewart, J. T. Johnson, W. F. McKenzie, Frank Whittle, J. E. Wall, J. B. Stanley, U. C. Vinson, Sam Searcy, R. A. Beeland, W. H. Shanks, Sr., G. S. Lazenby, H. C. Parker, J. Lee Long, W. H. Rogers, R. A. Lee, A. T. Hinson, W. W. Thagood, J. S. Brunson.

Immigrants Go to Lauderdale.

Florence.—The population of Lauderdale county has been largely increased by a number of immigrants who have recently settled in the east end of the county in the vicinity of Anderson. Within the past few months about fifty families, principally from Cullman county, have become property owners in Lauderdale, attracted here by the splendid agricultural lands and will in the spring plant cotton and corn. They are said to be an honest and industrious class of citizens.

Judge Nathan Holds Court.

Florence.—Judge Joseph A. Nathan, the newly appointed judge of the Eleventh district, held court here Friday for the first time, the session being a very brief one. No cases were tried and probably none will be tried when court re-convenes on Jan. 12, an agreement having been reached between the judge and the attorneys to let what few cases there are on the calendar go over until the March term.

Fifth District School Destroyed.

Wetumpka.—The Fifth district school was burned here by a fire which originated in the belfry while the school was in session, but the scholars, under the direction of Professor Willingham, were marched in safety from the building.

The loss amounts to about $12,000, with insurance of $5,000. The piano, teachers' desks and many of the school books were saved.

Tennessee Racing Men Jubilant.

Nashville.—Turfmen here are jubilant over the bright prospects for uninterrupted racing in Tennessee, despite the act put on the statute books by the last legislature prohibiting betting on horse races in the state. Judge William Hart, of the criminal court of this (Davidson) county, declared the act unconstitutional.

Bennett Arrested for Forgery.

Birmingham.—What appears to be an important arrest was made when a man giving his name as John Weber, but who the police say is G. H. Bennett, was locked up in the city jail on a charge of forgery.

It is asserted that Bennett came to Birmingham about Dec. 27 or 28 last, and since that date passed eight or more checks on local merchants. These checks are alleged to be worthless, the aggregate amount involved being already ascertained to be as high as $1,687.05. To the checks the name of J. T. Webb & Bros. had been signed, the firm being prominent in North Alabama.

Child Burned to Death.

Union Springs.—The little 1-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Boyd, of Inverness, was left in a room in a little wagon last Tuesday while the mother stepped out for a few moments. Some water was boiling in a vessel on the fire and the child got out of the wagon and turned the water over on itself. It died from the effects of the burn next day.

Takes Carbolic Acid.

Chicago, January 7.—Jesse W. Hall, of Detroit, a traveling salesman, committed suicide here Sunday by taking carbolic acid.

Switzerland is the paradise of women students at universities, so far as Europe is concerned. There are at present about 5,000 of them, making 23.7 per cent. of the total number of students.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. W. J. THOMPSON.

Subject: Warp and Woof.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Sunday Simpson M. E. Church celebrated its sixty-first anniversary. The subject of Pastor W. J. Thompson's morning sermon was "Faith and Love in the Warp, Pastors and Members in the Woof." The text was from I. Thessalonians 1:3. Mr. Thompson said:

The warp consists of the threads running lengthwise through the entire fabric. The woof consists of the threads crosswise, and prompted by the weaver's fancy, may vary with each shot of the shuttle.

The warp of Simpson Church is that which through these sixty-one years has remained unchanged and is unchangeable. The woof, comprising pastors and members, by inexorable necessity and purposeful design changes and evermore must change.

Faith is a prominent thread in the warp. Conscious of our spiritual growth we reach out after God if happily we may find and be aided by Him. God is not found out by searching. The futility of the quest adds welcome to Jesus who reveals the sought-for God as the Father. We hold forth Jesus the authoritative revealer of God and our relation to Him as the light of the world.

Absorbed in His talks and walks, we are caught up in His life, and by that life conformed to his likeness. Thus Jesus saves men by His life. Also by His death. The obstructions to the tunnel-boring under Manhattan and the rivers, overcome by the engineers' sacrifice, measure their devotion to their ideal—rapid transit.

Christ's sacrifice of His life revealed His complete love for His ideal, the salvation of man, and makes that salvation complete. We preach Christ and Him crucified as the all-sufficient saviour of men who receive Him. Philosophers reason men into discipleship. Without violence to reason, and invoking it only so far as it is a part of conscience, we command men everywhere to repent and believe. Repent by ceasing to do evil; believe by the trustful appropriation of the Christ life and death. Our forerunners in this are John the Baptist, Peter and flaming evangels on to Whitfield and Moody. Our justification is the witness of sins forgiven, and lives bringing forth the fruits of righteousness.

Fear is in the warp. It is ours by generous hereditary legacy, and compasses things, beasts, men and devils. When fear is uppermost it dwarfs. Neither moral nor religious giants are the product of fear. What pygmies worriment, fear of disaster, makes. Intimidation from eclipses and comets science shows to be baseless. The fear of beasts, which vanishes before the prowess of the hunter. Fear of physical man departing with war. Fear to speak one's convictions and advocating measures he disbelieves, thus counting for less than nothing, and deserving expatriation from a democracy—these are all unwholesome fears. The sooner banished the better.

Moral fear. Wordsworth calls duty the "Stern Daughter of the Voice of God." She is a task mistress over us. Our superior therefore we fear. Her commands, like a chrysallis, metamorphoses into the pleasures of duty. Fear of the law drives the criminal to outward legal acts. The best citizens are moved without fear. William Lloyd Garrison, the great moral champion, the centennial of whose birth this day is, when dragged through the streets of Boston by a mob, said "his soul was devoid of fear."

Fear is the beginning and not the end of morality. Godly fear. Petronius argued fear made the gods. Some religions have their devils. We have ours who goeth about as a devouring lion. The Old and New Testaments have 518 references to fear.

It may be needful for the beginnings and salutary with certain temperaments, but fear is only the beginning of wisdom.

The almightiness of Jehovah makes us tremble. But He draws near to us in the flesh as we become one with Him. His power is for us. Fear from the least to the King of Terrors is abolished. All power is for our good and we can no longer fear. Fear gives place to love and sinks to the nether side of the warp in remembrance of the judgments of the lawgiver. The terrors of the law are replaced by the grace of the gospel. Fear is the beginning of wisdom, its end is love. In our necessitated helplessness in infancy and youth we depended upon our fathers. That dependence met, brought forth as the foremost filial feeling, love. All men have this tutelage, and to them Jesus reveals God as the Father who excels the most devoted father in giving good things.

The devotee of many gods may be sober until he is intoxicated at the feast of Dionysius and be righteous throughout all. To the same devotee wisdom is a virtue if he is a statesman and courage if he is a soldier. There are different virtues for different times and different people. Jesus revealed Diety as one God and Father, therefore virtue is one and love is the fulfilling of all virtue. To offend in one point of love is to be guilty of all, because righteousness is a unit.

The acknowledged master in my craft addresses my ambition with, "You can be an artisan equal to me and I will aid you." He has my heart's best love. The absolutely perfect God addresses my loftiest ambition with, "Be ye perfect as I am perfect and My proffered grace, all-sufficient, is yours for the asking." It follows my heart's supreme love wells up to God. The most prominent thread in the warp is, "Love God with all your heart, mind, soul and strength."

God the Father of all—then geography, national boundaries, is a matter of the head and not of the heart and merchandise a commodity in things and not in men. Accordingly, in the beginning of this era it was predestined a William Lloyd Garrison should toll the death knell of slavery. Buddhistic love is individualistic and does no mighty deeds; Christian love is social and does. It inculcates love to the neighbor and unites to the true religion the loftiest morals and inspires the mightiest deeds of man for man.

Thomas Hobbes set the English-thinking world agog with, "Self-love is the only love; we tolerate, but cannot love another." This cynic would view the Samaritan's succor of the wounded man not to mitigate his sufferings, but himself to exhilarate in power possessed. Adam Smith has shown with his pen what so many have with their lives that sympathy is an integral part of our nature. Sympathy, to feel with another, is a prerequisite of love. The tragic stimulates it. Accordingly, in the Christian religion the death of Jesus is most prominent. His betrayal, triple denial by Peter, stripped of His robe, mocked, scourged, carrying the cross, bound to it, nailed; His agonizing cries, death, burial—the whole is detailed with minutiae. Add to this the remembrance of a young man radiant with hopes that are stifled, the long for Messiah, Son of God, founder of a religion, whose life was all for human weal, crucified in the populous capital of His nation as a malefactor, and the tragedy of Calvary becomes pathetic in the extreme. If the Oberammergau play is so heartrending, the loved disciples of Jesus must have had an experience in pathos rarely felt by mortal. It is a wonder some of them did not die from sheer pity.

To-day we observe Passion Week and the forty days of Lent. Art, literature and sermons picture the pathetic profile of Jesus and melt our hearts. The courageous man of Calvary is less viewed, and wisely so. We need to be infused with the passion of Jesus to give us the heart to feel. The melted heart first.

Darwin ruled sympathy out of order in this world of struggle. A recent reputable sociologist shows how sympathy evidenced in mutual aid has made possible the life of the animate world and the progress of man. In the highest form of life the offspring is fewest and weakest. Pity absent, and such would perish. God pitying perishing man brought redemption. Jesus magnified sympathy. It melts the heart to love. There is false sympathy. A sect, the Jainists, so pity venomous insects as not to kill them. The Doukhobors absurdly pity the puffing engine. Sentimentalists so pity the perpetrators of horrible murder as to foil justice; parents their disobedient child as to spare the rod and spoil. False philanthropists feed the lazy and pauperize those who ought not to eat because they do not work. We must sympathize aright.

The woman who cares for the orphan; the nurse who ceases not her vigils in the epidemic; the neighbor who grants a loan to a deserving man in a hard place; the friend with his fitly spoken word to lighten the weighted heart and gladden the recording angel—these are all illustrations of sympathizing aright. The highest form is the poor sympathizing with the rich in their loneliness, and the rich with the poor in their needs. When the highest and lowest feel as one, sympathy has its perfect work. The heart thus sympathetic will go down in pity, out in love to enemies and up in love to God, and throughout envieth not. Thus this most blessed faculty of the heart is pure. We preach "Love one another with a pure heart, fervently." Love, the most prominent thread warp, is more than "mere morality." Knowledge of the good does not overcome the inertia to its doing. The imperatives of duty must be divinely spoken and warmed. It's not the act, but the motive that gives quality. The love of God to us in Christ Jesus drawing us into fellowship with the Infinite heart imparts the highest quality to our deeds.

Hate is another thread in the warp. We have earned advanced university degrees in this accomplishment. Instance civil wars and religious inquisitions. There is an Orientalism in Thugism, whose votaries worship the sword as the Greek his Icon. Killing is worship wherein they do the will of their goddess. Asceticism could have a patent office all its own for instruments of flagellation devised to scourge monks into hatred of this beautiful world. Count the number of those you hate. We naturally love friends and hate enemies. From Christ we learn to hate aright.

The Pharisee's law was: "Be holy, as the Lord your God is holy." Jesus sat at meat in a Pharisee's house. There were good Pharisees. There were others whom the Master branded as "generation of vipers, straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel; without whited sepulchres, and full of dead men's bones within." Not the Pharisees, but their sins, Jesus hated. The cross shows God's immeasurable hatred of sin. Paul delivered the most drastic philippics against sin, the destroyer of soul. To describe sin as the glory of the imperfect is worse than criminal. We ought to hate sin with all passion.

Work is a prominent thread in the warp. Love, hate, fear are emotional. John Wesley, in his experience of saving faith, says the heart was strangely warmed. The Sermon on the Mount is a message to the heart. The feelings have reared the great faiths. "Out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." To nurse our feelings for themselves is irreligious. They must issue in acts. Hunger leads us to eat, not for the titillation of the palate, but to restore lost tissue and complete the body. The blessing of hungering and thirsting after righteousness is in leading to the activity that fills us with the fullness of God.

True character is within. But "no man liveth to himself." "Let your light shine" is the command to objectify that character. To be seen, it must be in good works, and those best seen are to men's bodily needs. Eleemosynary provisions must always characterize Christians.

Why He Studied the Bible.

The Rev. Russell Bigelow Pope, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who recently died in his sixtieth year, accomplished that which seems almost to be beyond belief. He read the Bible through 150 times, thirty-eight times in one year, and once in one day. He made his own concordance, and could give almost any chapter and verse in any part of the Bible at call. For forty years he read the Greek Testament through carefully once a quarter. His reason for this close and accurate searching of the Scriptures is given by Dr. Pope in the Christian Advocate, as follows: "Once upon a time I called at a drug store and asked for a certain medicine. The clerk went to the back of the store and laid his hand on the unmarked vial. 'How do you know that this is the medicine I inquired for?' He replied, 'I know my store,' and then I made up my mind that I would know the entire Word like that."

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JANUARY 14.

Subject: The Wise Men Find Jesus—Matt. ii., 1-12—Golden Text, Prov. xxiii., 26—Memory Verse, 11—Topic: Man Seeking the Savior—Commentary.

I. The coming of the wise men (vs. 1, 2). 1. "When Jesus was born." While the exact date of Christ's birth is uncertain there is no reason why it may not have been on December 25, B. C. 5. But why do we say that Jesus was born "before Christ?" Simply because our calendar is incorrect. For some centuries after Christ's time there was no calendar in general use, but each nation dated from some event in its history. Finally, in the sixth century, a learned monk, Dionysius Exiguus, was appointed to ascertain the time of Christ's birth, and it was ordered that history should be dated from that time. But Dionysius, who first published his calculations in A. D. 526, put the birth of Jesus about four years too late. "In Bethlehem." "House of bread." A name properly applied to a place where the true bread was manifested for the life of the world. "Of Judea." To distinguish it from Bethlehem in Galilee, mentioned in Joshua 19:15. "Herod." Herod the Great. He was an Edomite, and, although a proselyte to the Jewish religion, was notorious for his wickedness and cruelty. "Wise men." Augustine and Chrysostom say there were twelve magi, but the common belief is that there were but three. "From the East." Perhaps from Media, or Persia, or possibly, from Arabia. "To Jerusalem." They seemed to suppose that when they reached the capital of the Jewish nation they would have no trouble in finding the object of their search.

2. "King of the Jews." This was a title unknown to the earlier history of Israel and applied to no one except the Messiah. It reappears in the inscription over the cross. "His star." The star which attracted the attention of the magi was provided for the occasion. "To worship Him." To do Him homage. They were bold to confess the object of their coming.

II. Light from the Scriptures (vs. 3-6). 3. "Had heard." The magi had created no small stir by their inquiries which immediately attracted the attention of the king. "Troubled." Herod, now sunk into the jealous decrepitude of his savage old age, was residing in his new palace on Zion, when, half maddened as he was already by the crimes of his past career, he was thrown into a fresh paroxysm of alarm and anxiety by the visit of these magi, bearing the strange intelligence that they had come to worship a new-born king. Herod feared a rival. "All Jerusalem with him." Fearing that he would make this an occasion of renewing his acts of bloodshed. 4. "Had gathered." He assembled the Sanhedrin. "Chief priests." This expression probably comprehends the acting high priest and his deputy, those who had been high priests. "Scribes." The learned interpreters of the Mosaic law, and the collectors of the traditions of the elders. Many of them were Pharisees. "Demanded of them." Because they would be most likely to know. "Where the Christ should be born" (R. V.). The wise men had said nothing about the Christ, or the Messiah, but only about the King of the Jews. But Herod saw that this king must be the expected Messiah.

5. "By the prophet." Micah 5:2. 6. "Art in no wise least" (R. V.). Although Bethlehem was little, yet it was exalted above all the other cities of Israel. "The princes." "The thousands" (Micah 5:2). The tribe had been subdivided into thousands, and over each subdivision there was a chieftain or prince. "A Governor." To control and rule. "Which shall be shepherd" (R. V.). To feed and care for, as a shepherd his flock. This governor who controls is also a tender shepherd. Christ is both Shepherd and King. "My people Israel." Israel was God's people in a peculiar sense.

III. The intrigue of Herod (vs. 7, 8). 7. "Privily called." Herod desired to keep the time of Christ's birth as secret as possible lest the Jews who hated him should take occasion to rebel. "Inquired of them diligently." "Learned of them carefully." R. V. He inquired of them the exact time and received positive information as to the time the star appeared. Assuming that the star appeared when the child was born he would thus have some idea of the age of the child. 8. "He sent them." He assumed control, but they followed the directions of the Lord. "Search diligently." Herod was honest in making this charge to them; he greatly desired to receive definite word concerning the new King. "And worship Him also." What hypocrisy! He only wished to find the child in order to murder Him (vs. 13, 16).

IV. Guided by the star (vs. 9, 10). 9. "The star—went before them." The same star which they had seen in their own country now again appears. "Stood over." The star pointed out the very house. 10. "They rejoiced." The Greek is very emphatic. They rejoiced exceedingly.

V. The child Jesus found (vs. 11, 12). 11. "Fell down." They prostrated themselves before Him according to the Eastern custom. "Gifts." The people of the East did not approach into the presence of kings without bringing them presents. "Gold," etc. Gold would always be useful, while frankincense and myrrh were prized for their fragrance. 12. "Warned of God in a dream." God communicated His purpose to them in a manner that they understood. "Another way." They could easily go East from Bethlehem and thus leave Jerusalem on the north.

three sons and the daughter, their mother, combined forces to restore the family fortune. They argued that the medicine which was so good for their woman friends and neighbors was equally good for the women of the whole world.

The Pinkhams had no money, and little credit. Their first laboratory was the kitchen, where roots and herbs were steeped on the stove, gradually filling a gross of bottles. Then came the question of selling it, for always before they had given it away freely. They hired a job printer to run off some pamphlets setting forth the merits of the medicine, now called Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and these were distributed by the Pinkham sons in Boston, New York, and Brooklyn.

The wonderful curative properties of the medicine were, to a great extent, self-advertising, for whoever used it recommended it to others, and the demand gradually increased.

In 1877, by combined efforts the family had saved enough money to commence newspaper advertising and from that time the growth and success of the enterprise were assured, until today Lydia E. Pinkham and her Vegetable Compound have become household words everywhere, and many tons of roots and herbs are used annually in its manufacture.

Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of this work. She passed to her reward years ago, but not till she had provided means for continuing her work as effectively as she could have done it herself.

During her long and eventful experience she was ever methodical in her work and she was always careful to preserve a record of every case that came to her attention. The case of every sick woman who applied to her for advice—and there were thousands—received careful study, and the details, including symptoms, treatment and results were recorded for future reference, and to-day these records, together with hundreds of thousands made since, are available to sick women the world over, and represent a vast collaboration of information regarding the treatment of woman's ills, which for authenticity and accuracy can hardly be equaled in any library in the world.

With Lydia E. Pinkham worked her daughter-in-law, the present Mrs. Pinkham. She was carefully instructed in all her hard-won knowledge, and for years she assisted her in her vast correspondence.

To her hands naturally fell the direction of the work when its originator passed away. For nearly twenty-five years she has continued it, and nothing in the work shows when the first Lydia E. Pinkham dropped her pen, and the present Mrs. Pinkham, now the mother of a large family, took it up. With woman assistants, some as capable as herself, the present Mrs. Pinkham continues this great work and probably from the office of no other person have so many women been advised how to regain health. Sick women, this advice is "Yours for Health" freely given if you only write to ask for it.

Such is the history of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; made from simple roots and herbs; the one great medicine for women's ailments, and the fitting monument to the noble woman whose name it bears.

St. Deiniol.

St. Deiniol or Daniel, whose day is November 23, is a Welsh saint whose name has become familiar to many thousands of Englishmen and Scotsmen in connection with his church at Hawarden and the St. Deiniol's library established by Mr. Gladstone. The saint flourished early in the sixth century, but very little is known of his life except that he founded a college or monastery at the place now known as Bangor. That Bangor derives its name from this college of St. Deiniol's is agreed; but there is a difference of opinion as to whether Bangor stands for "Ban chor," high chair, or for the Latin "bonus chorus," blessed choir.

Women in Industrial Life.

The census returns show that 5,000,000 and more women are employed in the nation's industrial life. There are now three times as many women stenographers as there were ten years ago, while the number of women bookkeepers and accountants has doubled. The percentage of saleswomen also shows a corresponding increase. Women have risen to be treasurers of street railways, presidents of national and savings banks, secretaries of financiers on salaries of $10,000 and $12,500, executive heads of building and contracting firms, buyers for large stores, etc.

English Starlings a Pest.

The English starlings introduced into Australia from Europe have produced a much greater pest than the insects they were expected to exterminate. They destroy apples, cherries, figs, grapes, etc., and unless they are exterminated, fruit growing will have to be given up. They also drive out insect-eating birds like diamond birds, tree swallows and tree creepers.

It is lucky that sometimes we do not know how lucky we are.

BOY'S TERRIBLE ECZEMA.

Mouth and Eyes Covered With Crusts—Hands Pinned Down—Miraculous Cure by Cuticura.

"When my little boy was six months old he had eczema. The sores extended so quickly over the whole body that we at once called in the doctor. We then went to another doctor, but he could not help him, and in our despair we went to a third one. Matters became so bad that he had regular holes in his cheeks, large enough to put a finger into. The food had to be given with a spoon, for his mouth was covered with crusts as thick as a finger, and whenever he opened the mouth they began to bleed and suppurate, as did also his eyes. Hands, arms, chest and back, in short, the whole body, was covered over and over. We had no rest by day or night. Whenever he was laid in his bed we had to pin his hands down, otherwise he would scratch his face, and make an open sore. I think his face must have itched most fearfully.

"We finally thought nothing could help, and I had made up my mind to send my wife with the child to Europe, hoping that the sea air might cure him, otherwise he was to be put under good medical care there. But, Lord be blessed, matters came different, and we soon saw a miracle. A friend of ours spoke about Cuticura. We made a trial with Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent, and within ten days or two weeks we noticed a decided improvement. Just as quickly as the sickness had appeared it also began to disappear, and within ten weeks the child was absolutely well, and his skin was smooth and white as never before. F. Hohrath, President of the C. L. Hohrath Company, Manufacturers of Silk Ribbons, 4 to 20 Rink Alley, South Bethlehem, Pa. June 5, 1905."

Biggest Farm in the World.

In a moment of vinous enthusiasm Daniel Webster put his hand in his pocket, asked how much the national debt was and offered to pay it himself. A Mexican farmer, Don Luis Terrazas, a great friend of President Diaz, once offered to assume the Mexican national debt, and it would not have kept him awake nights if his offer had been accepted. Don Luis has what you might call a tidy little farm at Chihuahua—about 8,000,000 acres. Takes the Mexican Central trains more than half a day to cross it. Whew! Don Luis is thought to own more than a million cattle, but a bagatelle of 100,000 or so more or less never bothers him. His stable consists of some 100,000 horses; his sheepfold of 700,000 sheep. From 200,000 to 300,000 calves are branded with his brand every spring. More than 1,000 cowboys and so on keep his cattle on a thousand hills. By the way, his farm includes a few mountains, for diversification. At his slaughter and packing houses near Chihuahua City 250,000 cattle, as many sheep and hogs innumerable are killed, and away they go in his own refrigerator cars. Some 40,000 persons dwell on his estate and are ruled by this Arabian Nights farmer, who lives in a $2,000,000 (silver dollar) castle and is a swell nabob such as these United States know not.

Insanity and Drunkenness.

There is no question of the fact that insane asylums all over the world are to a great extent recruited from the class of hard drinkers, and from their offspring and descendants. Twenty-one per cent of the asylums now under restraint in the United States have an "alcoholic history," liquor being either the sole or a contributing cause of their misfortune. Paresis, which of late years has become so much more common, is a typical alcoholic brain disease, though not always attributable to drink. It is noticeably frequently among brokers and actors, who as a class are much addicted to constant "nipping."

It is said that, to a skilled pathologist, the effects produced by alcohol upon the brain of a "moderate" drinker are plainly visible under the microscope. The drug acts directly as a stimulant upon the nerve and after a while, when taken in excessive quantities, injures the delicate structures of the mind organ, impairing its efficiency and eventually breaking it down. But the most unfortunate feature of the case is that the mischief is liable to be transmitted in one form or another to children, who become drunkards, show signs of mental weakness, or have a tendency to be epileptic or otherwise afflicted with nervous diseases.

The World's Highest Monument.

The cornerstone of the Washington monument was laid, on its fine site which overlooks Washington, Georgetown, Arlington and Mount Vernon, by President Polk, July 4, 1848. Its marble shaft rises, in all the dignity of unadorned simplicity, to the height of 555 feet. The base of the shaft is fifty-five feet square, and it gradually tapers, until at the 500 foot point it has diminished to less than thirty-five feet. This monument is said to contain 18,000 blocks of marble, each two feet thick. They were lifted on an elevator run by steam, suspended in an inner framework of iron, which was built up at intervals, thirty or forty feet at a time, in advance of the surrounding masonry. The aluminium capstone, nine inches high, was set in position Dec. 6, 1884, thirty-six years and a half after the cornerstone was laid.

The Derrick.

A derrick is an innocent mechanical apparatus for lifting heavy weights, but it gets its name from an English hangman called Derrick, who flourished many years ago. The people of that time thought that the device used only in the hangman's trade resembled the more common mechanism which now bears his surname. Somewhat similarly, the term ruffian is believed by many to have come from Morocco, where the inhabitants of the Riff country were and are pirates and altogether persons of evil character.

A Practical Husband.

Surely the Monmouthshire man who caused his wife's wedding ring to be inscribed, "If thee doesn't work, thee shan't eat," was determined that there should be no mistake in what he required in a wife. The only wonder is how any woman could be induced to marry him with such a threat before her eyes. The exact date of this ring is not known, but it is previous to the eighteenth century.—Chambers' Journal.

STOP THE LEAK!!

Just so surely as the wasting sands of a broken hour glass shorten the time it has to run; so will Liver, Kidney or Bladder trouble waste away your health and strength and shorten the length of your life. If you had a broken hour glass and wanted it to run the full hour instead of half that time, you would stop the leak. Is not your life infinitely more precious? Don't you want to live just as long as you possibly can? Then stop the leak. Perhaps you don't know that the leak exists—you may have suffered with Backache, Shortness of Breath, Loss of Appetite, Fever, Sleeplessness, Vertigo, Constipation, Sallow Complexion, Sour Stomach, High Colored Urine, Yellowish Eyeballs, Coated Tongue, Depression, Headache, Nervousness, but did not know what they meant. You thought you just weren't feeling well and for some unaccountable reason one or all of these troubles just happened. Don't you know that nothing "just happens" in nature? Don't you know that these symptoms are just as sure an indication of Liver, Kidney or Bladder Trouble as a growing weed is an indication that a seed was planted before the weed ever grew? There never yet was an effect without its cause—then the only way to cure the effect is to cure the cause; just the same as you have to pull the weed out by the roots before you can stop its growth. Can you afford to risk the constant leak of health that may be going on, when an absolute test and a sure cure is offered you?

URACURA Will Cure You

as well as being a certain test for kidney or bladder trouble. After taking a few doses of this remedy you will find, if you have either of these diseases, that the urine is of a very dark or reddish color. This is the test. But in addition to this you will notice that the urine has a strong odor of the medicine, proving conclusively that it has begun its great curative work and has permeated thoroughly the kidneys and bladder where it is soothing pain and inflammation and destroying the roots of the disease. After two or three days the urine will clear up; you will feel less pain about the kidneys and the pains in the back will leave. Your nervousness will disappear and you will feel better and stronger in every way. Uracura is the greatest Nervine Tonic, Blood Alterative, Liver Regulator and Kidney and Bladder Cure that science has ever produced. By going directly to the cause of all the trouble and curing that, it proves its difference from all other so-called Kidney Cures—they are not cures but "soothers" containing drugs that cause a temporary stoppage of pain, but nothing to kill the root of the disease. Uracura on the other hand restores strength, renews vitality, purifies the blood, relieves biliousness and constipation and produces a healthy and sound digestion. A purely vegetable compound. Do you value your life above a 50 cent piece?

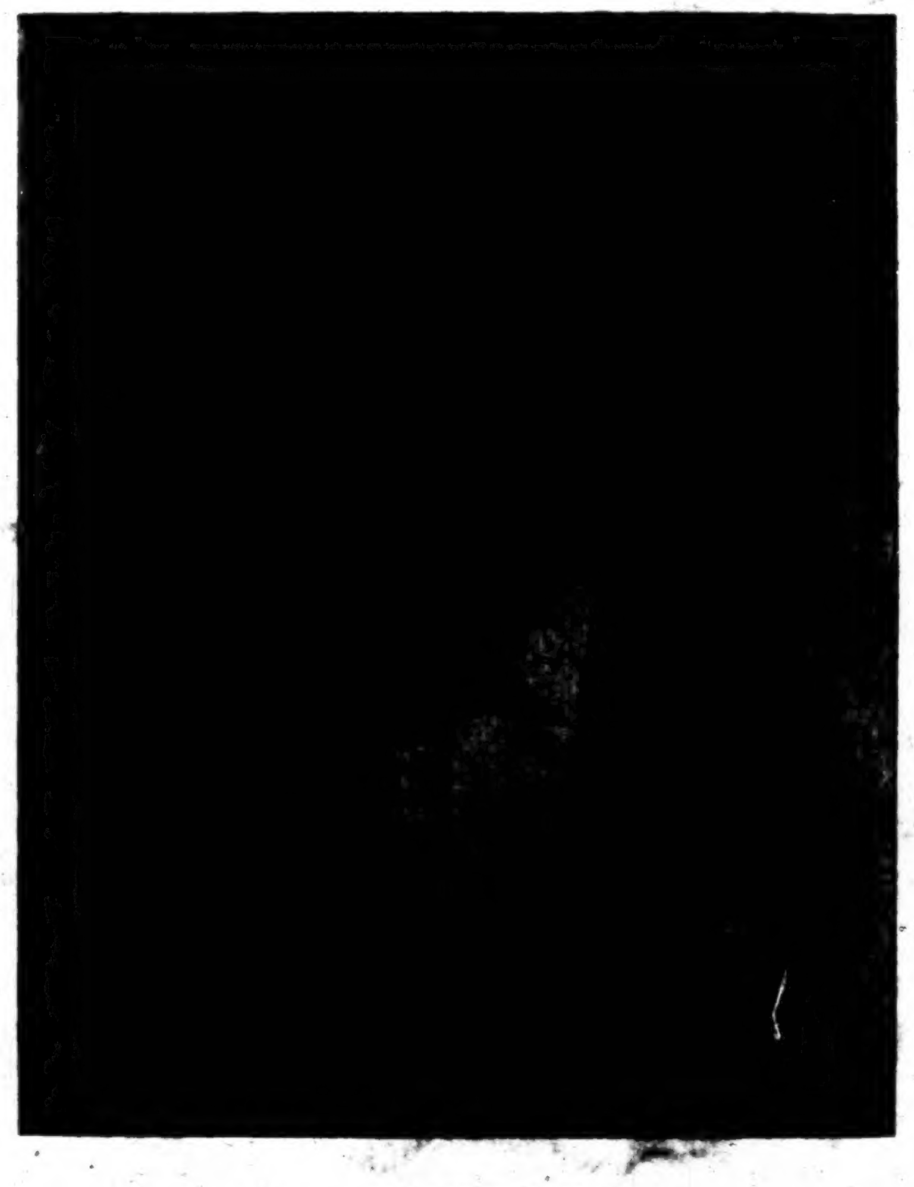
Death of Mrs Rhodie Cleckler.

On Monday morning, Jan. 15, the cold icy angel of death visited the home of Mr. Lonzo Cleckler and took from him his loving wife. She had been in ill health for several days but was not seriously ill until a few minutes before her death. God saw fit to take her from our midst into a better world. She leaves a kind husband and two children to mourn her loss, which is great, but it is heaven's gain. Weep not for her, dear husband, father, mother and friends, for she is gone to the glory world to meet her sister and to await your coming. Her pain and sufferings are now over, she is gone to rest. Our deepest sympathy goes to you, but feeling that we cannot speak any words that would ease your aching hearts or fill the vacancy of the dear one, we can only point you to one that doeth all things well. Only trust in Him as she has and some sweet day you will meet your loved one safe beyond the rolling tide where there will be no more partings but all will be love. Do not despair in the loss of this dear friend but remember that God has a work for us to do and some day He shall call us as He has called her, and may we ever be ready to go and meet them that have gone on before.

Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
In which none shall ever wake to weep.

LUCY JONES.



J. J. HAWTHORN.

To the White Voters of Chilton County:

I hereby announce myself a candidate for the Legislature from Chilton county, subject to ratification of the Democratic primaries. While a comparative stranger in this county I am fairly well acquainted over the State, having held different positions of trust in the State and having always been in line with the Democratic party.

I refer you to W. W. Wadsworth, E. H. Malone, and Mr. Oates of Clanton, having served through the war with these gentlemen and under John T. Morgan, Joe Wheeler, James H. Clanton, and W. W. Allen.

As to my position on some of the leading issues of the day, I wish to say that I am heartily in sympathy with Mr. Comer in regard to railroad rate legislation, believing that under the present conditions; because of the law's delay, there is a delay of substantial justice. In addition to having a law authorizing the Railroad Commission to regulate freight rates the people should elect a Commission which would see that Alabama has as low rates within her borders as any other Southern State. While it is a fact that regulation of rates has become a national as well as a State issue, the people in my opinion should not wait for relief by Congress, as our Legislature has power to pass laws which will give the people promptly the needed relief.

In regard to the public schools I am in favor of local taxation as well as of increasing the State appropriations until every district in the State shall have a full nine months term free of cost, and good and substantial school houses in which the schools shall be taught. The time has come for the State to furnish free of charge such books as are required by all the public schools and a law authorizing this should be passed. The pensions for Confederate soldiers should be increased until every veteran of the war shall be given enough to make his declining days comfortable and his lot happier. If I could be elected I should be in favor of appropriating a part of the great surplus now lying idle in the State treasury for the benefit of the Soldiers' Home at Mountain Creek.

I am strongly in favor of a better road system and will certainly support any measure that will improve the roads in Chilton county.

Respectfully,

J. J. HAWTHORN,

late Capt. State Troops.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Best Made

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Cora Walker of Porterville, California. There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventative of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other. The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale by Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

THE TARIFF OF TORTURE.

Prices Paid to Executioners For Inflicting Hideous Cruelties.

Among the monuments of this vast superstition which exist to this day, the traveler sees the "witch towers, the torture chambers, and the collections of instruments of tortures in various towns on the Continent; notably at Nuremberg, Ratisbon, Munich and The Hague, but perhaps nothing brings the system more vividly before us than the executioner's tariffs still preserved. Four of these may be seen in the library of Cornell University, and, among them, especially that issued by the Archbishop Elector of Cologne in 1757. On four printed folio pages it enumerates in fifty-five paragraphs every sort of hideous cruelty which an executioner could commit upon a prisoner, with the sum allowed him for each, and for the instruments therein required. Typical examples from this tariff are the following.

	Thalers	Alb.
1. For tearing asunder with four horses	5	26
2. For quartering	4
5. For beheading and burning	5	26
7. For strangling and burning	4	..
8. For heaping the pile of wood and kindling	..	12
9. For burning alive	4	..
11. For breaking a man alive on the wheel	4	..
13. For setting up the wheel with the body twisted in it	2	52
19. For cutting off a hand or sundry fingers, and for beheading altogether	3	26
20. For burning with a hot iron	1	26
22. For beheading and placing the head upon a pike	3	26
24. For beheading, twisting the body in the wheel, and placing the head upon a pike altogether	5	..
28. For tearing a criminal before his execution with red-hot pincers—each tearing of the flesh	..	26
31. For nailing a tongue or hand to the gallows	1	26
42. For the first grade of torture	1	26
44. For the second grade of torture, including setting the limbs afterward, with salve for same	2	26

And so on through fifty-five items and specifications.—Andrew D. White, in the Atlantic.

"Rubbing It In."

When Mrs. Morse, after a lapse of thirty years, met her old schoolmate, Mrs. Graham, in the guise of a summer visitor to Aldersfleld, she made up her mind to one thing: Lydia Graham's measure of worldly prosperity had been large, but not for one moment would Mary Ann Morse allow her to feel "set up."

It was with the intention of reducing any possible pride that might be lurking behind Lydia Graham's placid countenance that Mrs. Morse held her off at arm's length when the first affectionate greeting had been exchanged.

"How fat you've grown, Lyddy!" said Mary Ann Morse, holding her little figure erect as a small, stiff tree.

Mrs. Graham smiled contentedly, and Mrs. Morse saw that her thrust had done no harm.

"And yet—and yet you've wrinkled in spite of it," said this determined old friend, and then she gave Lydia Graham's flushed cheek a consoling kiss.—Youth's Companion.

At Least a Help.

"Uncle David" was an Oldtown character, some of whose sayings have been put into black and white by Mr. Norton in his "Sketches" of that vicinity. David used to run rafts of lumber down the Penobscot, and was wont to boast that he "always sold to one man, and when he didn't sell to him, he sold to somebody else."

One day Uncle David was standing on the river bank when a sternwheel steamboat passed. He gazed long and thoughtfully at the vessel, and then, turning to a bystander, said, in a tone of deep conviction:

"That wheel is a great sarvice to that boat."

Not Such an Easy Matter.

"These shoes will be all right," said the salesman, "after you have got them broken in." The young man, who had been hesitating between that pair and one a size larger, took the salesman's word for it and purchased the shoes. A week later he came back to the store with a perceptible limp.

"I wish you'd stretch these shoes," he said. "They hurt my feet terribly."

"Haven't you got them broken in yet?" asked the salesman.

"Oh, yes," said the young man. "The trouble is that I can't get my feet broken in."—Youth's Companion.

Accuracy.

A certain well-known author has always professed astonishment at the unfailing memory of the attendants who stand at hotel dining rooms, receive the hats of the guests as they enter, and unerringly return them to their proper owners as they come out. One day on leaving the dining room of a large summer hotel he stopped and spoke with the attendant who had handed him his hat from among a hundred others. "How do you know," he asked him, "that this is my hat?"

"I don't know, sir," was the reply.

"Then why did you give it to me?"

"Because you handed it to me, sir."—Harper's Weekly.

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Cut by Saw.

Gadsden, Ala.—News of a horrible accident, which may result in death, occurring near Hokes' Bluff a few days ago, has reached Gadsden. The news as received in this city is that J. R. Sims, a well-known and popular citizen of that settlement, was at work in the saw mill and was sharpening a saw. He called to some one to turn the saw a little. By some unknown means the steam was started and the saw began to revolve. The long teeth of the saw caught in Mr. Sims' trousers and carried him over the saw as it revolved, and threw him off on the other side, cutting him most horribly in the stomach. The workmen ran to his assistance as soon as they could, and a physician was summoned, who did all he could for him, but he is fatally injured and there are no hopes for his recovery. Mr. Sims has a large number of friends, who will regret to hear of the accident.

Christopher Injured.

Gadsden, Ala.—Obal Christopher, one of the oldest and best known citizens of Etowah county, happened to a serious accident about 2 o'clock Friday while opening an ore mine in Tumlin Gap, on the property of Capt. J. M. Elliott, Jr., in which his right thigh was crushed and broken and his left leg broken.

Mr. Christopher has mining property of Captain Elliott in charge, and for months has been engaged in opening and developing the property. Last Friday Mr. Christopher and Mont Devine went into an opening to look after some slight trouble, and while at work there a slide in of the mine caught both men and crushed them to the ground with tons of dirt and rock. The men were rescued from their perilous position as soon as possible by the workmen.

It was found that Mr. Christopher's right thigh and his life leg were broken. Physicians were sent for, but it was after dark before he received medical attention. Favor Reduction. Executive Committee Will Formulate Plans This Week.

JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES TALKS.

W. D. Nesbitt Presents Report of the Warehouse Committee at New Orleans.

New Orleans, La.—With the matter of acreage, the most important question remaining to be settled, the Southern Cotton Association Saturday began the last day of its work. The question of permanent headquarters, the election of officers and the proposition to establish an official organ will be settled by the executive committee.

The executive committee will also arrange to put into effect the plan of holding the remainder of the crop for 15 cents. It is directed to select one representative of the association from each state and territory and five cotton men at large to perfect the following plan:

The adoption of a form of contract rmer or owner of cotith his banker the receipts or pledges to hold his cotton for 15 cents, basis middling, at southern ports, except with the consent of this committee. The owner of the cotton has full power and authority to sell this cotton at 15 cents or over, the banker to retain 1 cent per pound to be held in trust until such time as all of this cotton so pledged has been disposed of, when this committee will meet and arrange disposition of the balance as the interest may appear.

The hall was well filled when President Jordan called the convention to order.

A resolution by M. V. Calvin, of Georgia, was adopted instructing the executive committee to publish for distribution 100,000 copies of the proceedings of the convention.

Erister Ashcrafe, of Florence, Ala., spoke at some length on the extension of the cotton trade in new markets.

President Jordan, in behalf of the convention, presented E. D. Smith, the field agent of the association, with a handsome gold match safe in recognition of the work done by him.

W. P. Shinault, of Mississippi, chairman of the committee on acreage reduction, reported, favoring the reduction of 25 per cent from that planted in 1904. As there were planted 32,000,000 acres of cotton in 1904, this would mean that the Southern Cotton Association is in favor of planting 24,000,000 acres of cotton this year. The report was unanimously adopted.

John Temple Graves was then introduced and addressed the convention.

The committee on statistics through Chairman E. B. Alford presented a lengthy report asking each state to prepare and perfect a careful statistic service.

A resolution by John D. Walker was adopted, that all holders of spot cotton be requested by the Southern Cotton Association to sign a binding pledge to sell their cotton at 15 cents a pound if through the efforts of the association it reaches that price.

The convention then took a recess until afternoon.

The Southern Cotton Association completed its labors with its afternoon session and adjourned without delay. In declaring the adjournment President Jordan congratulated the convention on the successful manner in which it had performed its work. The new executive committee will meet here next week and arrange to carry out the various recommendations which have been made by the convention. It will probably be in session for two or three days. Except the members of the committee practically all the members of the association started for their homes Saturday night.

At the opening of the afternoon session Chairman W. D. Nesbitt presented the report of the committee on warehouses. It recommended the extension and improvement of the present warehouse system by improving the physical character and fire protection features of all warehouses, building of large fire proof warehouses in commercial centers, to which local warehouses may be tributary; a design for a small standard warehouse suited for railway stations and small towns; the education of the people in the great advantages of the warehouse and credit system based on warehouse receipts; encouragement by the officers of the association of warehouse building, and a combination of local warehouse companies, and formation of a grading and guarantee company to issue uniform guaranteed receipts on cotton in warehouses that will adopt proper methods and give proper security. A British explorer recently returned from Abyssinia says that he was for four months in a region hitherto unknown to white men. UNABLE TO WALK.

Terrible Sore on Ankle Caused Awful Suffering—Could Not Sleep—Cured by Cuticura in Six Weeks.

"I had a terrible sore on my ankle, and had not walked any for eleven months. I tried nearly everything without any benefit and had a doctor, but he didn't seem to do any good. He said I would have to have my limb taken off, and that I would never walk again. I suffered awful, and at night I could not sleep at all. I thought there was no rest for me, but as soon as I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment it commenced healing nicely. I washed the ankle with warm water and Cuticura Soap, and then applied Cuticura Ointment to the affected part, and laid a cloth over the sore to hold it in place. After two weeks I could walk around in my room real good, and in six weeks' time my ankle was entirely cured, and I was walking around out of doors. Mrs. Mary Dickerson, Louisa C. Long Lost Will Found.

At a book sale in a Paris auction room the other day a gentleman turning over the leaves of one of the books, saw a time worn piece of paper which he had the curiosity to open. This proved to be a will executed in proper order about ninety years ago, but never proved. It was that of a woman whose death as subsequently inquiry has shown, took place eighty-five years ago. As no will could be found, intestacy was assumed, and a personality of 16,000 pounds was divided among relatives. In fact, the will bequeathed everything to a niece long since dead, and the question now arises as to the claims of her descendants against those of the other participants.

Some striking figures are published by the Novoe Vremya, as to the forces at the disposal of the Russian commander-in-chief in Manchuria at the close of the late war. When peace was concluded General Linevitch had at his disposal 12,580 officers, 917,000 men and 270,000 horses. But from the beginning to the end of the war there had been carried to the front 20,000 officers, 1,270,000 men, 230,000 horses and more than 1,600 guns. Substracting these figures and making allowance for the 80,000 men already on the spot when war broke out, the Russian losses appear roughly 7,500 officers and 433,000 men.

UNSCONCIOUS POISONINC.

How It Often Happens From Coffee.

"I had no idea," writes a Duluth man, "that it was the coffee I had been drinking all my life that was responsible for the headaches which were growing upon me, for the dyspepsia that no medicines would relieve, and for the acute nervousness which unfitted me not only for work but also for the most ordinary social functions.

"But at last the truth dawned upon me, I forthwith bade the harmful beverage a prompt farewell, ordered in some Postum and began to use it. The good effects of the new food drink were apparent within a very few days. My headaches grew less frequent, and decreased in violence, my stomach grew strong and able to digest my food without distress of any kind, my nervousness has gone and I am able to enjoy life with my neighbors and sleep soundly o'nights. My physical strength and nerve power have increased so much that I can do double the work I used to do, and I feel no undue fatigue afterwards.

"This improvement set in just as soon as the old coffee poison had so worked out of my system as to allow the food elements in the Postum to get a hold to build me up again. I cheerfully testify that it was Postum and Postum alone that did all this, for when I began to drink it I 'threw physic to the dogs.'" Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

KILLING WOLVES FOR BOUNTY

MAN PITS NERVE AND INGENUITY AGAINST THE PEST.

Wolfer Jim and His Work on the Wyoming Ranges—His Secret for Concealing the Scent of the Trap—Disadvantages in Use of Poisons—Coyote Bounties.

A meeting of stockmen was held in the Big Horn Basin of Wyoming the other day, to consider the question of increasing the bounty on wolves, says the Denver Republican. These animals have been increasing so rapidly in northern Wyoming in recent years that it is said they are killing calves and carrying off sheep in broad daylight.

Wyoming pays a bounty of $5 a head on wolves, but this is not enough to pay for the trouble of killing them. The stockmen propose to subscribe a fund, increasing the wolf bounty to $20 a scalp, and this, it is anticipated, will set the "wolfers" at work again ridding the range of its greatest pest.

In Montana, which pays a heavy wolf bounty, there are several wolfers so expert that they are known all over the Northwest. On the Crow Indian reservation, in the southwestern part of the State, are two wolfers who are probably the most skilled of their class. One of them is Lee Farish, and the other is known simply as Jim. Of the two Jim is probably the more skilled. He is able to catch wolves when, in the vernacular of the country "there ain't anything but coyote tracks in sight."

His outfit is up to date in every particular. The traps form Jim's most effective way of disposing of wolves. A trap may be skillfully planted near a "bait," but unless the odor is killed the chances are the wolf will keep at a safe distance from the lure. A coyote may be caught in the trap, but not a wolf, for the more savage of these prairie marauders is also the most shrewd.

"Until I found a secret compound," said Jim the wolfer, "I used to poison the wolves. I have lost thousands of dollars by having the wolves eat the poison and then get away and die where I couldn't find the bodies. There is no poison that will act quick enough to kill a wolf right away. He has a chance to make a run for it, and then it is up to you to find the body and get your pelt. I tried all the poisons that man ever invented, I guess, but nothing would get Mr. Wolf in an instant.

"So I tried fixing up my traps. I tried all sorts of methods of burying them, but that wouldn't work, as a wolf can smell a trap far underground. Then I thought of getting something that would kill that smell of steel. So I worked and worked, and finally I got it. Now I just smear it over my traps, and plant them, and Mr. Wolf, if he happens to be in the neighborhood of the bait, blunders into the steel and his pelt is mine."

Next to trapping wolves comes trailing them to their dens and slaying them literally in their own castles.

"I don't take any firearms into the den with me," said Jim. "Why, man, it would kill you to fire a revolver in a little place like that. I take a hatchet, to enlarge the sides of the den as I go along, and I carry a long rod to kill the wolf. If Mr. Wolf shows fight I simply jam that rod down his throat, and then finish him with the hatchet. Sometimes if I forget the rod I just jam the hatchet down the wolf's jaws until I can get in a good blow with it. But a wolf hardly ever shows fight, unless it is to snap at you once or twice. Generally there is a little recess at the end of the den, and the wolf will stick its head in this. Thinks if its head is hidden it is safe, I guess. Well, I just reach into the den when I have got to the end of the passage, and grab the wolf by the hind legs and yank it out and kill it. Or maybe I tie a rope to its hind leg, if it is a big fellow, and then pull it back up to the mouth of the den and shoot it."

Jim is noted as the best shot in southern Montana. He carries a heavy old style Winchester and a similarly ancient Colt 45 at his hip. He looks with disfavor on the new automatics and other styles—not that they will not shoot all right, but he simply figures that there is no use going back on weapons that he has tried and knows to be true. And as he has killed silvertips with his revolver, owing to the fact that he knows just where to plant his shots, perhaps there is a good deal to Jim's philosophy.

The stockmen who have huge bands of sheep on the Crow reservation contribute to Jim's exchequer. Not only does he receive the State's liberal bounty, but he gets big pay from the stock owners for his wolf pelts, and he sells the best of the wolf skins at pretty figures. Coyotes bring him no small income also, as these is a bounty on each coyote slain.

HE COLLECTS FAKES.

Little Swindles With Which a Philadelphia Man Amuses Himself.

Advertising fakes are the things that a Philadelphia man collects.

"There are more valuable collections than mine in this world," he says, "but I doubt if there is one which would prove a sure and cerment. My wife says I have thrown away quantities of dimes and quarters on mere foolishness; but when I think of the laughs I have had I consider that the money has been well spent.

"For instance, some one advertised in a number of small farm and country papers some years ago, offering to send for only 25 cents something which would prove a quick and certain death to any number of potato bugs, if used according to directions. I sent a quarter and received this."

He displayed two little blocks of plain, unvarnished pine, upon one of which was pasted a label reading "Place this block on the ground, put the potato bug upon it, then strike it quickly and firmly with the other block. Repeat the operation once for each potato bug in your fields."

Another quarter, forwarded in answer to an advertisement guaranteeing for that price a "sure way to save your gas bills," brought a wire file, such as bills of all sorts are commonly kept upon.

A gem of the collection is an answer received to an advertisement which offered for a quarter to send a sure tip on how to get rich quick. The tip read "Fish for suckers, as we do."

Similar to this is a card received in return for 25 cents sent to learn "how to make money fast." It read, "Glue it to the wall."

In fulfilment of a promise that for a dime one would be told how to make a good impression whenever desiring to do so came the instruction "Sit down real hard in a tub of soft soap."

A little cardboard tray, over the surface of which are pasted diamonds cut from a pack of cards, came in return for 50 cents, which was sent on the strength of an advertisement offering to furnish for that sum a tray of Montana diamonds.

"That is the most expensive exhibit but one in my collection," the Philadelphia man explained. "The only exception is a rifle which was the first of fake advertisements to take me in.

"I was a mere boy then working out on a farm. I read the advertisement, offering a splendid rifle for only $3, and instantly sent three of my hard-earned, hardly saved store.

"I received this little cardboard rifle. With it came a letter: 'Here is your rifle, Willie. Learn your lesson and don't kick. There's lots more in the same fix; besides, experience is cheap at any price.'

"I didn't kick, but I'm afraid I did not learn my lesson. Possibilities of hidden humor had been revealed which appealed to me. I kept the rifle, and years afterward, when I could spend occasional dimes and quarters for amusement, I started my collection."—New York Sun.

Last Words of Actors.

The singular circumstances of Irving's passing remind one of those which attended the last appearance of two other famous exponents of his craft. Irving's "Into Thy Hands"—the last words of his part in "Becket"—has twice before, in the traditions of the stage, been singularly paralleled. When John Palmer, renowned not only as an actor, but as one of the inventors of mail coaches, died, as you may say, on the stage, at Bath, it was upon his utterance of the line in "The Stranger," "There is another and a better world." The facts may not quite fit in the tradition, but that is the tradition.

Later, and probably, within living memory, John Pitt Harley, a famous comedian, was struck down on the stage of the old Princess theatre just after he had remarked, as Bottom: "I have an exposition of sleep come upon me." These were not quite Harley's last words. When they got him into his dressing room they asked him who was his doctor. And he revived sufficiently to answer: "Never had one!" But that "exposition of sleep" stated the case.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Mean Thing.

There is an exceedingly gullible young girl working in a Denver branch telegraph office. She is new at the business, having telegraphed less than a month. Yesterday a young man approached her desk and expressed a desire to know how the instruments worked. With a noticeable air of superior knowledge the girl explained them in detail. Then she sent a message. When she had finished the young man handed her a paper bearing something he had written.

"What will it cost to send that message?" he asked.

She looked at it and blushed. It was a reproduction of the message she had just sent. He had copied it from the instruments.

"So you are an operator too, eh?" she said.

"My dear little girl," replied the youth without cracking a smile "I am Mr. Morse, the man who invented telegraphy." Then he left.

"Oh, he embarrassed me so," said the girl, telling of it later. "Just think there I was explaining telegraphy to the man who invented it."—[illegible]

Precious Swords.

Perhaps the most precious sword inexistence is that of the Gaekwar of Baroda. Its hilt and belt are encrusted with diamonds, rubies and emeralds, and it is valued at $010,000. There are some costly swords in India, and both the czar and the sultan possess jeweled sabres of great price.

Diamonds may be black as well as white, and some are blue, red, brown, yellow, green, pink and orange, but there is no violea diamond, although, in addition to amethysts there are sapphires, rubies and garnets of that color.

The argument is not far-fetched that the government owes it as an obligation to the people to aid in systematic road building in all the States, contributing in this way to the "general wellfare," and futhering the purposes for which government itself is sustained by its loyal citizens. The friends of national aid to road improvement only ask the fair discharge of a government obligation. Write to your Senator and Representative in Congress and impress this point.

J J HAWTHORN.

The campaign of 1906 is fairly opened, and with pleasure we present the portrait of J. J. Hawthorn with the announcement of his candidature for Representative of Chilton county. Born on a farm in Wilcox county in 1840, he had hardly arrived at manhood before the call to arms came and he became a private in the 3d Ala. Cavalry, Hagan's regiment, Allen's brigade, serving four years and five months in the lost cause. In 1892 he was elected by the white people Sheriff of Wilcox county, the only office he has ever held. He organized the State association of sheriffs and was its first president. About two and a half years ago he removed to Chilton County, making his home at Thorsby. Capt. Hawthorn has always been a Democrat, and never joined but two associations—the Confederate army and the Baptist church, in both causes he has been faithful, a good argury for the faithful discharge of his duties to the people of Chilton, if he is nominated and elected as their representative.

CLANTON PUBLIC SCHOOL.

On Monday morning the handsome new building of the Clanton Public School was formally opened, a large number of ladies and citizens being present. The building has been erected at a cost of $3,250 and is amply large to meet the needs of our growing town.

State Supt. I. W. Hill and Dr. J. H. Phillips, Supt. of Birmingham public schools, were present, and made fine encouraging speeches.

At 10:30 a.m. the large hall being fairly well filled, Mr. John C. Dennis, chairman of the proceedings, called upon Judge Reynolds, who made a short and appropriate prayer.

Mr. Dennis said: It gives me great pleasure to welcome you in the first school house owned by the Town of Clanton. I am proud to say it is the best in the county, but it behooves us at the county seat to have the best, that our influence may be felt throughout the county. I am exceedingly glad that we have with us to-day, Supt. I. W. Hill and Dr, Phillips. We will commence with our little guns and afterwards will bring on our big ones. I introduce Thos. A. Curry.

Mr. Curry said: Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: At the opening of school in October last, speaking for the mayor and council, I stated that a new school house would be completed in a few months, and with pleasure I now call your attention to the fulfillment of that statement. We had difficulties to encounter, but undaunted and undismayed we met every discouragement, believing that our cause was right. Surely today marks an epoch in the history of Clanton, today we boast educational activity. We are proud of our achievement, we have builded a temple set upon a hill which cannot be hid. In the coming years we will see the good influence that goes out from within these walls.

Hon. Tipton Mullins said: Under the circumstances today I will make the briefest remarks. It is not every day we have a great number of representative people of Clanton together to discuss matters of interest to us all. I want to say two things, First, on behalf of the school board and our citizens, we most heartily thank the old council for the work they have accomplished. We are willing and anxious to acknowledge you have wrought a great work. Clanton has latent powers, the old council has put in force those powers. One of the first things that marks power in a municipal government is the ability to contract debts. The old council has built this school house without money. I say "Well done thou good and faithful servants." Secondly, responsibility has been placed upon the town. Let it not be said that we are unfaithful to carry on the work. What has been done has been done well

Chairman Dennis then introduced Dr. J. H. Phillips of Birmingham, who said: With pleasure I visit your town to day upon this occasion. The erection of a school in any town marks an epoch in its history. Your town has a glorious past, here you have something that makes a further stepping stone to a more glorious future. You are indeed to be congratulated. It means you are a people who believe in doing—not merely talking, but doing. Doing is the task of the man, the woman, the community, town or State. In order to achieve it must have its desire. What people really want they are going to get. Clanton realized its wants and needs and a majority of the community concentrated upon one want and succeeded in getting this school house. Difficulties had to be overcome; we have kickers in Birmingham, probably you have some here. There are unfortunately men and women who cannot realize the economic value of these schools. The most cultured, the most progressive communities have the best schools. I would enjoin upon the people of Clanton, don't be afraid of building up, of doing things. This building will accomplish much good for this community. Let this building stand as an index of the highest and best that can be found in the confines of Alabama. May God bless this building for all future time Chairman Dennis suggested that the audience sing "Alabama," and it was led off by the children.

Supt. Hill was then introduced and said: Members of the school board and of the conncil, boys and girls, ladies and gentlemen: I come to you today as probably no other man could come. I am in a congratulatory spirit. A year ago I came here to open a school in your neighborhood, and found Clanton desirous of better school facilities. Today the school is here and I congratulate you. You have done well so far, but there are many things yet to be done. I know blackboards will come, they are essental; desks will come, they are necessary. Too many schools stop at the necessaries. Around this building trees and grass should grow. To the ladies especially should be delegated this work. To the good women we look for school improvements, for pictures and the adornment of these walls. I congratulate your board upon the selection of this beautiful and ample site of four acres. The normal nature of your children is developed upon the school ground. You have done well, it will bear its fruit in season. But there are other things you must look to. The teacher has more influence upon your child than anything else. See that you have the best. The very best is not too good for your children. Look well to the selection of your teachers. Cheap things are dear at any price, Get the best teachers and do not quibble at the price. In seeking talent you must pay for it. To the citizens of Chilton I now appeal. I learn in a very short time you are to have an election to vote upon a tax to assist the public schools of your county. It is up to you whether you vote on the side of God or on the side of the Devil.

Prof. Sessions said: I should like to say something of the debt of gratitude we (the teachers) feel on being out of the nerve-racking shriek of the trains. On this hill, in quietude, we feel encouraged to proceed. There are higher heights yet to attain, and I trust that all—teachers and children, council and citizens will all work together for further advancement in the future.

"America" was then sung by the audience.

Chairman Dennis said: Whatever effort the Council has put forth, whatever time we have spent, I feel that today we are fully repaid. I feel that the citizens who have come forward with their means and their words of enconagement realize they are to-day repaid, not to mention the progress in the future. I want to thank Supt. Hill and Dr. Phillips for their presence here to day, and let us all go home with the fixed determination to further advance the cause of education.

Rev. A. C. Swindall offered the closing prayer and the meeting adjourned with many expressions of satisfaction at the auspicious opening of the Clanton public school.

Supt. Hill and Dr. Phillips were entertained at dinner at Latham's Hotel, about twenty citizens being present. Host Latham provided a tasty dinner and the guests made merry while they enjoyed the repast.

A Crowd of Four From Alabama

Bay City, Tex., Dec. 29, 1905

Editor Banner—As several wanted to hear from us, please allow me space to tell them about our visit. This crowd of four consists of Mr E. H. Lowe of Jemison and Mrs. J. B. Marlar of Clanton and Mrs. A. J. Marlar and son Mack C. Marlar of Billingsley. We taken the train at Billingsley on Dec. 19, and moved along alright until we got to Memphis, Tenn., and there we taken the Cotton Belt Route, and it was a slow go from there to Fort Worth, Texas; we had to spend one night in a swamp near Texarkana, Tex. on account of a wrecked train ahead of us, but we got away from there about 9 o'clock a.m. the next day and we moved along alright until about the middle of the evening when our train jumped the track and run for five telegraph poles on the ties, we all put up for the night there in that prairie land. But they soon got the train on the track and away we went. We got to Fort Worth Friday morning just before day, and as the Santa Fe train was seven hours late we made good connection with it and with its well equipped trains and road we moved along about 50 miles per hour and as you all know E. H. Lowe you can imagine how his eyes would open when we would strike those places where you could see for miles and miles and not see a tree, in fact it was a curiosity to us all. We rode all that day until about the middle of the evening where we had to change cars at a little place named Sealy. We missed our train there, so we had to lay over there that night; we got such rough fare and such uncomfortable beds, we claimed among ourselves we lay out that night. But we were up soon the next morning to catch our train to Bay City, where our journey came to an end. We left Sealy at 9 o'clock and got to our destination at 12:33 p.m., and there was one of the happiest meetings among brothers and sisters I thought I ever saw. T. J. Lowe, the son of old man Willis Lowe, one of Chilton county's most honored citizens, left Chilton in November, 1869, and has never been back, and none of his brothers or sisters had ever seen him until we got to Bay City Saturday, Dec. 23, when he met us at the depot and carried us up to his Texas home, and there was another meeting that will be long remembered by us all. We were soon called in to dinner and our appetite was quenched by everything that one could wish for. Soon after dinner the old times began to be talked over and it has been going on ever since.

We were not here long until hunting was mentioned and the continual roar of guns has been going on more or less every day. We have killed lots of ducks and birds but have not killed any deer or bears yet, but will go out on a deer hunt this evening. We went out seining one day on one of the canals on the rice farm nearby; we made what we call seven drags with the seine and caught 200 lbs of fish. That is a right smart fish tale for the Alabamians to believe, but the Texas people say that is nothing. But you ought to have seen Uncle Homer Lowe when we began to bring out the fish in such large quantities, it beat anything I ever saw in Alabama.

We will go back to Alabama about Jan. 9, and then we can tell you more about the fish and will be glad to tell anyone of our trip. We have so much to tell we will not write any more. Hoping to meet with you when we get back and give you all of the outlines.

With best wishes and a happy New Year to the Editor and his many readers of the Banner.

It Quiets the Cough

This is one reason why Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is so valuable in consumption. It stops the wear and tear of useless coughing. But it does more—it controls the inflammation, quiets the fever, soothes, and heals. Sold for 60 years.

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been a regular life preserver to me. It brought me through a severe attack of pneumonia, and I feel that I owe my life to its wonderful curative properties."—WILLIAM H. TRUITT, Wawa, Pa.

LOCAL TAX.

The campaign for local taxation is being waged so quietly that many people are not aware of the fact that we are to have an election upon this question on the 20th of Feb., next.

It is time to discuss the subject that the voters may begin to think and decide how to vote. There may be some dissatisfaction with the new school law which may prejudice the minds of some against further taxation for schools.

While the law may be defective, it is no doubt, better than the old one. It is not an experiment, but is based upon the law of other states which are far ahead of us in educational progress. We have a longer school term and better schools, but there is at present great scarcity of teachers. This is not the fault of the present school law. Supt. I. W. Hill says there are as many licensed teachers now as formerly, but they are not teaching because they can easily find more desirable work, and at better wages. What we need is more money for the schools, that we may have longer terms and be able to make the public schools the best possible for the benefit of our boys and girls.

Thirty-eight counties in Alabama have held elections upon this question and only four have rejected local tax by counties. In Clay county, it is said, only 39 votes were cast against it, and these were illegal. We believe that Chilton will fall in line with these counties in educational progress and give a large majority for the one mill tax.

It is said that all successful public schools in the United States are supported by local taxation. Wisdom, economy, patriotism, and the experience of other older educational systems, all urge this cause.

We have heard it said that "We are too poor to support a good school system." Hereafter we shall hear in ringing tones, "We are too poor not to support such a system."

It has been too common a political teaching that the best government is that which levies the smallest tax. The future will modify that doctrine and teach that a liberal taxation, fairly levied, and properly applied, is the chief work of a civilized people. The savage pays no tax. The rich man and the corporations will not object to local tax for schools, because they know it will not hurt them. Then the poor man or common citizen surely ought not to oppose it, for he is the smallest taxpayer and the greatest beneficiary.

Now, Mr. Editor, we have ventured to open the campaign upon this question. Let us hear from others. We call upon the friends of education to bestir yourselves upon this question and put our county abreast with the foremost in educational development.

FERTILIZERS.

During the next three months there will be several thousand tons of guano sold in this county Clanton alone will sell between two and three thousand tons. This immense sale of guano in the county will mean an outlay of a considerable amount of money—perhaps $150 000. In the f[illegible] this it is strange how blind people go about the purchase of their guano.

When a man changes money he counts the money he gets back to see that the change is made right. When he buys corn he counts his bushels to see that he gets all coming to him; when he buys land he buys by the acre, but when he make his purchase for guano he goes at it in the dark.

Now, I think this will be easy to illustrate. If a man should bring you a silver rock you would want to know what part of it was silver —whether it was ½ or ¼ or 1-10 silver. It is that part of the rock that is silver that we value, and we value it in proportion to the amount of silver it contains. But how different when we go to buy guano. The dealer says, "Here is guano, it is good for $23 00 a ton." The customer has confidence in the dealer and buys. He never questions what part of the guano is made up of fertilizer elements, which is the plant food. These fertilizer elements are available phosphoric acid, ammonia and potash. Without these elements the guano would not be worth one cent. Yet how many there are who could tell if there were any of these elements in their guano, much less what per cent of each it contained. And they are intelligent men too.

Now I say that many intelligent farmers do not understand the guano question. I say it because it is true, and because I would not have anyone who does not understand these things think that it is just because they can't, but rather it is rather because they haven't tried I say "they haven't tried" and I don't like to say that because they would hardly have to "try" to understand it. There are good many farmers who are well posted on the question but I would say nine-tenths are not. Remember there are only three elements to consider in buying guano which are available phosporic acid, amonia and potash. I will tell more about it in the next issue of the Banner, good Editor consenting

PUNY CHILDREN

Words of Interest to Every Mother in Clanton.

"Surely mothers are not to blame for that which they cannot help," said a member of Upchurch Drug co., during a recent interview, "but when we see so many thin, pale faced and puny children on our streets we cannot help feeling that mothers are to blame, and we wish we could tell every mother in Clanton what Vinol will do for her children."

Vinol is not a patent medicine, but it contains in a highly concentrated form all the strength creating and body building elements of cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers, without grease or oil. It does not upset the stomach like old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions, and its taste is so delicious that children love it.

Vinol strengthens the most delicate stomach, makes rich, red blood, builds strong bone structure, creates hard, firm flesh tissue and rosy-cheeked, sturdy children are the inevitable result.

Mrs. Jennie Perse of Mansfield, Ohio, says that her little boy had overstudied and was so run down that he was a mere shadow. Vinol made him a strong, well boy in a remarkably short time.

This well known druggist says, "For both children and adults Vinol is the greatest strength creator, body-builder, and health-restorer we have ever sold, and we will gladly refund the money paid for it in every case where it gives satisfaction." Upchurch Drug co.

Bigger Yields

A given number of acres fertilized with Farmers' Bone produce a greater yield of cotton, than the same acreage with ordinary fertilizer. Farmers' Bone does more than that. It makes it possible to reduce the acreage and increase the yield. Try it this year. The man who uses

There were six of us out coon hunting the other night and caught two coons; the first one we caught had a steel trap to his right four foot and the trap had a chain about a yard long. He was up an oak tree about 75 feet high. It was the first coon hunt I ever was in, but I don't think it will be the last. We had some fine coon dogs and had lots of fun, you bet.

SACRIFICE OF Unloved Libby.

Libby Anderson hung the dishcloth on its accustomed nail, and stood there surveying it. It was plain, from the way she looked that she had determined to speak.

"Ma," she asked of the woman who was sitting before the little round stove, "what was those papers Dave put in his pocket as I came in?"

"Some things he was showin' me."

"Ma," she asked quiveringly, "you didn't sign anything, did you?"

"I didn't sign your name to anything." And the needles clashed again.

She knew her mother too well to press further.

"I just couldn't understand Dave coming here this time of year," she ventured; "and I thought he acted queer."

The old woman was folding her knitting.

"I'm going to bed and you'd better come along too," was her reply.

A week went by, and although Libby had twice forgotten to feed the chickens and had several times let the kettle burn dry, she was beginning to feel more settled in her mind.

She did up the work one morning and went to town.

Her first call was at the solicitor's, and there she heard the worst. Ma had assigned her home to Dave. She did not make any fuss; she was too old fashioned for hysterics.

It was not until the old place came in sight that she broke down.

"It's not fair," she cried out, "when I've stayed here and worked—it's not fair!" And, for the first time in many years she was crying, passionately crying.

It was a feeling of outraged justice that made her speak, for she was just a woman—the daughter of pa.

"Ma," she said, "do you think pa would like to think of your assigning the place to Dave, when I've stayed here and kept it up the best I could for twenty years?"

The old woman put down her knitting.

"La, now, Libby," she said, not unkindly, "don't take on. You'll never want for nothin'!"

Libby stood there looking at her.

"I think you don't realize what you've done," she said, and turned to the bedroom to take off her things.

It was not until the next month, the blustering month of March, that all was made clear. It was early in the afternoon when Libby looked from the window and saw a man coming in at the big gate.

"That friend of Dave's from the city is coming, ma," she said.

"Gracious!" exclaimed Mrs. Anderson, "and such a day as 'tis!"

The stranger warmed his hands, and disbursed a number of pleasantries.

"Well, Mrs. Anderson," he said, finally, "your son wants me to make a little proposition to you."

Mrs. Anderson looked pleasantly expectant.

"Dave's always makin' propositions," she chuckled.

"He's been a good deal worried about you this winter—afraid you were not just comfortable out here—you two all alone."

"Dave's always thinkin' of his mother's comfort," she assented, and looked triumphantly over to Libby.

"Well," he resumed, turning his back to the older woman, "It worries Dave to think of your being out here alone now that you're getting along in years, so he's rented a nice little place in town, and he feels sure it would be better all around if you'd just go in and take it."

"If that ain't for all the world like Dave!—always some new idea in his head. But you tell him, Mr. Murray, not to be bothering. We don't want to move in town—do we Libby?"

"Not if we can help it," she replied.

"Dave's been away from the place so long that he don't see how 'tis," Ma explained. "Libby and me wouldn't feel at home no place else."

"It's too bad you feel that way," he went on persuasively, "for Dave was so sure you'd like the idea that he's gone ahead and made all arrangements, and I'm afraid there might be a little trouble about unmaking them."

He turned to Libby.

"How soon do you think you could move? By the first of May?"

"I suppose so," she answered in a dull voice.

April came, and for the fiftieth time the old woman watched the white give way to the green on the hills that curved in and out around her old home.

As long as she could, Libby let her have her dream. Her heart was not hard toward Ma now. Ma had not understood. And Libby was glad she could have those few springs days before she was torn from the old home.

"Ma," she began one morning, "I think I will have to be packing up this week."

"Packing up what?"

"Why, don't you remember, Ma, we are going to town the first of May?"

"Oh, la, Libby! I've give that up long ago! I'm going to die on the old place."

"But you know, Ma, the arrangements have all been made. I'm afraid we'll have to go."

She turned to her crossly.

"There's no use to argue wi' me, Libby Anderson. I ain't goin'!"

"But what about Dave?"

"You can jest write Dave and say his mother don't want to leave the place. Dave won't have nothin' further to say."

She looked off at the meadowland as if it were all settled. Libby would have to tell her.

"Ma," she said, "it's no use to write to Dave."

"Why not?" she demanded in a half frightened, half aggressive voice.

"He's sold the place, Ma."

"What's that you say? Something about Dave selling my place? Are you gone crazy, Libby?"

"You know you deeded it to him, Ma. It was his after you did that. And he's sold it, and we'll have to move out."

Hearing no answer she turned around, and it was then she coveted Dave's gift of saying things smoothly. The old woman was crouched low in her chair, and her face was quivering, and looked sunken and gray.

"I didn't think he'd do that," she faltered.

"Never mind, Ma," Libby said awkwardly. "Poor Ma!"

It was the nearest to a caress that had passed between them since Libby was a little girl.

Nothing more was said until after Ma had gone to bed. Libby supposed she was asleep, when she called quaveringly to her.

"Libby," she said, "you mustn't be thinkin' hard of Dave. He must have thought it for the best."

Libby was used to caring for Ma, and she needed care now.

"Yes, Ma," she answered, "I'm sure he must."

It was not until the morning of the fourth day that the silence between them was broken. Libby got up to take down the clock, when she heard a strange noise behind her, and turning she saw that Ma's head was down low in her hands, and she was rocking passionately back and forward and crying as though her old heart had broken.

She put down the clock, and again she wished for a little of Dave's silkiness of speech. But she did not have it, and the best she could do was to pull Ma's chair out from the barren room into the sunshine of the porch. The hills, she thought, would still look like home.

Ma did not get up at all the next day. Perhaps she was ill, or perhaps it was only that she did not want to go out in the siting room and see how unlike home it looked. But the next day she did not get up either, and then Libby went to town for the doctor. He said the excitement had weakened her, and did not seem very certain she would ever get up again. That night Libby wrote a letter to Dave, asking him again to let his mother die on the old place. A week passed and an answer had not come, and still Ma had not left her bed. The packing was all done, it was just the first of May and she was just waiting—she did not know for what.

Her whole soul rose up against moving Ma from the old place now, when her days were so surely numbered, and so she sent a telegram to Dave, telling him his mother was ill and asking leave to stay a little longer. There came a reply from his partner, saying that Dave was away and would not be home for two weeks.

That night the old woman raised herself and sobbed out the truth.

"It's Dave that's killin' me! It's to think Dave sold the place and turned me out to die!"

The disinherited child wrote a letter that night and to it she signed her brother's name. Out in the world they might have applied to it an ugly word, but Libby was only caring for Ma. She was a long time about it, for it was hard to put things in Dave's round, bold hand, and it was hard to say them in his silky way.

The doctor said next morning that it was a matter of but a few days at most, for Ma was much worse.

"It ain't that I'm goin' to die," she said, when Libby came in and found her crying, "but I was thinkin' of Dave. I keep thinkin' and thinkin' of him when he was a little boy and how he used to run about the place and how pretty he used to look; and then, just as I begin to take a little comfort in rememberin' some of the smart things he said, I have to think what he has done, and it does seem that he might have waited till—" But the words were too bitter to be spoken, and with a hard, scraping sound in her throat she turned her face to the wall.

Libby put her hand to something in her pocket and thought of last night's work with thankfulness.

About 11 o'clock she entered the room with the sheets of a letter in her hand.

"Ma," she said, tremulously, "here's a letter just come from Dave."

"I knew it'd come—I knew it!" And the old voice filled the room with its triumphant ring. Then there crept into her face an anxious look. "What does he say?"

"He's sorry about selling the place, Ma. He really thought you'd like it better in town. But he's fixed it up for us to stay. He says you'll never have to leave the place."

"I knowed it—I knowed it well enough! You don't know Dave like I do. But read me the letter."

She did read it, and the old woman listened with tears—glad tears now—falling over her withered cheeks.

"You can just unpack our things," she cried, when it was finished, "and get this place straightened out. The idea of your packin' up, and thinkin' we was goin' to move to town! Nice mess you've made of it! Jest as if Dave would hear of us leavin' the place. I always knowed you never 'preciated Dave."

Before morning broke Ma was dead. Happy, because she had back her old faith in Dave—the blind, beautiful faith of the mother in her son. And Libby—the homeless and unloved Libby—was happy, too, for she had finished well her work of caring for Ma.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

FARM LESSONS FOR CHILDREN.

Western States Making Agriculture a Primary School Study.

Under a law in this State, writes the Lincoln (Neb). correspondent of the New York Sun, all teachers in the primary and secondary grades must be able to impart the rudiments of agriculture to their pupils, to tell them something of the soil, its constituents, its culture, how it is seeded and how the crops are harvested. It is not supposed that every teacher will be able to farm, neither is it proposed to make of every pupil a practical agriculturist. The aim is to instill into the minds of the children a love and respect for agriculture, to make plain its possibilities, and in the end to make more farmers.

This new departure has come rather from the farmers than from the educators, although the latter have been quick to see the advantages of the new system. Scattered through the West are thousands of men who have made comfortable fortunes at farming. They like their vocation and they believe more men ought to be pursuing it. They believe also that there will never be much else in the West than farming, and that the thing to do is to shape the educational policy of this section so as to produce more farmers and fewer professional men.

Some Western States have established experimental high schools where agriculture is taught to advanced pupils. These have not been very successful. The error lay in not beginning the instruction in the lower grades. That mistake is now to be remedied. The advocates of the new plan insist that the present educational system has turned out too many trained dreamers and trained thinkers, and that it is high time that its product be trained doers.

Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska universities have been offering for several years normal courses in agriculture for teachers who desire to or must give such instruction. This step has received the recognition of State superintendents, who award certificates on the agreement to accept satisfactory work in agriculture in lieu of any science. The result has been to interest many teachers and to give risers to chairs of agriculture in the State normal schools. Other nearby States are following suit.

In Colorado Senator Patterson has offered $2,500 in gold as prizes to be distributed among the children of the State for the best cereal seed raised within the next three years. The competition is open to every boy or girl under eighteen.

In Nebraska and Kansas, two great corn States, corn improvement is the end sought. Back of the movement is the influence of the State College of Agriculture, the farmers' institutes, the Corn Improver's Association and the agricultural shows. In forty-two counties this year competitions have been held, the object of which is to induce the boys and girls to study the principles and conditions of plant growth. The public schools have in many instances taken up the work of corn growing under the direction of the county superintendent. In some the Farmers' Institute Association of the neighborhood or of the county has organized corn growing contests and arranged for a list of prizes. In others the teachers have urged the boys to grow a patch to exhibit it at the school when harvested the next fall. The merchants and business men generally of the small towns have caught the spirit and offered prizes.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. LUTHER R. DYOTT.

Subject: Sure Foundations.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—The Rev. Luther R. Dyott, pastor of the United Congregational Church, preached Sunday morning on "The Indestructible Foundations." He took his texts from Psalms xi:3: "If the foundations be destroyed, what can the righteous do?" Hebrews xi:1 (revised version): "Faith is the assurance of things hoped for, the proving of things not seen." II Timothy 1:11 (revised version): "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to guard that which I have committed unto Him against that day." Mr. Dyott said:

We seek the solid and safe in the things of the unseen world. This is of supreme importance. Other things in this connection are relatively important. They are to be thought of, and appreciated, and even sought, found and kept. We must have them. Room for the active life of a growing belief is indispensable. A place for the sweet and sustaining comforts of the larger hope of humanity is desirable. The garniture of refined and immortal love is ever to be regarded as more than a mere luxury of the inner life. Other work is important; but only so to a comparative degree.

Tedious and temporary is the task of the theologian. Unsatisfactory is the task of the creed-maker. Small is the task where "jarring sectaries" learn their selfish interest to discern, and, not unfrequently, to become irreligious in the name of religion. Spasmodic the task, and thankless the effort of the iconoclast. Feverish and fitful, though somewhat sensational and imperious, is the task of the scientist. But all who are concerned about building character upon indestructible foundations and are actively engaged in this work, are realizing that which is of supreme importance, as day by day, hour by hour, moment by moment, rises that "house not made with hands." Here we must toil with clear understanding, magnificent courage and untiring patience. Here we must be serious and certain.

It is a fine intimation and a hopeful indication that, in some respects, at least, we are equal to the demands. We do desire foundations which cannot be destroyed. Here we are serious enough when we are serious at all. We do not wish to be deceived with reference to these things. We deliberately prefer not to have our fountains of life poisoned. We object to the destruction of the foundations of belief. Error, falsehood, deceit are bad enough anywhere, but they do the most harm if admitted into the affairs of religion. He who poisons my body may only affect the place where my real life sojourns for a little while, but he who poisons my mind and my soul does me untold harm for eternity. He and I may never be able to make satisfactory repairs of some kinds of destructive work. Most of us think so. We do desire the solid and safe things of the immutable verities of truth which will stand the tests. "If the foundations be destroyed what can the righteous do?"

The strongest emphasis of our times, especially in matters of religion, is being placed upon the demand for the real. Notwithstanding the prevalent superficiality of our age, the quick sales of birth-rights for pottage, the heated passion for pleasure, the gaudy show of those who "glory in appearance and not in heart;" notwithstanding the fact that we are living in "grievous times" when so many are "lovers of self, lovers of money, boastful, haughty, railers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affections, implacable, slanderers, without self-control, fierce, no lovers of good, traitors, headstrong, puffed up, lovers of pleasure rather than lovers of God, holding a form of godliness but denying the power thereof;" notwithstanding the fact that in the very church, itself, there are certain oscillatory movements calculated to perturb the life of some believers; notwithstanding all these things, and many more, still the underlying current is toward the fuller and freer life, and the immediate and increasing demand in the religious life is of the "assurance of things hoped for, the proving of things not seen," and for that certitude of knowledge which enables the individual believer to stand upon some indestructible foundation and say, "I know whom I have believed, and am persuaded that He is able to guard that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

Good is deeper than evil even in persons who do not profess to be good. The oscillations of belief may be permitted of God Himself, and end in doing much good for the common faith of Christendom. The unsettled condition of certain moods of faith may only reveal at last that there are some things which can not be shaken and must remain. God may be permitting the shaking up in order that we may have the removing of those things that are shaken, as of things that are made, that those things which can not be shaken may remain. Ours has been called an "age of doubt," but the evidence and proof of the claim are not altogether satisfactory. Professor James says: "Our religious life lies more, and our practical life less, than it used to on the perilous edge." But does not the professor attempt to draw a distinction where no distinction belongs?

Is not our religious life, in fact and in fine, a practical life? Are not the most practical deeds in the world born of religion? Good life, good thoughts, good words, good deeds belong to religion whether they be done in this or that church, or bear no ecclesiastical stamp at all. Reality is at a premium in the religion of to-day. Let us believe that the demand for the real, the desire to investigate, the new statements of old truths, the rewriting of some theology, the revising of some creed, the call for a new adjustment of things, do not invariably imply the existence of doubt and the destruction of the foundations of belief. If, indeed, this be doubt, then it is not the kind of doubt that we need to fear. If these things destroy our foundations, it will prove nothing more than that we were on temporary and destructible foundations, when we should have had something better.

King calls our attention to the fact that "just as the acceptance of the principle of the correlation of forces called for a rewriting of physics—a new physics, or the theory of evolution for the rewriting of biology—a new biology, so, in the same sense, the acceptance of certain great convictions of our day calls for a rewriting of theology—a new theology." Call it a new theology if you will, but do not let prejudice blind you to truth, no matter from which direction truth may come. A thing is true not because its statement is old, nor yet because that statement is new, but because it conforms to the great fact, or facts, for which that truth stands. The great fact, or facts, back of the truth and its statements, do not change. Theological statements and systems may change. Some persons may become angry, others frightened, and still others foolishly and flippantly declare that they have no theology, but, in the meantime, theology remains the greatest science in the universe, even the science of God and divine things, based upon a revelation made of God, through Jesus Christ, and that science, itself as such, does not change.

God's foundations are firm amid all the mutations which mark the history of the human race, amid all the storms and shocks; amid all the disintegrating agencies; amid the rise and fall of empires, amid the birth, the growth, maturity, the old age and death of nations; amid things present and things to come, life and death, in spite of everything that may oppose, or assail, belief, character, hope, love, incorruptible life all may have perfectly indestructible foundations. What are some of these foundations? Religious experience; that is an experience of God in the soul of man is an indestructible foundation. Such experience is knowledge derived from fact and abiding in spiritual consciousness. "God is a spirit." Man is a spirit. There is possible contact and communion here. There is the possibility of the best knowledge in the world right here. Fact, evidence, proofs, knowledge, they are all here. Knowledge has found the proof; proof implies the existence of the evidence, evidence implies the existence and reality of the fact, while the primary datum abides in experience.

When a man has a religious experience then he has an indestructible foundation. He cannot then be morally ignorant. He knows something. That which a man sees may deceive him. That which he hears may not always be so, but that which he knows, he knows, and no man can take it from him. He is upon a foundation which cannot be destroyed. Then faith finds her best function in establishing the fact, in dealing in the great unseen realities which are always more than the seen, in giving the "assurance of things hoped for, in proving things not seen." A man cannot subject such an experience to the test of the natural senses. It is too large for such a test as that, but he knows he is right, and he knows he is upon an indestructible foundation. It is not only our knowledge of God. There is another indestructible foundation in His knowledge of us. It is written: "Howbeit the firm foundation of God standeth, having this seal, the Lord knoweth them that are His." He cannot mistake. We could not deceive Him, even though we might deceive others, or be deceived by what we might suppose to be experience, even religious experience, even though we might deceive ourselves, God knows. Of this we are certain. He knows us perfectly. If we are His, He knows it. If we are not His, by the regeneration of the Holy Spirit, we may become His. He will know. He will cause us to know it. "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear Him." He desires it to be there.

Every man has just as much right to know that he is alive spiritually as he does that he is alive physically. This knowledge is brought to us in the witness of God's spirit. Thus it is that we go deeper than religious experience and find another foundation in that firm foundation of God—His knowledge of us. Jesus Christ is another foundation. He is our chief cornerstone. The ideals He holds, His simplicity, His grandeur, His humanity, His Deity, His faith, His love, His life—all combine to make Him the perfectly incomparable one among all religious teachers; and while in a certain profound sense Christ and Christianity are one and inseparable, there is still another sense in which Christ, as our foundation, is more than Christianity, even as the sun is more than the multitudinous rays which fall upon our little portion of the earth; Christ is more than Christianity, as the thinker is more than his thought, as life is more than that which embodies life. We build, as Christians, not upon this or that creed about Christ, but upon Christ Himself. He is our indestructible foundation. Our faith rests at last, not in a creed, though we should all have a creed, and not in a book, though we can never do without the Bible, but in a person, and that person, Christ, places our lives upon God.

Let us resolve to go deeper, deeper. If we are at all unsettled in matters of religion, we should not despair. We can find the solid and the safe. Let us build there. Let us build according to the plans of the Supreme Architect of the universe. Let all build until humanity shall become a temple complete, filled with the light and music of Heaven, filled with the life of God; and then, even though storms may come and the last night fall about us, it will only be the servant of a new day, and we shall be able to say, "I know whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to guard that which I have committed unto Him against that day." Our foundations cannot be destroyed. Thank God!

The Talent That Multiplies.

God blesses you that you may be a blessing to others. Then He blesses you also a second time in being a blessing to others. It is the talent that is used that multiplies.

Receiving, unless one gives in turn, makes one full and proud and selfish. Give out the best of your life in the Master's name for the good of others. Lend a hand to every one who needs. Be ready to serve at any cost those who require your service. Seek to be a blessing to every one who comes for but a moment under your influence. This is to be angel-like. It is to be God-like. It is to be Christ-like. We are in this world to be useful. God wants to pass His gifts and blessings through us to others. When we fail as His messengers, we fail of our mission.—Scottish Reformer.

Useless 'Varsity Men?

A remarkable appeal for reform of the system of university education is made by the "Granta," the "Punch" of the Cambridge world, which declares that the existing training provided for students fits them for scarcely any useful calling in life.

"Turn to the first Cambridge man you meet," the "Granta" says, "and ask him what he intends to do with himself when he 'goes down,' and he will unhesitatingly reply: 'I haven't the faintest notion.'

"Let us answer the question for him. He will depart from the university, in nine out of ten cases, having gleaned nothing but a most comprehensive knowledge of good and evil.

"He may try several professions, but they are overcrowded, and for any business post his training has eminently unfitted him, so in despair he will accept the position of assistant mathematical master in some private school at a salary of $400 a year, including board and lodging!

"Or, if he be lucky enough to scrape through his 'theological special,' he may in time attain to the eminence of a country parson, with a wife and six children, whom he must feed, clothe and keep on the princely sum of $1,500 per annum.

"The percentage of university men who ever 'do any good in life' is infinitismal. Go to Australia, Africa, China and to the uttermost parts of the earth, and there you will find men of gentle breeding, who have taken their degrees at Oxford and Cambridge, living the lives of laborers, beggars and outcasts.

"Our life up here, at any rate to most of us, gives no time for thought.

"It should be remembered that we are not speaking of the comparatively few men who will plod on steadily to their goal, nor yet of the brilliant butterflies who dazzle our sight for a moment and then disappear from human sight forever, but of the vast majority of men up here who take a third-class in their tripos, and with this cardboard sword in their hands go forth to battle with the stern realities of life."—London Express.

Once the fashion-plates were scarecrows with the slimmest, wasp-like waists
But the modern magazines have improved artistic tastes
Now instead of awful drawings made by men who couldn't draw
There are photographic half-tones free from any sort of flaw
To such lengths have they proceeded with this system nice and new
That it's hard to tell a portrait from a 'side and back breadth view
And there's many a sharp surprise that for the dear old fogy waits
Since they've got to using photographs of folks for fashion plates.

See the picture in the paper, of a lady fair and sweet—
Just the very sort of person that the fellows like to meet Fluffy tresses crown her forehead, she's a
While the witching imps of mischief neath her lowered lashes gleam
Then you bring the paper closer, so's to
She's "a dark blue velvet costume, with a jacket of the same"
Other blows as hard as this one make us curse the foolish fates
Since they've got to using photographs of folks for fashion plates.

There's a girl that simply ravishing, with eyes that fairly speak
She's "a princesse gown of pink and white that's trimmed with lace antique There's another clad for comfort in a long and clinging sacque—She's "a robe de nuit embellished with some shirring at the back"
There's a matronly-like person with a brow of classic height—
She's "a handsome walking costume gathered bias at the right"
Thus we helpless men are maddened by these rare and nameless baits
Since they've got to using photographs of folks for fashion plates.

"No, I never go to vaudeville shows," said the collector, refusing the invitation. "Why not?" asked his friend. "Because I've had enough of it. In my business most everybody gives me a 'song and dance' of one kind or another!"—Detroit Free Press.

Oldest Dwellings in Europe.

One of the very earliest human settlements in Europe is Roche Corbon, on the banks of the Loire, seven miles above Tours. Here limestone cliffs stretch for miles and are pigeonholed with caves, which are on different levels and open onto terraces. When the rest of the country was nothing but forest land Roche Corbon was a thriving settlement inhabited by wild skin-clad predecessors of the present cave dwellers. These terraces and caves were formed by the action of mighty rivers, and during the glacial period, when the climate of that portion of France was very severe, man drove out the bears and hyenas and took refuge in these natural shelters, which faced south, and so became human settlements of a primitive sort. Near at hand were the rivers and great forests full of fish and game.

Modern Grafting.

On a small branch railroad of Eastern Kansas there is run a mixed train of one passenger coach and any number of freight and stock cars. The conductor is known to every one living along the line, and passengers seldom buy tickets. Some give a pleasant smile in return for transportation, and others give whatever they please. The conductor seldom looks at the money, but conveys it at once into his pocket.

"How much money do you turn in to the company, anyway?" a friend once asked the conductor.

"Why, I throw it up into the air and all that sticks to the bell rope I turn in," was the reply.

"But aren't you afraid the company will suspect they are boding the sack?"

"I can't afford to be afraid. None but the brave deserve the fare, you know."

That settled it.—Kansas City Times.

LOST EYESIGHT Through Coffee Drinking.

[illegible] on the statements [illegible] delicate nerves of [illegible] body [illegible] experience with [illegible] the general statement [illegible] and physicians have records of [illegible] of cases that add to the testimony.

[illegible] following [illegible] from the Rockford Register-Gazette:

[illegible] William [illegible], of Aurora, [illegible] been [illegible] one of the queerest cases of [illegible] eyesight ever in history. [illegible] patient, O. A. Leach, of Beach County, and [illegible] the last four months he [illegible] doctored with all of the specialists [illegible] county, and has at last reached home with the fact impressed on his mind that his case is incurable. [illegible] portion of the optic nerve has been ruined, rendering his sight so limited that he is unable to see anything before him, but he can see plainly anything at the side of him. There have been but few cases of its kind before, and they have been caused by whisky or tobacco. Leach has never used either, but has been a great coffee drinker, and the specialists have decided that the case has been caused by this. Leach stated himself that for several years he had drank three cups of coffee for breakfast, two at noon and one at night. According to the records of the specialists of this country this is the first case ever caused by the use of coffee.

The nerve is ruined beyond aid and his case is incurable. The fact that makes the case a queer one is that the sight forward has been lost and the side sight has been retained. According to the doctor's statement the young man will have to give up coffee or the rest of his sight will follow and the entire nerve be ruined.—Register Gazette.

Let it be remembered that the eyes may be attacked in one case and the stomach in another, while in others it may be kidneys, heart, bowels or general nervous prostration. The remedy is obvious and should be adopted before too late.

Quit coffee if you show incipient disease.

It is easy if one can have well-boiled Postum Food Coffee to serve for the hot morning beverage. The withdrawal of the old kind of coffee that is doing the harm and the supply of the elements in the Postum, which Nature uses to rebuild the broken down nerve cells, insures a quick return to the old joy of strength and health, and it's well worth while to be able again to "do things" and feel well. A P[illegible] Interest

Dear Editor: In the view [illegible] I [illegible] of the condition of educational interest in some districts of Chilton county, I desire to speak a few words along this line to the readers of the Banner, through its columns.

We know that it is [illegible] natural for a child to grow up exactly as they have been taught. Just as a sheep will follow a shepherd, so will a child follow its parents. If he is taught to take a higher view of life, and the necessity of beginning early in life to promote himself, he will always be on the smooth gliding step toward success. On the other hand, if no effort is made to show him the grand and beautiful things which are pointed out to him on the path of an educated mind, he will drift away from a respected child to an unrespected man and finally result in a poor, wicked failure in life.

Children, in their young and energetic stage, must have some kind of employment. If they are not engaged in reading, writing or some other branch of development, they must be engaged in something that is of less importance. It seems that some parents are not interested in the cultivation of the precious minds which God has entrusted in the bodies of their children. The parents or guardians who starves the minds of the little ones that God has entrusted to their care, commits a greater crime than they who starve their bodies. The body will die and return to its native elements, but the soul and mind will live forever. Will any father, with intelligence enough to think, dare take the responsibility of sending his children before God with ignorant, dwarfed and undevloped souls? Knowledge is essential to right living, to honesty, to justice and to success, and parents who neglect to educate their children will certainly be held responsible before the bar of God for the evil which they may commit in consequence of their neglect.

Some parents say they haven't the money to spend to send their children to school. This is an awful poor excuse, almost no excuse at all, but some people are really hunting for some excuse to make to the teacher and just use this because it is easy to find. Some parents say "My children must work and I just simply can't spare them from my work to go to school four or five months in the year." Yes, and some in the rural districts will not send even one month regular without stopping their children to do a few days work, which they could easily do themselves, by trying.

People, we are not interested. We are not awake to the sense of our God given duty. My dear people, we all know that life is a very short time. The children of to-day have only a short time to exist and then they must pass away. Why should they not be educated so they may spend a few happy years here on earth?

I pray God's blessing upon parents who are indifferent about the future wellfare of their children and will not spend a few dollars or days' work to better prepare them for the battle of life which they must meet. Now, teachers, parents and guardianes, let us come together and work for the one great cause. Let us dwell together in unity and work for the advancement of our county; to the good of the State, as a whole. May God speed the day when everybody will feel their own duties and do them in regard to educating their children.

Thanking the Banner for its kindness, I am, respectfully,

JEROME WILLIAMS.

Editor Banner—Please allow me just a little space in your valuable paper, if you please. My best wishes to old Chilton. Just a few words to you all, letting you know how the Belle Sumter boys are enjoying themselves. Miss Lula Williams and little brother Will of Billingsley visited Mr. J. T. Jones near Clanton last Saturday.

The best dance that has ever been in Chilton county was at Mr. J. B. Williams the 19th inst., a large crowd enjoyed it. The music was fine; made by Miss Emmil and Mr. Jack Culp. Come again Miss Emmil; we gladly welcome you and your father here. When we have a dance we will call on Mr. J. P. Culp and Mr. J B. Williams to help us out.

I will close with best wishes to the dear old Banner.

Billingsley.

Well I have just returned from a visit to Mr. E. H. Lowe and family of Jemison, an uncle of the writer. They gave me an entertainment and invited the young men and ladies, and I must say it was one of the most enjoyable times of my life. A young man like myself would enjoy a visit to Jemison even if he could just see the young ladies of that place, to say nothing about getting to talk to them. I will say to any young man that is looking for a future companion to go to Jemison first and if he don't succeed in finding one there that will suit him, I don't know where to tell him to go next.

As usual, the farmers have begun to haul out their fertilizer and it has began to rain, so look out, good roads, they will make bad ones out of you.

Miss Gerusha Marlar of Clanton is visiting friends and relatives at Billingsley

Mr J. R. Langley is having a fine house erected in Billingsley.

Billingsley is somewhat on a boom, there are several nice houses being built in our midst.

Will say to all of the young ladies, if you are out of a place to visit, please come to Billingsley, for we have no young ladies here. With good wishes to all

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. the Best Made

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Cora Walker of Porterville, California. There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventative of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other. The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

MRS. MARTIN'S DINING.

On Saturday evening the handsome parlor and spacious dining room of Mr. and Mrs. R H. Martin was a scene of social brilliancy and pleasure. Several guests assembled upon invitation of Mrs. Martin to enjoy the evening with her visitors, viz.: Dr. and Mrs. Kelley of Oklahoma; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kelly, of Selma. The above mentioned gentlemen are Mrs. Martin's only brothers.

It was a six o'clock dinner given after the manner of the old country. "We are getting more English you know." The principal feature of the evening was music. Mrs. Dr. Kelly, who is an accomplished pianist, honored the guests with delightful music which was well rendered and highly appreciated. Mr. Frank Kelly, who has an improved graphophone, kindly entertained the guests with some rich selections.

The following is the menu served in four courses, and to say that it would suit "the palate of the most fastidious" would be acknowledged by any adept epicurian: Blue points, pickels, crackers, oyster soup, olives, crackers, chicken salad, olives, rolls, hot chocolate, cakes.

The rest of the evening was spent in pleasant conversation. The gentlemen were dispensed with formality and allowed to indulge in an after dinner smoke and at the same time enjoy (?) the tete-a-tete with the ladies. Good nights were said reluctantly, and one and all thanked their charming host and hostess for the most pleasant evening of the new year. SUBSCRIBER.

PINEAPPLE IS HEALTHFUL.

Juice of This Fruit Acts as an Aid to the Digestive Organs.

If the virtues ascribed to the pineapple, by The Florida Christian Advocate, are not exaggerated, there ought to be a good market for the juice of the over ripe pineapples which go to waste every year. If so good for indigestion the canned juice will be in demand as soon as the fact becomes generally known.

Pineapple juice bids fair to take the place of the pepsin as an encourager of digestion. Recent investigations have shown that for such a purpose it is wonderfully efficacious, rivaling if it does not excel the product of poor piggy.

If a piece of ordinary beefsteak be placed in a bowl of pineapple juice, it is found after a few hours, to be reduced to a lump of mere jelly, having undergone a process of digestion. In the same way the juice, when drank, acts upon the food of the stomach, and is capable, it is authoritatively stated, of digesting something like a thousand times its own weight of edible substances.

Now, the reason back of these facts is that the juice of the pineapple contains an "enzym," a species of ferment, which attacks the beefsteak or other food, and disorganizes it. It is such an extremely powerful ferment that, acting much in the same way as pepsin, it will, in the course of a few hours, cause substances upon which it works to dissolve and melt away. The name "bromelin" has been given to it by science.

It is extremely easy to separate the digestive principle from the pineapple juice. All you have to do is to take some of the juice and dissolve a tablespoonful or so of common table salt in it. This will cause the digestive stuff to fall to the bottom of the receptacle, when it may be easily separated. A good-sized pineapple will contain more than a pint of juice—a quantity which is amply sufficient to help in the digestion of half a dozen hearty meals.

How powerful it is may be judged from the fact that a single slice of the fruit, laid upon a raw beefsteak, will, in a very short time, change the consistency of the surface to that of a jelly. But it should be realized that cooking destroys the "enzym," and that the only way to get the benefit of the digestive ferment is to eat the pineapple in the natural state.

The Interview That Failed.

Following the somewhat indistinct directions of a small and impertinent errand boy, we sought out the Great Man's chambers, and knocked at the Great Man's door. Receiving no answer or assistance from within, we admitted ourselves, and beheld the Great Man seated at his desk, with his back towards us. For a while we stood unobserved, till at last, by coughing for a third time with offensive noisiness, we attracted his attention.

Without turning around, he addressed us in the following gracious and outspoken manner . . . . . "I have paid my Income Tax, I cannot give you bread, money or hospital tickets, nor do I stand in need of anybody's backache pills. You need not, therefore, stay."

"Excuse us," we replied, "we are not tax collectors, beggars or touts."

"In any case," he said, "you will find the door behind you."

Encouraged by this genial welcome, we proceeded to the object of our visit, and arranging in our minds a series of questions as to the Great Man's past, present and probable future, his own, his wife's, his children's, and his servants' domestic pets, we opened with the usual question: "You are, we believe, the renowned Mr. Ettseterer?"

"I am," he replied, "not."

Feeling that further interrogation was as unnecessary as it would be impolite, we wished our host a cordial "Good-night," and, whistling merrily, took our leave.—Punch.

The Man With the Grievance.

I suppose that there never was such a flourishing time as the present for men with a grievance. The daily and weekly journals eagerly welcome letters complaining of the increase of corpulence, the pitfalls of the split infinitive, the prevalence of the red tie among the lower class, the carelessness of the younger generation in dotting its i's, and other equally dreadful abuses which do not matter one way or another. If one were not an incorrigible optimist one would be inclined to agree with the writers of these letters, who are for the most part men of enforced leisure and idle hands, that England is rapidly about to decline and fall.—London World.

Governmental Wisdom.

New South Wales, the most progressive State of the Australian Commonwealth, has for years been building up its population and productive capacity by advertising its natural resources, climatic advantages and commercial opportunities throughout the world. One branch of its publicity campaign is conducted by a salaried press agent, who supplies thousands of newspapers in Europe and America with New South Wales prosperity pabulum. His Government has learned by experience the value of newspaper advertising.—Philadelphia Record.

Persia Demands Constitution.

St. Petersburg.—A constitutional government for Persia, according to advices from Teheran received here, is to be the outcome of the sudden exodus of a thousand merchants and Mullah priests from the Persian capital as a protest against the Shah government. The insurgents proceeded to the village of Shah Abdul-Azim, where the Shah presided over a representative assembly perfected by the Mullahs, merchants and land owners. The assembly will be called the "house of justice," and exercise administrative and legislative powers. The equality of all before the law will be proclaimed. It is expected that the assembly will demand the dismissal of M. J. Naus, the Belgian minister of customs and posts and the Belgian employes of the customs.

Tried to Poison; Stole a Wife.

Gainesville, Ga.—Rev. J. W. Austin, at one time pastor of the Methodist church at Belton, near Gainesville, was placed in the county jail here yesterday, having been arrested and brought here from Gwinnett county, charged with attempting to poison Hon. Bob Quillian, of Belton. It is alleged that Rev. Mr. Austin gave Mr. Quillian a medicated apple while at camp meeting at Poplar Springs last summer, Mr. Austin preaching a sermon a few minutes after giving Mr. Quillian the apple, which made the latter violently ill. A few months later Mr. Austin resigned from the North Georgia Methodist conference and suddenly left Hall county. About the same time the wife of Mr. Quillian left home and has not been since seen in Belton.

Explosion of Hotel Boiler.

Chicago.—A panic among the guests of the Windermere hotel, Fifty-sixth street and Cornell avenue, followed the explosion early Sunday evening of a steam boiler in the basement, which resulted in the death of John Tapkock, engineer, and the injury of Mrs. Sera May, a guest.

The explosion partially wrecked the hotel building, and damaged adjacent residences and apartment buildings. The guests of the hotel were left in darkness by the destruction of the lighting plant and many were obliged to await the arrival of firemen who battered down doors of their apartments and released them. Fire followed the crash, but was soon under control. The damage was estimated at $15,000.

Eighteen Panicky Negroes Killed.

Philadelphia—Eighteen persons were killed and probably half a hundred injured in a panic following the cry of "Fire!" Sunday night in St. Paul's colored Baptist church on Eighth street. The stairway to the first floor had one sharp turn in it, and the frightened people became so tightly wedged in the bend of the stairs that the frail wooden balustrade gave way, precipitating many to the first floor.

The disaster occurred while a collection was being taken up. The pastor had just concluded his sermon, the text of which was: "Why sit we until we die?" The fire was trifling.

General Wheeler Seriously Ill.

Washington.—Information was received here by relatives that General Joe Wheeler is seriously ill with pneumonia at his sister's home in Brooklyn. His illness, which began last Thursday, was first thought to be pleurisy, but on yesterday it developed that he was suffering from pneumonia and all his immediate family were summoned to his bedside by telegraph. Today he is reported to be resting easier. This information was received in a message to relatives here. The attack is as yet mild, but the general's advanced age, physicians say, makes the malady exceedingly dangerous.

Found Dead in Bed.

New York.—A man who registered at the Hotel Saranac four days ago as H. T. Reese, Atlanta, Ga., was found dead in his room Monday morning. He was lying across the bed with his hand over his heart. His death is suposed to have been due to heart disease. Reese, it is said, was very wealthy and proprietor of a millinery establishment in Atlanta.

Depew Has Brain Lesion.

Chicago.—A dispatch to the Tribune from Washington says: Senator Depew, who is in his seventy-third year is suffering from aphasia and melancholia. His closest friends here have been informed. The senator was suddenly seized with aphasia at dinner one night recently, it is reported here. He knew perfectly what he wished to say and tried to express his thoughts, but failed.

Takes Harem Along.

London.—The correspondent of the Times at Tangier says:

Sidi el Mokhri (one of the delegates to the Moroccan conference) left at midnight for Algeciras on a specially chartered steamer. The sole object of his journey is to convey the ladies of his harem to Algeciras before daylight, in order to prevent their being seen.

Finally Loot Safe.

Fort Worth, Tex.—A special to the Record from Oklahoma City, Okla., says:

After four attempts, which finally proved successful, robbers Sunday morning blew the safe of the Bank of Dale, near this city, and secured $2,050 in gold and made their escape.

Rains Cause Wreck.

Memphis, Tenn.—Passenger train No. 3, on the Choctaw division of the Rock Island railroad, was wrecked at Riceville, Ark., early Monday. Seven passengers were slightly injured. The wreck was caused by a washout, the heavy rains of last night having undermined the roadbed.

Fire in Baltimore.

Baltimore.—Fire occurred some time after midnight Monday morning at the plant of the Baltimore Chromo works. Probably one-half of the extensive plant, covering about a city block, has been destroyed. The loss will be very heavy, as much stock ready for shipment was destroyed.

Ensign Wade Acquitted.

Washington.—Ensign Charles T. Wade, charged with responsibility for the explosion on the gunboat Bennington, in San Diego harbor, California, some months ago, has been acquitted by the court martial in his case.

Cloudburst in Huntsville.

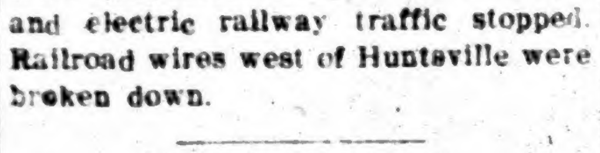
Nashville, Tenn.—Parts of Huntsville, Ala., were flooded Monday morning by a cloudburst. Many houses were inundated, bridges washed away and electric railway traffic stopped. Railroad wires west of Huntsville were broken down.

Three Hundred Lost.

Rio Janeiro, Brazil.—The Brazilian turret ship Aquidaban has been sunk at Port Jacarepagua, south of Rio Janeiro, as the result of an explosion on board. It is reported that 300 of her crew perished and only one officer was saved.

Tally Stick.

An old time way of proving one's right to the payment of money loaned was by tally sticks. One of these proofs is shown in the accompany illustration. A plain stick was used, and when a man loaned a sum a stick was broken and the creditor and debtor each took a part. When the time for payment came the man who had the stick which fitted exactly to the stick held by the creditor received the money. Two sticks never break in exactly the same shape, so there was never any dispute about who had a right to the money.



A New Hampshire editor claims to be the first of his calling in that State to buy an automobile. He probably finds that the car saves his time in chasing up delinquent subscribers, suggests the Boston Transcript.

A FRIENDLY SUGGESTION.

"I do not understand at all,"
Said Phyllis of her beau.
"Why he doth still make love to me;
I always tell him 'No.'"

To whom a cynic friend replied
(Or was she merely wise?)
"You tell him 'No'! Therein, perhaps,
The explanation lies!

"He likes the little game, no doubt,
But likes to play it when
There is no danger. Try a 'Yes';
He'd be discouraged then!"
—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

TALKS WITH OUR BOYS AND GIRLS

MAY'S RAINY-DAY RHYME.

I've said it once, I've said it twice,
I've said it over and over,
But still the rain comes pouring down,
See how it bends the clover!
Oh, if it storms like this all day,
No playmates can come near me,
I'll sing again my little rhyme—
Perhaps the rain will hear me;

"Rain, rain, go away,
Come again another day,
Let the little children play!"

Now, do you think the raindrops heard?
For soon they ceased their tinkle,
And from the sky the clouds drew back,
And left a bright blue wrinkle.
"O mamma, look," said little May,
"I think the rain must hear me,
And see how very kind it is—
Here is the sunshine near me.

"Rain, rain, go away,
Come again another day;
Let the little children play!"

—Ninette M. Lowater, in the Christian Register.

HER FIRST PARTY.

For a week Anna Lee had thought of nothing but the party. The invitation was the first delight, and she had carried the square, gilt-edged card to school, and had peeped at it once when recess was beginning, before she got her little lunch basket and joined the three girls who were her particular friends. Then there was the interest of her dress, a red one with a guimpe, her little full petticoats with narrow but fine embroidery; her smooth lisle stockings and shoes with cloth tops and shiny tips.

She was to have a red ribbon to tie the black hair from her eager little freckled face; and she was to carry Cousin Mollie's tiny white fan hanging about her neck, for although it was winter fans were proper at a party.

It seemed to her as if the time would never come. Days and nights passed away, of course, but the party stayed "next Wednesday" and "the day after to-morrow" for a long time. However the morning came at last when the party was to be "this afternoon"; and then Anna had her dinner and tried restlessly to take a nap, and first thing she knew it was "now," and there was a great hurry to get her ready.

The whole family came into the parlor to have a look at her in her party clothes.

"Head up," said father, "and smiles to the front." That was part of a drill they used to play sometimes. But—would you believe it?—Anna looked as if she could not smile, no matter how hard she might try. Nobody remembered ever to have seen such a sober look on the face of the youngest Lee.

"What is it, dear," asked mother. "Did I tie your hair ribbon too tight?"

"No, ma'am," said Anna.

"What's the trouble, chick?" asked Uncle Charlie. "You look just like a little girl who was going to get kept in because she couldn't spell b-a-t, bat, and maybe not even c-a-t, cat. Now what is the matter?"

But Anna only shook her head, and although they could see that she was trying to smile, she was not able to get the tiniest bit of sunshine into her face.

"Dear me!" said mother. "And after all this looking forward to the party!"

"Well, well!" began father; and Uncle Charlie was just going to make a remark, too, when grandma, sitting in her rocking chair by the open grate, said:

"Bless the child! I know all about it. She's scared."

"Scared?" asked Uncle Charlie. "What of?"

"Yes," grandma went on. "I remember my first party, and I remember Anna's mother's first party; and we were both of us frightened, thinking about the strange people and so many of them. But I know the cure for it. I am not going to tell it out loud before all of you, but if Anna wants me to I will go into my own room with her and tell her a secret, and if she does just what I say she will enjoy the party as much as she expected yesterday to do."

Father and mother and Uncle Charlie laughed, because it was quite a family joke that grandma and Anna had so many secrets from the rest of them; then father said they would wait in the hall outside, and the two could talk in the parlor.

Ten minutes later Mary put on her white cap and apron and took Anna to the party. There were a great many little boys and girls already gathered together, and they seemed to be having a merry time playing games. Four or five ladies were standing near the door, greeting the newcomers, and when one of them came forward Anna nearly turned to cling to Mary's hand, for although she was eight years old she really was very shy. But then she remembered grandma's secret and even while she was being welcomed she began to look about for somebody.

All during the first part of the party Anna was on the watch. She looked at each little boy and girl she came near, but she did not find the one she wanted, so at last she slipped out into the hall and peeped around in all the corners, and after a while, in the very last corner, where it was dark because the staircase went up right over it, she came upon a little girl about her own age sitting quietly all alone on a sofa. Anna's eyes sparkled, and she went and stood in front of the little girl.

"I was looking for you," she said. "What's your name?"

"My name's Maud," said the other. "And you couldn't look for me, 'cause you don't know me."

"But my grandmother told me to," explained Anna. "And we've got to go in and play games with the others and make everybody have a good time at the party."

"I can't," said Maude, and then her voice lowered. "I'm too timid, and my mother says parties will wear it off, and they don't."

"Oh," said Anna, "I know. Grandma told me. Move over and I'll tell you all about it."

"Grandma says," she went on, spreading her fingers and counting them off, as she had seen Uncle Charlie do when he was discussing things, "grandma says that when people are timid it is because they don't remember other people. She says s'pose all the boys and girls said, 'I'm too timid to play, and so I'll sit in a corner and not smile or have a nice time.' What then? grandma says. And then she says no matter how scared you are, there might be somebody feeling still worse, and so go find that one, and tell them to let's play games and eat ice cream—or maybe it's sherbet. Have you seen any popping mottoes yet?" she broke off.

"No," said Maude. "But how did your grandma know where I was? I was hiding."

"My grandma said 'specially under the stairs," laughed Anna. "That was a good place to find people timider than you are, she said, and they might be boys or maybe they might be girls. And if you will come along now I know where the lady with the mottoes is, and we'll get ours and be partners all the rest of the party. And anyway, Willie Tremont and his mother would feel sorry if they knew two of their party folks were under the steps, and thought they were scared."

So they went in to the games hand in hand; and when seven o'clock came, and with it a flock of maids and big sisters, nobody had a better time or said good-by more reluctantly than the two timid ones who had started the party hiding under the stirs.—Augusta Kortrecht, in the Youth's Companion.

A GENUINE LETTER.

The following letter was taken down on the machine exactly as the small boy dictated it to his mother:

My dear grandmamma: I have made a scrap book in kindergarten. We are going to Boston next fall. I am anyway. I am going to send you this scrap book. I made this rabbit tomorrow and I just finished it in time to go in the scrap book. I can't go to kindergarten soe of the time because I want to go to Boston. School has let out and we are having a vacation and I hope we will have a good time. I love you—that's for Edif—but I love grandma and grandpa too, you know and Edif too and a kiss and three kisses for each and for grandma and for grandpa and for Edif. And now lets see. The boys now pretty soon will have a vacation like I, and I got some new boots and some new shirt waists, and they are blue—one's blue and one's white and one's brown. And we have got a dog and we feed him with bread and milk and in a big saucer. That's the truth. And his dinner is bread and milk in a big saucer, in the same one, and we have lemonade sometimes. Now this is something for Edif. Some lemonade what Edif haven't had, these hot days. Now say something about the scrap book to grandmamma. They have got red thread and red pencils; and mamma and my bouvvers have got some new shirts and some new garters. A different kind. Hanna cooked my lemonade one time. Pretty near last Sunday is coming. (I have not the slightest idea what he means by that, but he says it must go in.) And Hannah and me is going out sometimes and eat dinner in the park and come back for supper time and if she (that's Edif) wants to come back, she had better come back quick and go out with us. Sometimes I eat chicken for my supper.

The committee ordered a primary for the nomination of county officers to take place on Saturday, April 14. A sub-committee was appointed to arrange the details of the primary election. The meeting was a most harmonious one. The sentiment of the committee endorsed the action of the state executive committee. The committee adopted the rule laid down by the state executive committee as to qualification of voters. Quite a number of candidates appeared before the committee.

Comer at Athens.

Athens, Ala.—B. B. Comer, candidate for governor, spoke at the court house in this place to a large and representative audience of nearly 200 men, mostly farmers. He was given fine attention and some applause during the speech, which lasted for two hours, and which was confined for the most part to the question of railroad legislation and foreign rates. He made some sweeping charges, which he said had never been denied. He was outspoken in his remarks about the election of the legislature. He compared the farmers and business men of the state as a six-mule team and called it the ship of state, and said when ever a mule in the team failed to pull to unhitch and leave the animal out and put in another; that whenever a man representing railroads in any capacity aspired to represent the people in their lawmaking bodies to leave him at home.

Knox Announces for the Senate.

Anniston, Ala.—John B. Knox, of this city, late president of the constitutional convention, announces for United States senator. Mr. Knox, when asked whether he would be a candidate in the approaching primary for the United States senatorship, said in substance: "If our present senators, John T. Morgan and E. W. Pettus, offer for re-election, I will not oppose them. I have not heard any announcement from either of them as to their intentions in this respect. If both of them, or if either of them, does not offer for re-election, I will be a candidate to succeed the one or the other, as the case may be."

County Primary August 27.

Birmingham, Ala.—B. A. Thompson, chairman of the county democratic executive committee, is of the opinion that Jefferson county's primary to nominate county officers will not be held until August 27, the date on which the state primary will be held. So far no sentiment for an early primary has developed, and from all indications the proposed plan to only hold one election will meet with the approval of the voters. When asked when he would call the county committee together to fix the date of the primary Chairman Thompson replied: "Well, I hardly think there will be any necessity to call a meeting of the committee until the latter part of March."

Electric Railway to Tidewater.

Birmingham, Ala.—The Tidewater Development Company is to be chartered within the next thirty days. This new corporation will practically be the merger of the franchises and assets now held by the organization known as J. M. Dewberry and associates, prominent promoters, and will continue to exploit the projects of these gentlemen. The immediate object of the new corporation is to construct a line of transportation, both for passengers and freight, from Gadsden through the Birmingham district to Tuscaloosa, operated by electricity, and from Tuscaloosa to the gulf by water route over the Warrior river.

Race Warm in Walker.

Jasper, Ala.—Things politically have been very quiet in Walker county since the holidays, but with the approach of spring it is expected that new life will be infused into the situation. The race for sheriff of the county is perhaps the most interesting contest which is likely to come up. At present there are only two candidates for this office—J. A. Huggins and J. O. Long, and both of these gentlemen have a very strong following. Ernest R. Lacy, a prominent young attorney of Jasper, has announced that he will be a candidate to represent Walker county in the next legislature of Alabama. Mr. Lacy is a young man eminently fitted for the place, and his friends feel confident of his election. So far only two other candidates have announced—J. M. Sherer, of the Jasper bar, and J. L. Davis, of Mary Lee beat.

Elevated Coach Plunged to Ground.

New York.—The middle coach of a three-car elevated train on the Cypress Hill branch of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company was derailed Friday at an "uncontrolled" switch, and plunged thirty feet from the overhead structure to a vacant lot. The forward end of the car struck a heavy boulder and was split from end to end, collapsing into a mass of wreckage.

Of the twelve passengers who went down with the car one was killed and the others seriously injured. A guard standing on the front platform was so badly injured by being hurled to the ground that he is not expected to live.

Negro Homicide.

She was removed to her home.

More Russian Rebellion.

St. Petersburg.—Advices received state that Baterum and Curia, Black Sea ports, and Poti and Imeretia, in Trans-Caucasia, are in the hands of rebels. The government is sending warships to Baterum manned with infantry, as spread of mutinous sentiment among sailors has made them untrustworthy.

For Preservation of Constitution.

Washington, D. C.—A petition signed by 30,000 citizens of Massachusetts was presented to the president Saturday opposing the recommendation of Secretary Bonaparte that the old frigate Constitution be either broken up or made an object for tarket practice. The president suggested that the old frigate be rigged and equipped as she appeared in her fighting days and sent to Annapolis. He indicates that the vessel should be preserved. The president indicated that it might not be many years before a new Constitution as invincible as the old would plow the seas.

Aeronaut Killed by Fall.

Fort Worth, Tex.—Lindsay Cooper, an aeronaut of Clarinda, O., traveling with a carnival show exhibiting at Wolfe City, fell from his balloon at that place a distance of several thousand feet and was instantly killed. Cooper was ascending when he lost his hold on the trapeze and fell. In falling he struck some telegraph wires, which only slightly checked his fall. About 400 persons witnessed his fall. On examination of his body it was found that he had a broken wrist. No other bones were broken.

Dr. Simpson Held.

Northport, L. I.—Dr. James W. Simpson, the New York dentist accused of the murder of his father-in-law, Bartley T. Horner, was held for the action of the grand jury, which meets in March. The accused man will be taken to the Riverhead jail.

No Debating in Senate Race.

Atlanta, Ga.—The indications are that there will be no joint debate this year between Senator A. O. Bacon, who is a candidate for the United States senate to succeed himself, and Hon. John Temple Graves, editor of the Atlanta News, who some time ago announced his candidacy for this office. Colonel Graves, it is said, recently wrote to Senator Bacon inviting him to take part in a joint discussion throughout the state. But Senator Bacon, it is understood, has declined, stating that his congressional duties will not permit of his entering into a discussion of this kind. What speeches will be made by the two candidates, if any, remains to be seen.

Funeral of Mr. Field.

Chicago, Ill.—Funeral services for Marshall Field, the great millionaire merchant, were held Friday at his late home, 1905 Prairie avenue, and in the First Presbyterian church. The service at the home was a simple one. The service at the church was attended by many of the friends of Mr. Field. The body of Mr. Field was placed in a stone vault, which was sunk in a grave in his family lot in Graceland cemetery.

RUSSIAN EDITOR

Of The Russ Must Serve a Term of One Year in Jail.

OTHERS ARE LIVING IN DREAD.

Prominent Journals Were Prohibited From Publishing Appeal Proclaiming Monday Day of Mourning.

St. Petersburg.—M. Alexis Souvarin, editor of the Russ, has been sentenced to a year's imprisonment in a fortress for publishing in December last the manifesto of the workmen's council announcing that the government had declared civil war on the proletariat and saying that the challenge must be accepted. Efforts are being made to secure a mitigation of the sentence. The cases of seven other editors of newspapers are still pending.

The technical accusation against M. Souvarin was incitation of the people to high treason by the publishing of statements designed to instigate riot, sedition and armed revolt and tending to cause the bankruptcy of the state. The charge was based not only on the publication of the manifesto of December 16 in the Russ, but in a series of seditious proclamations by the Postal Telegraph Union applying to the revolutionary power adjectives traditionally sacred to the emperor, and also the appeal of the League of Leagues, in which it was stated that the political liberty of the people was obtained only through an armed uprising for a great battle against the autocracy.

M. Souvarin pleaded in his defense that the communications and proclamations published in his paper gave, in his opinion, facts of political life of such importance to all circles of society that it was impossible and contrary to the interests of the government to pass over them in silence.

Aggravated the Offense.

It is the general opinion that this feature of his defense merely aggravated the offense in the eyes of the judges and that without it he would have escaped with a fortnight's sentence.

The heavy sentence imposed upon the editor of the most widely circulated newspaper in Russia, and who is also a prominent publicist and literateurist, has caused a great commotion in circles of society. At the constitutional democratic convention it eclipsed the interest of the discussion of the agrarian question, which was the order of the day. M. Hessen and Professor Milukof were the centers of agitated groups during the evening. Their friends made it no secret that they believed the same fate was overhanging them and other editors under indictment. The conviction will debar them from further participation in the new political realm. M. Milukof said to the Associated Press:

"It is my turn next."

There was a veritable panic in the camp of the liberal press after the sentence of M. Souvarin was made known. The Nasshashnin has been refused refused permission absolutely to print the appeal of the League of Leagues proclaiming Monday as a day of general mourning, even though the manifesto expressly stated that the demonstration would be confined to the placing of crepe on windows and abstaining from labor. The Russ, which prominently displayed interest in behalf of the workmen's unions, prints only a harmless line concerning it.

There is a strong movement in favor of a direct appeal to the emperor through the ministry of justice in favor of a reduction of the sentence of M. Souvarin to three months' imprisonment. This is approved by several judges of the courts. M. Souvarin is given a month to appeal before being taken to the fortress to serve his sentence. His attorneys have declared they will fight a petition with the sabre for revision of the sentence and asking for a new trial.

Slew the Farmer—Tried to Burn.

Warren, O.—Mystery surrounds the murder at East Farmington of R. K. Lewis, a prominent cattle buyer and rich farmer. The murderer came to the house in a carriage. B. J. Heyman, a hired man of the victim, heard him talking to Lewis, but did not go out to see who it was. Later smelling smoke and burning oil, he went down stairs and found Lewis with the back of his head crushed in and a gash in the forehead, bound and the body covered with straw saturated with oil, which was burning. He managed to extinguish the fire and give the alarm.

Lewis lived alone with the farm hand. There is no definite clue to the murderer.

Robbed of $75,000.

New York.—That Lady Parker, wife of Sir Gilbert Parker, was robbed of $75,000 in jewels several weeks ago in the Carlton Hotel, London, has been revealed in this city since the departure of a representative of Scotland Yard for Palm Beach, Fla. For more than a week the London detectives worked in this city independently of the central office, visiting pawnshops and following other trails.

ROOSEVELT

May Break Old Custom and Take Third Term—Riis Talks.

Washington, D. C.—The interview of Jacob A. Riis, in which he declared in effect that President Roosevelt would be a candidate for a third term in case he saw his policies defeated and the organization fall into the hands of the "money power," attracted unusual interest in Washington on account of the close relationship Riis bears to the president. Substantially the same story has appeared time and again, but never from a quarter so close to the president.

If Mr. Riis is correct, the president will be a candidate for a third term unless the legislative situation greatly changes, for from the present outlook the president cannot get through one half of his recommendations to congress. It has been realized by senators and representatives that some of the president's most enthusiastic supporters have shown increasing tendency recently to put those statesmen who do not concur wholly with the president's views on proposed legislation into a class designated as opponents of the people.

It was recalled at the capitol that the unqualified and unequivocal declaration of the president, made a year ago last November, election night, that he would not accept another nomination, contained no suggestion of a possible future reconsideration of his resolve on any ground.

Historic Building Destroyed.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Fire early Saturday morning destroyed the Diamond market house, on Market street, containing the historic old city hall and damaged surrounding business houses. The fire started from a lighted cigar thrown into a stand outside the market. The flames spread with great rapidity, and when the firemen arrived it had crossed the street and ignited stores on Market and Diamond streets. The entire downtown fire department was called into service. The fire in the market could not be subdued, however, and the structure, with its contents, were destroyed. The flames were not under control for two hours. The market house was built in 1852, by popular subscription, and the city hall, on the second floor, housed many important conventions. It was here that Jenny Lind held forth for many a night, and where John C. Fremont was nominated for president. The fire loss is about $125,000.

Hot Weather Wide in Extent.

Chicago, Ill.—Advices from various points in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Missouri and Kansas show that the temperature Saturday was the highest known in January for more than a quarter of a century. In Pittsburg the temperature was the highest ever recorded in January. One of the hottest places in the country Saturday was Louisville, where the thermometer touched the 73 degree mark, and established a record which has not been equaled in January for thirty-three years. The following is the record for Saturday at some of the principal points: Chicago, 64; St. Louis, 72; Cincinnati, 71; Detroit, 64; Indianapolis, 70; Pittsburg, 66; Wichita, 80.

New Judge Not Probable.

Washington, D. C.—Complications are arising which makes it extremely doubtful that a bill can be passed to provide an additional United States judge for Alabama.

Judge Thomas G. Jones, who naturally has looked into the situation since his arrival, is somewhat of the opinion that nothing can be accomplished this session. In the first place Attorney-General Moody is reported to be opposed to the creating of new districts and new judges. He has said to several members of congress that the number of bills offered to far for the creation of new judges and the division of districts are too numerous to meet the approval of his department. It is said that he has let it be known that he wishes the bill for Alabama held up by the house judiciary committee.

A rumor was also abroad that a bill would soon be introduced by an Alabama representative to divide the state into two districts, the Northern and Southern, with only two judges for the entire state, reserving the right to Judge Jones to live at Montgomery.

Strike Paralyzes Traffic.

Havana.—A strike on the Cuban Central railroad has practically paralyzed traffic between Sagua LaGrande and Cienfuegos, and has also hampered the line between Esperanza and Santa Clara, which is part of the Havana-Santiago through system. The only train operated Saturday was run by officials. The officials will not confer with the employes on the questions of pay and hours for work. The secretary of agriculture, the secretary of the interior and the governor of Santa Clara province are endeavoring to conciliate the factions. There has been no disorder.

Two Men Killed.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Two white men, supposed to be tramps, were ground to death beneath the wheels of a Southern freight train here. Neither had any identification papers.

Manila.—Maj.-Gen. Leonard Wood will succeed Major-General Corbin in command of the military division of the Philippines Febuary 1. Major-General Corbin will leave for San Francisco February 9.

REVOLUTION

Two Hundred Are Killed or Wounded in the Fighting at Guayaquil.

CABINET LASTS BUT AN HOUR.

General Plaza Arrives, but He Finds Things Too Warm for Him and Hastily Departs.

Guayaquil, Ecuador.—Two hundred persons were killed or wounded in the fighting here.

General Alfaro occupied Quito, the capital, at 3 p. m. Thursday. A group of prominent persons met in the palace here at 4 a. m. Friday and formed a provisional government. Vice-President Baquerizo Moreno assumed the executive power, establishing the capital here and appointing the following ministry:

Minister of the interior, Ceasar Borja; minister of foreign affairs, Francisco Aguirre Jado; minister of finance, Marlin Aviles; minister of public instruction, Amilio Puga; minister of war and marine, Luis Dillon; governor of Guayaquil, Ignacio Robles; chief of the local military, Gen. Fidel Gargia.

Rioting followed. The people during the afternoon attacked the prisons, liberated the political prisoners and afterwards captured the police barracks, where the rioters obtained possession of a number of rifles and some cannon. Rifle shots later were heard in all parts of the city and the rioters became so bold that they attacked a battalion of artillery. Many persons were killed or wounded on both sides.

The new ministry, however, lasted only one hour. The people rejected the administration of Baquerizo Moreno and proclaimed as president General Alfaro, the former president of Ecuador and leader of the revolution, and in his absence Dr. Emilio Arvalo assumed the civil and military authority.

A general panic ensued during the evening, and in the midst of the disorder Gen. Leonidas Plaza, minister of Ecuador to the United States, who arrived here January 18 and assumed chief command of the army in its operations against the rebels, escaped from the city and embarked on board the Chilian steamer Loa, which left for Panama. Later in the evening order was restored.

Supply of Cotton.

New Orleans, La.—Secretary Hester's statement of the world's visible supply of cotton has been issued, and shows the total visible to be 5,425,431 bales, against 5,425,451 last week and 4,564,125 last year. Of this the total of American cotton is 4,042,431, against 4,082,451 last week and 3,697,125 last year, and of all other kinds, including Egypt, Brazil, India, etc., 1,383,000, against 1,343,000 last week and 867,000 last year. Of the world's visible supply of cotton there is now afloat and held in Great Britain and continental Europe 2,833,000, against 2,413,000 last year; in Egypt 200,000, against 201,000 last year; in India 737,000, against 404,000 last year, and in the United States 1,655,000, against 1,541,000 last year.

Fatal Shooting Affray.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Ben Ricker was killed and the two brothers, Clarke and Tom Hale, shot in an altercation at Freshour's distillery, twelve miles from Greeneville, Tenn. Ricker was shot by Tom Hale, but after he had been mortally wounded he succeeded in shooting the other two men, dying after firing a shot which entered Clarke Hale's breast. The Hales are being driven by wagon to North Carolina, according to last reports. Ricker died in a few minutes. The origin of the trouble is not known.

Big Contract for Coal.

Pittsburg, Pa.—The Pittsburg Steel Company announce that they have closed a contract with the Pittsburg Coal Company for 1,000 tons of coal per day for a period of five years. The consideration was not mentioned, but it is said to be based on the cost of production.

Rural Carriers Appointed.

Washington, D. C.—Rural carriers appointed: Clanton, route 3, Charlie C. Swint carrier, Lee T. Vicker substitute; Pinvale, route 1, James Jones carrier, William A. Jones substitute.

Ashes Cast Into the Mississippi.

St. Louis, Mo.—In obedience to stipulations in the will of William Burnside, who died recently, his ashes Saturday were cast to the bosom of the Mississippi river from the Eads bridge.

Negro Killed at Frolic.

West Point, Ga.—At a negro frolic at the home of Sim Hogg, near here, Will Heard was killed by Jim Gray. Gray came to town and surrendered to the city marshal, J. T. Roberts.

W. H. Fisher Killed.

Chattanooga.—William H. Fisher, a prominent brick man of Chattanoog was run over and instantly killed by switch engine in the Cincinnati South ern railroad yards here.

Horace Hood, editor of the Montgomery Journal, is a candidate for State Auditor, with we believe, a good prospect of success. He deserves it.

A big Brazilian warship the "Aquidaban" exploded and sank at Rio Janerio Monday, 196 men losing their lives in the wreck.

The census bureau report issued Tuesday shows 9,998,111 bales ginned to Jan. 16, against 12,768,000 to same date last year, and 9,486,000 in 1904, and spot cotton went down ⅛ to ¼ lower. What effect it will further have on the market remains to be seen.

President Castro of Venezuela, who not long since talked of landing an army at New Orleans and whipping the United States, and who is always in trouble of some sort, seems to be in a good position to get a drubbing at the hands of the French, who have stood all they care about standing from him.

The special election on the 20th of next month is of vital importance to the people of Chilton county, and we are glad to learn that interest in it is increasing, with every hope that the special school tax of ten cents on the hundred dollars will carry with a substantial majority. The fund thus raised means more and better schools, longer terms and an advance along educational lines generally.

The people of Chilton county, of late years especially, have shown every disposition to provide the best schools possible for their children, and this special tax is merely a concerted effort to improve the educational facilities, which hitherto individual communities have done as best they could on their own responsibility. The people are prosperous and this small extra amount will scarcely be felt, while the good done the rising generation is incalculable.

Broad Plans Will Be Worked Out.

Beyond the shadow of a doubt the Southern Cotton Association is progressing rapidly in the right direction, has gained such valuable experience and profited thereby, and most likely is destined to work out along practical lines, most, if not all the great problems now confronting the farmer. The tendency to fight the spinner has given way to the desire for closer relations with him. "Reduction of Acreage," once looked upon as the permanent salvation of the farmer is now regarded as a mere expedient, to be followed up by a broader and more practical plan for the constant increase of the world's consumption of American grown cotton, rotation and diversification of crops, and the raising every year of enough cotton to amply supply spinners' needs the world over, thus supplying farm labor with ample labor every year, improving the general prosperity of the South, and increasing the wealth and independence of the cotton producer with every new marketing season and without glutting the world with cotton. Through co operation and intelligent and practical direction the Association now believes the best interest of the farmer may be served without injury to the spinner, the weaver or the dealer in cotton goods.

Of course, until these broad plans are worked out with clock-like precision, expedients such as the reduction of acreage, the pledging of cotton for a fixed price, etc., may have to be resorted to. But the delegates to the New Orleans convention look upon such things only as powerful weapons to be made use of when occasion requires. Slow or rather intelligent marketing must of course be perpetuated —Rural South.

A SUGGESTION

To the People of Clanton.

The articles appearing in some of our leading publications have created a good deal of discussion in Clanton in regard to advertised medicines, their reliability and power to cure, and as local druggists, we, the Upchurch Drug Co., want to the people of Clanton that we believe one of the most reliable medicines that we have known in our drug experience, extending over a long period, is Vinol, the cod liver preparation made without oil.

Vinol is not a patent medicine; everything in it is printed on the back label of every bottle, and it actually does contain in a highly concentrated form all of the medicinal, curative elements of cod liver oil taken from fresh cods' livers, and without a drop of the system-clogging oil to upset the stomach and retard its work, and this is why it is fast superseding old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions.

Inasmuch as Vinol is therefore the latest scientific improvement of an old and standard remedy it is the greatest strength creator in the world for old people, weak, sickly women and children, nursing mothers and after a severe sickness. It cures hacking coughs, chronic colds and all pulmonary troubles. We positively guarantee to return money if it fails." Upchurch Drug co.

For Congressmen to Think About

The government of the United States has subsidized railways and steamship companies and has spent nearly five hundred million dollars in river and harbor improvement. This on the theory that to facilitate commerce is a government obligation. The correctness of this theory no sensible man will try to controvert. But this very same theory is applicable to the highways—the common wagon roads of the country—and with greater force does the principle attach here than to the railways, the steamships and the rivers and harbors. The government has by its liberal policy cheapened the cost of railway and water transportation. While this is true, it has done absolutely nothing to cheapen transportation from the farms of the country to market or the shipping point. It costs just as much to-day to move a ton of produce a mile on the wagon roads as it did before the civil war—namely, twenty five cents. The contention of the friends of national aid to good roads is that anything that is detrimental to farm interests injures the entire community. And yet almost every subject under the sun has received consideration from the government except the subject of good roads, the neglect of which is a constant menace not only to farm life and the social prosperity of the country, but a national disgrace and shame that affects all classes throughout the land, whether in town or country. No one denies the necessity for road improvement. A few who either started to school too early, or quit too soon, oppose the national aid movement on the irrational ground that it is paternalistic. Nothing could be less true. The United States means a Union of all the States. This Union was formed for the purpose of conserving the "general welfare." It is a partnership, of which the States are the component members. Whatever the government may do to aid the States it does to aid an integral part of itself, so that the objection of the sticklers do not apply. The United States is a family. The general government is simply a means established to keep the household in order. All the people contribute to the expense of this management, and are therefore entitled to consideration at its hands. This may be considered a crude way of stating the matter, but it suits our purpose, which is to point out to Congressman and others the obligation of the government to aid the State in building good roads. Senator Latimer, of South Carolina, a strong Democrat, has a bill pending in the Senate, and Representative Brownlow, of Tennessee, a strong Republican, has a bill pending in the House, the two bills being similar in provisions and one in purpose—to set in motion systematic road building in the United States. Either of these gentlemen will be glad to send copies of the bill to any one who will write for it. A copy of the Senate Hearings on Good Roads can be had by writing to either of our own U. S. Senators.

FERTILIZERS

If we examine a guano sack we will find an analysis of the guano printed on it in large letters. Take a standard grade guano for example and we find the analysis reads about this way: Available phosphoric acid, 8 per cent; ammonia, 2 per cent; potash, 2 per cent. The elements just named are the only ones we are especially interested in. It is the amount of available phosphoric acid, the amount of ammonia and the amount of the potash contained in the sack that makes up its value.

Let us see how much the sack above has of these elements. We see that 8 per cent of the guano is available phosphoric acid. We understand that 8 per cent is 8 lbs in every 100. Then the 200 lbs of guano in the sack contains 16 lbs. of available phosphoric acid. We see that 2 per cent, or 2 lbs. in every 100, is ammonia. Then in the 200 lbs. of guano there are 4 lbs. of ammonia. And likewise the analysis showing 2 per cent of potash gives us 4 lbs. of that. This gives us a total of 24 lbs. of these elements in the sack.

We will take a high grade guano which will analyze, available phosphoric acid, 9 per cent; ammonia, 3 per cent; potash, 3 per cent This will give 18 lbs. of available phosphoric acid; 6 lbs of ammonia and 6 lbs of potash. A total of 30 lbs. in the sack. And so it is that by looking at the analysis of guano, we can tell just what it is. I might say that there is very little guano of this last analysis put on the market, and it is because the trade does not demand it.

Guanos with the two analysis we have discussed in the letter are the goods that are generally put up for cotton growers. A proposition suggests itself right here. Which is cheaper, guano at $22.50 a ton which has the analysis we first gave, or guano at $28.50 which has the last analysis? In making the calculation on this, estimate 1 lb. of ammonia equal to 2½ lbs. of available phosphoric acid, and 1 lb of potash equal to 1 lb acid, which are their comparative values.

We all know what ammonia is. We have bought it from the druggist. It is sometimes called "harts horn." When we go into the stables in the spring to clean them out, we get a scent very much like that of harts-horn. It is the ammonia in the manure.

Now, instead of ammonia you may find your guano analyzed as containing a certain per cent of nitrogen 1 per cent of ammonia contains 82½ 100 per cent of nitrogen. Nitrogen as a fertilizer comes in the form of ammonia and is thus reckoned by the manufacturers.

In conclusion I would say study your guano. The higher the numbers are in the analysis the richer it is in fertilizer. And these numbers can be relied on. The law of the State requires all fertilizer manufacturers who sell fertilizer in the State to put the analysis of the fertilizer on the sack, and the law is so rigid, and the penalty so heavy that none can afford to violate it.

THE above picture of the man and fish is the trademark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

Cross Roads

Mr. C. C. Mitchell and family, who have been in Louisians for the last twelve months, are back in our community. We are glad to welcome them back.

The farmers in this community are preparing for another crop. Say, Bro. farmer, let us regard our obligations that we taken when we joined the S. C. A., that we would reduce our acreage 25 per cent on cotton. I think that has done us more good than anything we have ever had. Say, Bro. farmer, let us all come across with our dues and not think that is making us poorer and some other man rich. Notice and see if we don't pay out more money for whiskey that does not profit us than we pay to the S. C. A. I have paid 50 cents into the S. C. A. and I am satisfied I have been benefitted $50; while there are some cranks that say the S. C. A. has not done the farmer any good. Last spring when F. A. Gulledge, Tipton Mullins W. H. Conway and others began to talk on the subject of diversified crops it put the unlearned writer to thinking. I decided I would plant plenty of corn and so I did and I think I have a plenty of hog and hominy to do me this year and you bet I am glad of it. I am going to try for the same thing again this year.

A Modern Miracle

"Truly miraculous seemed the recovery of Mrs. Mollie Holt of this place," writes J. O. R. Hooper, Woodford, Tenn., "she was so wasted by coughing up puss from her lungs. Doctors declared her end so near that her family had watched by her bed side forty-eight hours, when, at my urgent request Dr. King's New Discovery was given her, with the astonishing result that improvement began, and continued until she finally completely recovered, and is a healthy woman to-day." Times are very dull in this part of the country. Mr. J. C. Veazey is suffering from a severe fall; he was on a house at work and his scaffold gave way, letting him fall backward about eight feet; we hope he is not seriously hurt.

Mr. Joe Wood's little baby is very sick, we hope he will soon recover.

There is not much being done towards farming in this part of the country on account of so much rain. Whoop up, boys, on your road and school and stock law, for I think we are going to soon need them all. The roads are getting so bad we cannot go to market and get back home. Our rail timber is getting so scarce we cannot keep a fence that will turn our stock. Our schools are getting so short we do not get more than half enough of education. So come on, boys, and let us build up our country with all these good things.

Mr. J. J. Jones has removed to his old home at this place from Randolph. We need just such men as Mr. Jones to help the good work.

Mr. M. C. Crumpton has accepted a position at Randolph.

God knows by whom we are and if we do not serve Him every day we live I doubt very much whether we will reach His kingdom or not. We should strive to work for our Creator more and more every day we live. Oh how sweet it is to think of that blessed home over there when we shall all gather around His throne and praise God for ever more. May the God of heaven forever bless the Editor and be with him in all his trials and temptations.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. DR. R. F. ALSOP.

Subject: Graft, Ancient and Modern.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Dr. Reese F. Alsop, rector of St. Ann's P. E. Church, preached Sunday morning on "Graft, Ancient and Modern." His text was from Luke xix.8: "Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor, and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold." Dr. Alsop said:

We have in these days a curious use of the word graft. Probably the gardener would find it a little hard to understand how it came to have the meaning that it has, yet it ought not to be difficult to explain. He sets into some plant a bud or a twig, and by and by it grows into the plant. Then it lives to a certain extent its own life, bears its own fruit, drawing the while sap, nourishment, vitality, from the plant into which it has been grafted. It becomes, therefore, the figure of a thing that draws that something else with which it is connected, that which it uses for its own purpose. So the habit of drawing off for private uses something that really belongs to some one else, whether it be a government, a department, or an individual, has come to be called graft. The use of the word is peculiar to our own times. The thing which the word indicates is, alas! as old as history. Something like it we find in the story of him who claims our attention this morning.

Two or three things come out in our study of Zacchaeus.

First—He was in a dangerous employment. It surrounded him with temptations. Its usual standard of action was low. Its prevailing habit was one of wrong doing. It was a course of life in which every day one could see opportunities of getting gain and take them. Both insiders and outsiders took for granted a certain measure of pilfering.

Mr. Jerome has lately been holding up to the ridicule of the public the claim that there is such a thing as honest graft, by which is meant opportunities which come to insiders to take advantage of their knowledge and of others' ignorance to make great profits. The employment of Zacchaeus gave such opportunities, and men like him were expected to gather in constantly what was called perquisites of their position. Just as a customs inspector is supposed to look for and to wait for a fee, or as a policeman who has a district like the Tenderloin, is supposed to be waiting and ready for bribes. We have men who have shown a good deal of this spirit. We have had those who call themselves statesmen in New York who were in politics by their own confession not for their health, but for their pocket all the time. Zacchaeus, we are told, was chief of the publicans, and he seems to have illustrated the spirit which is apt to prevail in a hated and proscribed business, namely, that of avenging itself upon the public by making the public pay.

Secondly—It would appear that he had used the opportunities which his position gave him. Tax collecting proper does not bring a man a large fortune. The income is usually graded to give him merely a moderate living. But Zacchaeus had not been content with that. There are thousands of people all through our land who have the rare faculty of growing rich in a few years on a very small salary. Men like Beavers, senators who have been indicted and convicted of land frauds, judges who have used appointments for personal reasons. These things which we know of in our day should give some insight into the methods in Jericho of old. It was a case of "high finance," of a constant "rake off," in the year of our Lord 29. It was graft nearly twenty centuries before the word came to have its present connotation. And so Zacchaeus became rich—notoriously rich. He was probably like some of our high financiers of to-day. He had a fine house and garden and establishment, so that as men passed it they pointed to it and said, "There lives the richest man in the city."

Third—Still, in spite of his prosperity, he was in bad odor. The community will stand a good deal, but there comes a time when even the glamour of wealth cannot hide a man's true character—when his success can no longer blind men's eyes, when his splendor becomes an offense that cries to high heaven. There are houses and establishments in our day that make men gnash their teeth, that stand in the community as an exhibition of what fraud and trickery and legal stealing and breach of trust can do. With wealth honestly earned and nobly used, the legitimate reward of real service to the community, there is and should be no quarrel; but with ill gotten gains, gains got at the expense of the community, gains which are not the pay of honest work, of brain, of body, but the loot of cunning, of fraud, the booty filched by the strong or the clever, or the high placed from the weak, or foolish, or lowly; with such wealth there is and ought to be a quarrel eternal. And so it was with Zacchaeus. As the people of Jericho passed his gates it was with a sneer, perhaps a curse. He is rich; yes, but he is a sinner; his glory is his shame. His splendor is the measure of his turpitude, he has made his pile, but it is the result of extortion and false accusations. He is not only a renegade, in that he is a publican, and the chief of them, but he is a standing, living monument of what conscienceless greed can make of a man.

Fourth—Now, with this judgment of his fellow citizens, Jesus seems to agree, for when the people protest against His being this man's guest Jesus says: "The Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." That word "lost" seems to concede the justice of the people's judgment. Zacchaeus is a son of Abraham, indeed; that is, one of the chosen people. But he is none the less a lost man needing to be sought and saved.

Now, if that was his true character; if the Jerichoan estimate of him was correct, how are we to understand the words: "Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor; and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold." How can a man who shows such generosity to the poor; who restores fourfold to all whom he has injured, be so bad? Have the people, and has Jesus mistaken his character? Is he a misjudged and unappreciated man?

Not so do I read the story. The words which we are thinking of are not meant to describe his past, but his future. They do not set forth what has been his habit, his manner of living; they are the announcement of a suddenly formed purpose. And that purpose, as we shall see presently, is the natural reaction from what have been up to this time the motive and method of his life.

Though he has done all these bad things, justly won the odium that he enjoys, none the less Jesus sees in him possibilities of amendment and nobility and calls him down from the tree on which he has perched himself to become his guest. This condescention involves an interview and an influx of the personality of Jesus upon his soul. This brings about a tremendous revulsion. The revulsion may perhaps be the end of a long, slow process. Has he not found that his riches after all did not pay him for the loss of his own peace of mind, and for the hate of the community in which he lives, for the scorn of a whole city? Has he not found that after all his wealth did not satisfy or make him happy? That the sin of its acquisition was like a canker at its heart?

More than this, when the light comes it brings out the dark lines. Like a flash of lightning, the presence of Christ illuminates his past; and just as Peter, when he realized the divinity of his Lord, cried: "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord," so Zacchaeus feels all at once the enormity of his sin. It stands up in strong relief against what has been his master passion, his greed. In an instant he sees the turpitude, the ugliness of what he has been doing. What he has seen before dimly is now emphasized, stands before his mind in clear, strong lines. He is in the light and all at once a mighty resolve seizes him. He will break with his past, will give up his besetting sin; yea, will with all his might battle with it. Just as in Ephesus, among the converts of Paul, those who had been dabbling with magic brought their books to burn; just as a drunkard knows that if he is to follow Christ he must dash the cup forever from his lips, so Zacchaeus forms and announces his purpose to break with his greed.

This resolve includes two things.

First—Generosity. "Behold, Lord, the half of my goods, of my income, I give to the poor."

Notice the proportion. Moses asked at least one-tenth. Add to that demands for public requirements and a fifth was reached. This man says "half." Compare that with the gifts of some of our notoriously rich men to-day. Very few attain to the mark of this converted publican. A man who died the other day left an estate of some $7,500,0000, of which $100,000 was bequeathed to charity, and the newspaper spoke of a large amount being bequeathed for charitable bequests. One hundred thousand dollars out of $7,500,000 is a very small proportion. Let us hope that during his life time the man did better than that. There was something extraordinary in the bigness of this purpose of Zacchaeus. Our multi-millionaires, most of them, even those who at times startle us by their gifts, have still something to learn from Jericho's publican.

Secondly—Restitution. "If I have taken any thing from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold."

What a vista these words open back into his life. They show how a part at least of his wealth had been won. They show also how the methods of the past look now to his awakening conscience. He proposes to deal with his habit by a heroic treatment. "I will restore fourfold." As he carries out that purpose, imagine, if you can, the effect upon those, who in the past, had had bitter and exasperating experiences with him. Should the like be done to-day, what a stirring up there would be. What a change of places between the rich and the poor. What vast swellings of the conscience fund of the government! What thousands, perhaps millions of acres of public land would be returned to government control. What a disgorging there would be of exhorbitant freights. How many policy holders would be made glad. How many crushed out firms would be resuscitated. Imagine, if you can, the restitution of all wrongly gotten wealth. Why it would be like streams of water flowing through dry places. It would be like a transformation scene in a pantomime.

It is almost inconceivable, and yet that is what Christianity meant to Zacchaeus. It was a salvation not from death eternal, it was primarily a salvation from his greed, from his selfishness, from his isolation, from his fellows. And notice that Jesus accepts his purpose as a perfectly proper thing. He has the true spirit of a converted life—large-hearted liberality, restitution of all wrongly taken property. Given these two things everywhere and religion becomes real and vital. Deny them and there is only a name to live. It is idle to talk about being Christians, unless our religion means open-heartedness and righteousness.

Christ Anchors the Soul.

Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, speaking of Christ as an anchor to the soul, says significantly: "You are certain to be assailed with troubles. No hurricane can strike a full rigged ship more suddenly than storms of adversity may burst upon you. But if Jesus Christ is in your soul you cannot suffer wreck. The anchor sure and steady will hold you. People do not see what holds a vessel when the gale is sending the billows over her bow. The anchor is invisible, as it lies full many a fathom deep on the solid ground beneath the waves. So, when we see a good man beaten upon with heavy adversities and yet preserving a cheerful spirit, we do not discover the secret of his serenity. 'But the eye of God sees that there is an interior life hid with Christ in that soul which no storm can touch.' There is many a bereavement, many a trouble that may strip a man of canvas or cordage, but never touch the solid strength of his godly character."

The nearer you are to the Saviour the farther are you from sin.

How the American Spy Stole Great Britain's Naval Signal Code.

THERE was a good deal of bitterness between England and the Northern States at this time, and the Government at Washington was deeply interested in the despatches forwarded by the British Minister to his home Government. It was known that England was friendly to the Confederacy and willing to aid it secretly, if not by open recognition. Under such conditions, it became necessary to know as much as possible of what was passing to and fro between Washington and London in the form of cryptograms; and while most of this matter went by messenger or mail to New York, there were many cipher telegrams sent at the last moment to catch the outgoing steamer, there being no ocean cable at that time. At the telegraph office all such messages were subjected to examination and copies of them were made. After a brief conversation with Secretary Welles, the old gentleman brought out one of these cipher copies, and placing it in my hands said:

"Mr. Osbon, you have a way of finding out secrets. Do you think you can solve that? If you can, it will be worth five thousand dollars to you."

I did not know even the nature of the paper at the time, but I saw that it was a cipher made up partly of words and partly of a combination of numerals, usually in groups of four figures. Something about it suggested to me a naval signal book, and the thought occurred that perhaps if we had a copy of that used by British service we might unravel the mystery. I studied the paper for some time, and the more I considered the matter the more certain I became that the British naval signal book would furnish the key. I finally informed Mr. Welles that I believed I could work the matter out, but that I would need several days' leave from my paper and perfect copies of the ciphers. The former I obtained without difficulty, and the latter were promptly supplied. With them in an inner pocket, I left that night for Boston, where a British man-o'-war was lying. It was my purpose to secure her signal book at whatever hazard and by whatever means, for in such cases the old adage of "All is fair in love and war" holds true.

What I had undertaken to do was a risky business. The two nations were at peace, outwardly at least, and if my attempt were detected I could expect neither mercy from one side nor succor from the other. I think, however, I gave this phase of the matter but slight consideration. My chief thought was of the signal book, and how to get it.

Arriving at Boston, I promptly used my naval acquaintance to get introductions to the officers of her majesty's service, and by a diplomatic course of wining and dining presently made myself a welcome visitor on her majesty's vessel. Indeed, I soon became a favorite with all on board, especially with the signal officer, to whom I told my best yarns, often inviting him to a dinner ashore to hear them. Of course, this resulted in return invitations, and sometimes it happened that when I wished to brush my hair or otherwise attend to my toilet I was invited to make use of his room for that purpose.

It was but a brief time before I had located the coveted signal book—a tidily bound volume with leaden plates riveted to the corners, so that in event of capture it could be readily dropped overboard and lost. The whole was encased in a canvas bag, suspended by a shoulder-strap. During my next visit I had sufficient opportunity to examine the book for a few minutes, and found to my delight that it did, in reality, furnish the key I wanted. I had memorized a few of the cryptographic words, and with the book before me and the signal officer at muster on deck I verified my conclusions. The next thing in order was to secure this priceless volume. I reasoned that as there were no other English vessels nearby, it might be weeks before the book would be needed, and that if I could remove the contents from the covers, substituting them with leaves of the same bulk and appearance, there would be a good chance not only to get safely clear of the vessel, but for a considerable period to elapse before the loss was discovered, by which time it would be by no means certain when the abstraction had occurred.

I therefore took careful measurements, and the next time I boarded the ship my dummy book was with me—a copy of Ray's Arithmetic, if I remember correctly, picked up on a second-hand stall. That was a foggy night, and I lingered late. When I mentioned going ashore, my friend, the signal officer, protested, and offered me the use of his room. I had hardly dared hope for this stroke of fortune.

I had plenty of time that night to do the job in a neat and workmanlike manner. I was really proud of the resemblance the Ray's Arithmetic bore to the signal book when it was properly in its neat covers and riveted leaden plates. Then, after carefully adjusting my prize to its new dress, I lay down and slept the sleep that comes of well-doing and a clear conscience.

I did not hurry away next morning—that would not do. I even lingered a little, and finally bade them all good-by, with a good deal of regret I must own, for they were jolly fellows.

Arriving on shore, I lost no time in getting a train for the Capital, and once aboard the strain told on me, for I had been keyed to a pretty high pitch during those days in Boston, and I dozed and slept most of the day and all that night without a break.

But I was at the Department next morning, bright and early, and when the Secretary had glanced over his mail he sent for me to come to his private office.

"Well, Mr. Osbon," he said, "you have made a long stay. Have you been able to read those telegrams yet?"

I drew up a chair beside him, and pulling out a cipher of over one hundred and fifty words, read to him a well-connected, perfectly intelligible, highly interesting and important communication from the British Minister to the Home Secretary.—Pearson's Magazine.

WAYS OF GREAT MEN

How Some Celebrities Ate, Slept, Worked and Played.

Lives of great men usually remind us that we cannot make our lives sublime by following their rules about diet, drink, work and sleep. Gladstone's rule about chewing his food with many bites before swallowing it, was excellent sense, a good rule for every one. But Thomas Edison, being interviewed the other day about his habits, advocated more work as a cure for overwork and little food and not much sleep as highly beneficial. Digestion easily becomes a tax on vitality, and remarkable benefits sometimes come from cutting down the rations of an ailing person. Moreover, a change of employment is restful. But the faculty will hardly back Mr. Edison in advocating less sleep for the majority of mankind, or in prescribing harder work as a cure for overwork. Mark Twain confesses that he has lately cured himself of indigestion by substituting three or four frugal meals a day for one big one. Think of this keeping up, and so well up, these many years on one meal a day! When you run the very small eaters to earth you usually find that they are pretty steady and generous consumers of tobacco. Mr. Edison smokes. Mr. Horace Fletcher, the English prophet of little to eat and chew it very fine, is a fairly constant smoker. Mark Twain is not conscious of taking any exercise, and when he has something important to do, he stays abed until it is done. Any beginner who followed his regimen of Mr. Edison's would come punctually to grief. The truth is a seasoned mind-worker of mature years is apt to be one of the toughest things that nature's laboratory produces. He is apt to be in considerable measure poison-proof; at least he has learned, usually, what he can do, and what he cannot do, with alcohol, tobacco, coffee and tea. And he has usually learned not to burden his body with an unnecessary amount of food, or else his habits of digestion are so perfected that nothing jolts them. An average first-flight football player is a baby in the important kinds of hardiness compared with a thoroughly seasoned lawyer or writer.—Harper's Weekly.

She Was Not to Be Fooled.

Jim Matthews, who sells shoes all over the West for a Cincinnati house, was at the Brown Palace Monday. During the evening Matthews and another shoe salesman were talking "shop" near the desk in the lobby. "Say," said Clerk Churchill to them, "I want to ask you fellows something. How about this claim you often hear, that women always want to wear shoes a size or two too small for them? Do shoe clerks have to fool them?"

"Sometimes they do," replied Matthews, "but not nearly so much as the newspaper humorists would have you believe. I shall never forget a time that I was waiting on a woman in Kansas City when I was a shoe clerk. She was elegantly dressed and very stylish. Her foot called for a No. 4 shoe. I figured that she would have to be fooled, so I got a No. 4 and said: 'Madam, here's a No. 2. I think it is exactly what you wear.'"

"Did it please her?" asked Churchill.

"Please her! I should say not," replied the shoe salesman. "She got up and picked up her bundles. 'Young man,' she said, 'you are simply a liar. My foot needs a No. 4. I didn't come in here to be fooled or lied to.' Then she waltzed out. The proprietor, who had been standing near, was serious for a moment. Then he smiled. 'Well, Jim,' he said, 'she called the turn on you, anyway. You do tell some awfully big ones.'"—Denver Post.

The African Drum.

The African drum appears in varied and often picturesque forms. The natives make drums out of shells, tree trunks, or earthenware, covered with the skin of some wild animal, or sometimes with India rubber. Of the original calabash drums there is probably only one specimen in Europe. Some of the drums are highly ornamented, either by painting or carving. One specimen, indeed, has puzzled travellers, for there is depicted on it unmistakably a cross, and also a head of European type. A drum found in Upper Lualaba has a unique peculiarity in the way of a "sympathetic chord," formed by means of a small tube, ingeniously inserted in the side of the instrument, which causes, when the drum is beaten, a vibration resembling that of the reed pipe.—Southern Workman.

Words.

Noah Webster gazed at his completed dictionary with alarm.

"I hope," he said, "there will be words enough in it to describe the President's attitude on the railroad-rate question."

Still doubting he went to sleep in his Amherst home.—New York World.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR JANUARY 28.

Subject: The Baptism of Jesus, Mark i., 1-11—Golden Text, I Sam. vii., 3—Memory Verses, 10, 11—Topic: Christ's Preparation For His Life Work.

I. Preparing the way (vs. 1-3). 1. "The beginning." Matthew begins with a genealogy of our Lord and Luke with the history of His infancy, but Mark commences in the midst of gospel events. He seems anxious to come at once to Christ's public life and ministry. "Gospel." The gospel of Jesus Christ denotes the "glad tidings" or "good news," concerning Jesus Christ. "Jesus." Jesus means "Saviour." This name shows His human nature. "Christ." This name means "anointed," and is the Greek equivalent of the Hebrew "Messiah." "Son of God." This shows His divine nature. See John 1: 1-3, 14. He was very God, the second person in the Trinity. 2. "Is written." See Mal. 3:1, Isa. 40:3. "I send." This "I" in the prophet is spoken by Jehovah. But this Jehovah is the Messiah. So that we have here a true Jehovah-Jesus. "My messenger." John the Baptist, Christ's herald. 3. "The voice." Attention is called to the message rather than to the messenger. John was weak and insignificant, but he was delivering God's message, and his words produced a mighty effect. "Crying." Heralding, proclaiming. "Wilderness." John preached in the wild, thinly inhabited region lying west of the Jordan and the Dead Sea as far north as Enon, two-thirds of the way to the Sea of Galilee, and on both sides of the lower Jordan. "Prepare—paths straight." This is figurative language. The words illustrate the straightening force of the gospel. There must be a thorough preparation before God, our King, will come to us. The self-life must be "brought low;" the crooked life must be "straightened;" the obstructions of unbelief and carnal desires must be removed.

II. John baptizing (vs. 4, 5). 4. "Preach." Herald; a word suggesting the proclamation of a king. John was a great reformer. "Baptism of repentance." John was a repentance preacher. This was a baptism required and representing an inward spiritual change; the pledge of remission of sins to those who were truly penitent. "For the remission." The remission was to be received of Christ, the repentance was preparatory to Christ's coming and work, and John's baptism was a sign of true repentance.

5. "All the land." A figure representing the sweeping influence of John's preaching. "Confessing." Confession of sin is one of the elements in true repentance. Repentance includes (1) conviction, (2) contrition, (3) confession, (4) reformation, and leads to conversion.

III. John's testimony (vs. 6-8). "Camel's hair." In appearance John resembled Elijah, the prophet. He was clothed in the coarse, rough cloth called sackcloth in the Scriptures. It was cheap, but admirable for keeping out the heat, cold and rain. "Girdle." The Orientals delight in costly, ornamental girdles, but poor people must content themselves with a strip of hide. "Locusts." The law of Moses gave permission to eat locusts (Lev. 11:21). The common locust is about three inches long and closely resembles our grasshopper. Locusts are abundant and cheap and are still used as food by the poorer classes. "Wild honey." Honey stored by bees in hollow trees or in the clefts of the rocks. John's habits were in keeping with his wilderness life. 7. "There cometh." The preaching of John was preparing the minds of the people for the coming of the Messiah, and they began to ask themselves whether he were the Christ. But John was not slow to undeceive them regarding himself. "Mightier." John clearly outlined the work of the coming Messiah. His baptism will effect what mine is powerless to do. "Latchet." The latchet, a word now obsolete, was the thong or lace with which the shoes or sandals were fastened. "Shoes." Or sandals. "Not worthy." John shows his greatness by his self-abasement.

8. "With water—Holy Ghost." John had administered the outward rite, but could not renew their hearts.

IV. Jesus baptized (vs. 9-11). 9. "In those days." While John was preaching and baptizing. "Jesus came." Jesus was about thirty years old. This was the age when priests entered upon their ministry (Num. 4:3), and when the rabbis began to teach. "From Nazareth." Where He had lived in seclusion all these years. So far as we know this was His first public act since He was twelve years of age. "Was baptized." Any confession of sin was of course out of the question. There was only a profession on the part of Jesus that as an Israelite He became subject to the law, and that He was connected with humanity by the ties of blood, of suffering and of love. "Of John." At first John hesitated about baptizing Jesus (Matt. 3:14, 15). 10. "He saw." Christ saw it, and John saw it (John 1:33, 34), and it is probable that all who were present saw it; for this was intended to be His public inauguration. "The heavens opened." Luke says that Jesus prayed as soon as He was baptized (Luke 3:21). Here is the first recorded prayer of Christ and its answer. "Like a dove." A symbol this of perfect gentleness, purity, fulness of life, and of the power of communicating it.

11. "Voice from heaven." At two other times during our Lord's earthly ministry was a voice heard from heaven: At the transfiguration (Mark 9:7), and in the courts of the temple during passion week (John 12:28). The Father indorsed Christ's earthly mission. "My beloved Son." Jesus Christ is the Son of God from eternity.

FOUR YEARS OF AGONY.

Whole Foot Nothing But Proud Flesh—Had to Use Crutches—"Cuticura Remedies Best on Earth."

"In the year 1895 the side of my right foot was cut off from the little toe down to the heel, and the physician who had charge of me was trying to sew up the side of my foot, but with no success. At last my whole foot and way up above my calf was nothing but proud flesh. I suffered untold agonies for four years, and tried different physicians and all kinds of ointments. I could walk only with crutches. In two weeks afterwards I saw a change in my limb. Then I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment often during the day, and kept it up for seven months, when my limb was healed up just the same as if I never had trouble. It is eight months now since I stopped using Cuticura Remedies, the best on God's earth. I am working at the present day, after five years of suffering. The cost of Cuticura Ointment and Soap was only $6, but the doctors' bills were more like $600. John M. Lloyd, 718 S. Arch Ave., Alliance, Ohio, June 27, 1905."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

SHARK FISHING

A "Sport" That is Both Dangerous and Exhilarating.

With a splash sufficiently vigorous to scare a sleeping whale, over goes the hook—half a hundredweight of ironware, fastened by a steel chain to a rope cable, capable of standing a tested strain of five tons. One does not fish for the tiger of the seas with silk lines and drawn-gut casts. The hook is baited with a four-pound lump of fat, bilious-looking salt pork; or, better still, with a piece of porpoise blubber to which a small square of tough hide is still attached—a bait which no shark that ever swam could resist.

Our quarry is, not unnaturally, somewhat frightened by the splash—made purposely, by the way, with the idea of attracting his attention—with which this delicate lure is thrown to him, and sheers off doubtfully. His hesitation, however, does not last long. He remembers the delightful flavor of the delicacy he has already had, and comes up with a rush to enjoy the second course.

There is a slight oily swirl, a flash of white from his belly as he turns over, two double rows of sharp, murderous-looking teeth come together with a snap, and bait, hook and a foot or two of the rusty chain are swallowed without a gulp. Then, as the point of the hook bites into the cartilaginous framework of his head, he becomes alarmed, and tries to break away. No use; that five-ton cable will hold him. Hand-over-fist he is hauled in to the side; a running noose is dropped down the line and around his body, and a dozen eager anglers haul him unceremoniously up on deck. And then the cream of the fun begins.

He looks bigger now than he did when he was in the water. His lashing tail and viciously snapping jaws are not to be approached without due caution. A slip might mean the loss of an arm, bitten off clean by one of those convulsive snaps. He squirms about, mixing up into a general hotchpotch everything moveable which comes within his reach; and it is not until his power of attack has been most strictly limited by the tangle of ropes of all kinds which have been jerked and twisted around him by the more daring of his captors, that the majority care to come within reach of his jaws or tail.

A plank is now slipped cautiously under his tail, and, with one short, crisp chop of the cook's big chopper, it is severed from the rest of him at the thinnest part, and carried off to be nailed to the jibboom "for luck." Deprived of his tail, the shark is considered to be practically harmless; and now it is that Jack whips out his sheath-knife, and becomes for the time a cruel, vindictive fiend. Every sailor considers that he has a grudge to pay off against that quivering, defenceless mass of fish, and there and then he proceeds to pay it, revelling in the torments he inflicts, and warmly applauding any device of torture which strikes him as being peculiarly fiendish.—Pearson's Magazine.

The Interview That Failed.

Following the somewhat indistinct directions of a small and impertinent errand boy, we sought out the Great Man's chambers, and knocked at the Great Man's door. Receiving no answer or assistance from within, we admitted ourselves, and beheld the Great Man seated at his desk, with his back towards us. For a while we stood unobserved, till at last, by coughing for a third time with offensive noisiness, we attracted his attention.

Without turning around, he addressed us in the following gracious and outspoken manner . . . . "I have paid my Income Tax, I cannot give you bread, money or hospital tickets, nor do I stand in need of anybody's backache pills. You need not, therefore, stay."

"Excuse us," we replied, "we are not tax collectors, beggars or touts."

"In any case," he said, "you will find the door behind you."

Encouraged by this genial welcome, we proceeded to the object of our visit, and arranging in our minds a series of questions as to the Great Man's past, present and probable future, his own, his wife's, his children's, and his servants' domestic pets, we opened with the usual question: "You are, we believe, the renowned Mr. Ettseterer?"

"I am," he replied, "not."

Feeling that further interrogation was as unnecessary as it would be impolite, we wished our host a cordial "Good-night," and, whistling merrily, took our leave.—Punch.

Castro Very Short of Money.

I am informed by diplomatists who keep in touch with Venezuelan affairs that President Castro is very short of money, owing to a serious diminution in the customs, due no doubt, to his provocative policy abroad. All public works have been stopped, and Government contracts are being annulled. As for the French Cable Company dispute, President Castro has tried to induce an English firm to provide a telegraphic service with the United States by laying a cable via Trinidad. But Trinidad refused permission, and the English firm declined the proposal. In the meantime the quarrel with France is as far from settlement as ever, but there is no truth in the rumors industriously invented that the French Government is about to use force. I learn unofficially, but on very good evidence, that the difficulty is likely to be settled in quite another way. If France will only wait patiently and give President Castro a little more rope, he will hang himself. There is little doubt that a revolution is in prospect, which would probably end his perverse career.—London Standard.

Birth Rate Follows Trade.

At a meeting of the Royal Statistical Society, held recently in London, at the society's rooms, a paper was read on "The Changes in the Marriage and Birth Rates in England and Wales During the Last Half Century, With an Inquiry as to Their Causes," by G. Udny Yule. A careful examination of the fluctuations in the birth rate showed, declared Mr. Yule, that it appeared to respond, like the marriage rate to the cycle of trade and industry, though the movement is curiously irregular as compared with that of the latter rate. The fall of the birth rate or a marked increase in the rate of fall, commenced in many European countries just about 1875-6—that is, when the effect of the fall of prices from 1873 was just beginning to make itself felt. The turning point was too well marked not to be due to some very definite cause and too widespread to be ascribed to any cause of at all a local character. The greatest intercensal increase rates in England and Wales occurred, it was pointed out, after periods of high prices.

Don Louis Terrazas, a great friend of President Diaz, has a farm at Chihuahua of about 8,000,000 acres. Don Louis is thought to own more than 1,000,000 cattle. His stable consists of some 100,000 horses; his sheepfold of 700,000 sheep. From 200,000 to 300,000 calves are branded with his brand every spring. More than 1,000 cowboys keep his cattle. At his slaughter and packing houses near Chihuahua City, 250,000 cattle, as many sheep and hogs innumerable are killed and away they go in his own refrigerator cars. Some 40,000 persons dwell on his estate.

TWENTY YEARS OF IT.

Emaciated by Diabetes; Tortured With Gravel and Kidney Pains.

Henry Soule, cobbler, of Hammondsport, N. Y., says: "Since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me eight years ago, I've reached 70 and hope to live many years longer. But twenty years ago I had kidney trouble so bad I could not work. Backache was persistent and it was agony to lift anything. Gravel, whirling headaches, dizziness and terrible urinary disorders ran me down from 168 to 100 pounds. Doctors told me I had diabetes and could not live. I was wretched and hopeless when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but they cured me eight years ago, and I've been well ever since."

Concerning Seasickness.

Two congressmen, discussing the discomforts of travel, happened to branch off on to the subject of seasickness. One of them said:

"Talk about seasickness; the fellow that traveled with me on my last European trip beat anything I ever met in all my experiences before. I tried all sorts of remedies on him, but without avail. He kept repeating, 'Oh, I am so sick—I am so sick.'

"Finally I cried out, 'Can't you keep anything on your stomach?'

REAL ADMIRAL HICHBORN.

Admiral's Words Carry Weight.

Rear Admiral Hichborn is one of the best known officers of our navy. His statements concerning Peruna will have much weight as they go out in the world. What he says is echoed by many other officers of high standing.

What the Admiral Says.

Philip Hichborn, Rear Admiral of the U. S. Navy, Washington, D. C., writes:

"After the use of Peruna for a short period, I can now cheerfully recommend your valuable remedy to any one who is in need of an invigorating tonic."—Philip Hichborn.

An Ever-Present Foe

The soldier and the sailor are especially subject to catarrh. In the barracks and on the field Peruna is found equally efficacious to overcome this physical enemy. If taken in time it will prevent colds from developing into catarrh. Even after a cold has settled in some organ of the body Peruna can be relied upon as an efficacious remedy to promptly ...

Peruna will relieve catarrh, whether acute or chronic, but a few doses of it taken in the first stages of the disease will be more effective than when the disease has become established.

An Authoress's Luck.

There occurred not long ago the fiftieth aniversary of the death of Mary Russell Mitford, dear to readers for the sake of "Our Village." In her childhood lotteries were still popular, and Mary in 1797 became a ticket holder in one. She insisted on choosing the number 2,224 because the digits made up the sum of her age. That ticket won her $100,000. Like the $250,000 which her father had had in addition, this sum was wasted by him, and the daughter had at the age of three and twenty years to settle down to keep him for the rest of his life out of the money she earned with her pen.

Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullen is Nature's great remedy—Cures Coughs, Colds, Croup and Consumption, and all throat and lung troubles. At druggists, 25c., 50c. and $1.00 per bottle.

HIGH CLASS DRUGGISTS

AND—OTHERS.

The better class of druggists, everywhere, are men of scientific attainments and high integrity, who devote their lives to the welfare of their fellow men in supplying the best of remedies and purest medicinal agents of known value, in accordance with physicians' prescriptions and scientific formula. Druggists of the better class manufacture many excellent remedies, but always under original or officinal names and they never sell false brands, or imitation medicines. They are the men to deal with when in need of anything in their line, which usually includes all standard remedies and corresponding adjuncts of a first-class pharmacy and the finest and best of toilet articles and preparations and many useful accessories and remedial appliances. The earning of a fair living, with the satisfaction which arises from a knowledge of the benefits conferred upon their patrons and assistance to the medical profession, is usually their greatest reward for long years of study and many hours of daily toil. They all know that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative remedy and that it gives universal satisfaction, and therefore they are selling many millions of bottles annually to the well informed purchasers of the choicest remedies, and they always take pleasure in handing out the genuine article bearing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package. They know that in cases of colds and headaches attended by biliousness and constipation and of weakness or torpidity of the liver and bowels, arising from irregular habits, indigestion, or over-eating, that there is no other remedy so pleasant, prompt and beneficial in its effects as Syrup of Figs, and they are glad to sell it because it gives universal satisfaction.

Owing to the excellence of Syrup of Figs, the universal satisfaction which it gives and the immense demand for it, imitations have been made, tried and condemned, but there are individual druggists to be found, here and there, who do not maintain the dignity and principles of the profession and whose greed gets the better of their judgment, and who do not hesitate to recommend and try to sell the imitations in order to make a larger profit. Such preparations sometimes have the name—"Syrup of Figs"—or "Fig Syrup" and of some piratical concern, or fictitious fig syrup company, printed on the package, but they never have the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of the package. The imitations should be rejected because they are injurious to the system. In order to sell the imitations they find it necessary to resort to misrepresentation or deception, and whenever a dealer passes off on a customer a preparation under the name of "Syrup of Figs" or "Fig Syrup," which does not bear the full name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of the package, he is attempting to deceive and mislead the patron who has been so unfortunate as to enter his establishment, whether it be large or small, for if the dealer resorts to misrepresentation and and deception in one case he will do so with other medicinal agents, and in the filling of physicians' prescriptions, and should be avoided by every one who values health and happiness. Knowing that the great majority of druggists are reliable, we supply the immense demand for our excellent remedy entirely through the druggists, of whom it may be purchased everywhere, in original packages only, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, but as exceptions exist it is necessary to inform the public of the facts, in order that all may decline or return any imitation which may be sold to them. If it does not bear the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, do not hesitate to return the article and to demand the return of your money, and in future go to one of the better class of druggists who will sell you what you wish and the best of everything in his line at reasonable prices.

MEMORIAL.

Died near Kincheon the night of the 16th of January, 1906, after 15 days of illness, Mrs Mary A Ramsey, in the 80th year of her age, leaving seven children, five boys and two girls, to mourn her loss. Her death was a sad affliction to her family all of whom loved her ardently. But it was a triumph for her, for she had made ready for the mysterious event through church membership of 35 years. Death cannot come to those untimely who art fit to die; the finger of God touched her gently and she sleeps the sleep of the just. Her faith is expressed in the following lines selected from the Bible: "Watch, therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh." She was a good mother, a consistent Christian. She told her daughter before death that she was ready and was only waiting the summons. She had a favorite song, "Nearer my God to Thee," and was asked just before death if she wanted it sung. She could not speak but nodded her head, yes. As Misses Luttie Cassel and Lillie Wright, her grand daughters, sang it, she would work her pale lips, trying to help them. She got happy as they sang and raised her hand and pointed towards heaven. She died without a struggle. She has gone to meet her husband, who preceded her some 24 years ago. To the loved ones, let me say, weep not, but try to imitate her good life, and you will meet her in the end. She was a member of the Baptist church.

Our mother, she has gone to rest,
Her voice no more we hear.
Til we shall reach the land of bliss,
Then we'll see mother dear.
O, how we miss her smiling face,
And loving tender care.
Our home is now a lonely place,
No one to use her chair.

She was buried at Clantonford, the funeral conducted by Rev. W. J. Ruddick of Stanton.

A FRIEND.

The Banner, Clanton, Ala.

Gentlemen—I am in receipt of copy of your paper, under date of January 25th, containing the very kind and complimentary notice concerning myself, for which please accept my sincerest thanks

Fate has been kind to the majority of old Chilton's sons, and for myself, now a wanderer, I beg to say that no man works or lives for himself alone and the chiefest joy that success or honor brings, is the pleasure it gives those he most loves, and believe me, there are no songs as sweet as the old songs, and no friends as dear as those at home. Again thanking you I beg to remain, Sincerely yours,

Jos W. Johnson.

Maplesville.

Mr Yates and Miss Carrie Walker of Riderville were the charming guests of Mr. Cal Foshee Sunday.

Mr. C. W. Plant spent Friday in Selma with "an old friend."

Mr. Tom Perry is spending his Sundays at Lawley of late, which makes us think that he is in earnest this time.

Mr. Ed Ensign has returned from New York where he has been on a business trip.

Miss Blalock has returned from a pleasant visit to Selma.

Miss Celestia Dunlap and father are guests at the Martin hotel.

Mrs. Dr. Kelley and Mrs. R. H. Martin are visiting relatives in Selma.

Mr. Joe Plant of Birmingham has recently been down enjoying the hunting season. He is a very successful nimrod, consequently some of our young ladies have feasted on "quail on toast."

Mr. S. W. Crews, our up-to-date jeweler, has returned from a pleasant visit to friends at Marion and Uniontown.

Mrs P. DuBose entertained Miss Florence Adair most delightfully at a dining in her lovely home last Saturday, and Master Walton treated her to a ride home behind his splendid span of goats.

Miss Sallie Ramsey has returned from a pleasant visit to Mulberry.

Mr. Frank Kelley and brother of Selma delighted their old friends here with a serenade lately.

Mr. and Mrs. T. U. Crumpton spent a day in Selma last week.

Mr. William Walker of Lily was out calling on his many friends here Sunday afternoon.

Rev. Davis held his fourth Sunday appointment here with a most excellent sermon. All are most cordially invited to come and worship with us on that day.

Miss Minnie Baas of Mississippi is the guest of Mrs. Davidson.

Mrs. Deramus and little daughter Bertha are spending awhile at Clanton.

We sympathize very deeply with a certain young man who is much troubled by the fortune the cards told for him at a late entertainment. Cheer up young man and remember the old adage, "Every cloud has a silver lining." Success to the Banner. Subscriber.

Pending the election for local tax on Feb. 20, permit just a word. Christian education by means of the pulpit, the press and the public school is the oly hope for our country. The foundation of this hope is the public school We must have better schools and better teachers. It will take more money to do this. The way to get it is by local taxation. Chilton county has over 2000 white persons over the age of ten who cannot read or write. Alabama pays less for education than any other State. She stands third in illiteracy. Then rally for the cause the 20th. P. G. Maness.

Finland is Free.

Helsingfors, Finland.—All traces of the regime of terrorism and repression which prevailed during the administration of former Governor-General Bobrikoff, the hated governor, whose cruelties were responsible for his assassination, are disappearing and Finland is rapidly becoming free. New regulations are being put into effect almost daily, by which the old liberties of the Finns are being restored and new right granted. The Czar has consented to the removal of all reactionary officials, most of whom were Russians, and has agreed that in future only Finns will be eligible to hold public office. The Czar has also sanctioned the law which authorizes all Finns who hitherto belonged to the Russian Orthodox church to change their religion without losing their civil rights.

Cotton Oil Mill for Sulligent.

Sulligent, Ala.—The building of a cotton seed oil mill seems now to be assured. Another meeting of the citizens of the town and community has been held and steps taken to effect an organization. A committee was appointed for this purpose, consisting of J. C. Milner, of Vernon, W. W. Ogdon, R. J. Redden and Clyde Matthews, of Sulligent, and Mr. Thom, of Columbus, Miss. Another meeting will be held next Friday night. Forty thousand dollars has been subscribed.

Will Send Wedding Gift.

Havana.—The Cuban senate has passed a resolution authorizing the appropriation of $25,000 for a wedding gift to Miss Alice Roosevelt. President Palma is directed to select the gift. Before the vote was taken General Cisneros, who had been called the most anti-American man in congress, voiced his approval of the bill and moved that it be passed by acclamation. It was so passed. Assurances are given that the house will take similar action.

Jack Thompson Here.

London.—Thomas Higgins, Irish nationalist, who successfully contested North Galway against Col. John Philip Nolan, Irish nationalist, was found dead in bed at his hotel at Tuam. The tragic occurrence is attributed to the excitement of the polling on a weak heart. Mr. Higgins was one of the most militant nationalists in the west of Ireland and had many conflicts with the police. He was imprisoned under the Grimes act during Arthur J. Balfour's tenure of the chief secretaryship of Ireland.

Gomel in Flames.

St. Petersburg.—A dispatch from Gomel says that half the town has been consumed by fire and that much fighting has taken place between the troops and revolutionists. The disorder extends to five counties around Gomel. The peasantry, as in the Baltic provinces, have deposed the old authorities and elected revolutionists to fill their places.

Commits Suicide.

St. Louis, Mo.—Policeman John A. Scollard, who shot himself Friday rather than go before the police board and answer to charges of immorality, is dead. Before his death he dictated a statement, in which he declared he had been hounded to death through false reports concerning him.

Cotton Belt Changes Hands.

Houston, Tex.—A special from Galveston says: The Cotton Belt is now in charge of the Gulf and Interstate railroad, the short line between Galveston and Beaumont, and arrangements are being perfected to place the road in a first-class condition and operate both, at least for some time, as a terminal line for any and all roads that may want to use it.

Work of Grand Jury.

Birmingham, Ala.—The grand jury returned 104 indictments Saturday against almost as many persons for various offenses. No report was made, as it was impossible to conclude all the business before it. The sessions were continued therefore for several days in this week.

Tucker Sentenced to Chair.

Cambridge, Mass.—Chas. L. Tucker, convicted of the murder of Mabel Page in March, 1904, was sentenced to death by electricity during the week of June 10. When asked if he had anything to say Tucker said: "Your honor, all I have to say is that I am absolutely innocent of this crime."

Tulsa, I. T.—Robbers wrecked the safe of the Bank of Owasso, in the Cherokee nation, and escaped with several thousand dollars.

Bank Safe Wrecked.

Montgomery, Ala.—The state treasurer has issued a call for the condition of the state banks at the close of business on January 25.

It is said that the town of Paita, in Peru, has not had a drop of rain in 13 years. The common joke about Paita is that people never die there. They simply get tired out.

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Found Near Cairo.

Birmingham, Ala.—The decomposed body of a woman, supposed to be that of Mrs. J. O. Mangrum, of Nashville, a sister of Mrs. Logan Trousdale, of this city, has been discovered near Cairo Ill., in the Mississippi river. On account of the body being under the water for a great length of time positive identification has not yet been reached, but, as stated above, it is thought they are the remains of Mrs. Mangrum. The only mode of identification appears to be from the make of the shoes worn by the woman at the time of death. A description of the shoes and make were forwarded by detectives of Cairo, Ill., to the Nashville detective department, and have been identified as the same make as some sold to Mrs. Mangrum by a Nashville firm just before she left that city. Some three weeks ago the unfortunate woman, who is only 30 years of age, left her home in Nashville to make a visit in St. Louis. When she left she had $2,500 in money on her person and wore diamonds valued at $2,000. From the time she left nothing was heard from her, and her husband began to grow uneasy. Investigation was started and all police departments notified to be on the lookout for her. Nothing was learned, however, of the woman's whereabouts until the body was discovered in the river.

Safe Blown Open.

Gordo, Ala.—The postoffice here was broken open Friday night. The safe was blown to pieces and the contents taken by the robbers. About $100 in money and $200 in stamps were taken, and one registered letter from Egypt, Miss., addressed to J. D. Corr, was stolen. This letter was No. 22.

At 10:30 p. m. E. T. Wallington, cashier of the Merchants' and Farmers' Bank, left the bank for home. In passing the postoffice he saw a light, but thought nothing of the matter, supposing the postmaster was in the office. After passing the office a man followed him to his boarding place. Mr. Wallington paid no further attention to the matter. There is no clue to the identity of the robbers. The loss is quite heavy on Postmaster Williams. An inspector was at once telegraphed for and the department informed of the matter. Just one year and twenty-two days ago two safes of merchants were blown open in Gordo.

David A. Jones, an old resident, is dead. He recently visited his son at Searles, Ala., and became sick there. He returned home and seemed to be much better, but Friday night he suddenly grew worse, and died about 8:30 o'clock Saturday morning. He served in both the Mexican and civil wars. Mr. Jones had been a prosperous citizen of this county, but for several years has been almost totally blind. He leaves a widow and several children.

Little Girl Burned.

Birmingham, Ala.—Catherine Boyd, the 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Boyd, of 1208 Twelfth avenue, Fountain Heights, who was seriously burned Saturday afternoon while playing with other children, is reported out of danger. The child was playing with a little boy about her own age, who was chasing her with a lighted stick. In some way the little girl's dress caught fire and she was soon enveloped in flames. I. R. Davis, conductor on a passing Fountain Heights car, noticed her plight and jumped off and caught the child as she was about to enter her home. Her clothing was almost entirely burned from her body before the fire was extinguished. She was immediately carried to her home, and the physicians who were summoned at first despaired of her life.

Jack Thomoson in Montgomery.

Montgomery, Ala.—Jack Thompson, the white man convicted in Evergreen for the murder of his wife and father-in-law, and who was given a life sentence, was brought to Montgomery by Deputy Sheriff Leigh, of Conecuh county, and is now locked up in the county jail. Thompson will remain in this jail until the state convict bureau orders him sent to the state penitentiary. When Thompson arrived he was immediately carried to the jail where he was locked up and where he is now located. From all outward appearances Thompson is a man of unsound mind, but whether or not it is acting is not known.

Negroes Held to Bail.

Birmingham, Ala.—Sherman Beard and Felix Wright, both colored, were held to bail in the police court on the charge of assault with intent to murder. Bond was fixed at $200 in each case.

Nordan Sentenced.

Abbeville, Ala.—The jury in the Abbeville, S. C.—The jury in the case of Walter Nordan, who has been on trial the past week for the murder of his wife, has returned a verdict of guilty and fixed his punishment at life imprisonment. Nordan is a prominent young merchant of Abbeville. His bride of three weeks died suddenly in September, 1902, and it was found that her death was due to strychnine poisoning.

Farmer Hangs Himself.

Florence, Ala.—Meagre details were brought to Florence Saturday morning of the suicide of Thomas McClanahan at his home near Pleasant Weather, north of Florence, just across the Tennessee state line. McClanahan was alone on the place, his young daughter having gone on an errand to the home of her brother, a quarter of a mile away. She had noticed nothing unusual in her father's manner, and he had said nothing to indicate the desperate resolve which he had formed. After a brief absence the girl returned to find her father had hanged himself, and was dangling from the end of a rope, quite dead. He leaves a large family of grown children, several of whom are teachers in this state and Tennessee. His health was good and his finances were in good condition, and so far as his family and friends are aware there was no cause for his self-destruction. The dead man was 55 years old.

Killed in Gas Explosion.

Bessemer, Ala.—Through an explosion of gas in the Blue Creek mines Joe Thomas, Will Stephens and Will Hinds were badly burned, and after suffering for several hours Thomas died. The body was brought to this city and prepared for burial. All the men were negroes. It is thought the two still living will recover from the burns.

Robbed Store.

Union Springs, Ala.—The store of C. C. Bates was burglarized at Inverness a few night ago. Entrance was made by boring auger holes in the door and inserting a prize in these holes and breaking the lock. Only a few things were missed, and it is thought that money was what they were after. An attempt to enter C. W. Sellers' store was made the same night.

Tuscaloosa Primary.

Tuscaloosa, Ala.—The democratic county executive committee has decided that the primaries in the county shall be held at the same time of the state primary, which is on the 27th day of August. This date seems to please most of the candidates, although it was expected by some that the county primary would be earlier than the state primary.

Whisky Fight at Leighton.

Leighton, Ala.—The anti-whisky men of Leighton are quietly gathering strength for another blow at the saloons in the city election in March. It is proposed to elect a new board of councilmen to take the places of those who refused to raise the license as requested by a petition signed by 150 persons. Four anti-whisky men have already announced themselves as candidates for the offices of councilmen. The saloon men, it is thought, will support the old board.

Boy Killed at Florala.

ALLIANCE

Of Russia and Germany Now Probable—Cordial Relations of Czar and Kaiser.

NEW GROUPING OF THE POWERS.

Alliance Between France and Russia Is Crumbling, and German and Russ Will Unite.

St. Petersburg.—A new grouping of the powers of Europe, with Germany and Russia arrayed side by side in the closest friendship and the mismatched alliance of the empire with republican France lagging in the rear, was forecasted by the words of Emperor Nicholas at a gala luncheon of Emperor Nicholas in honor of Emperor William's birthday. Rising to his feet before a brilliant company of Russian and German representatives to propose a toast to the German emperor, Emperor Nicholas lifted his glass and said slowly and distinctly, as if weighing every word:

"I drink to the health of the emperor of Germany and the king of Prussia, my brother and very dear friend."

The phrases chosen were significant enough in themselves, the emperor in previous years having proposed the health of the emperor-king without the qualifying expression of brotherhood and friendship; but turning to Herr von Schoen, the German ambassador, who was standing at his right, the emperor grasped him by the hand and is reported to have said:

"Frere, est plus que allis," (Brother, that's more than ally).

The stage of the momentous utterance was the great dining hall of the Alexander or "Little Palace" at Tsarskoe-Selo, where the emperor has his winter residence. The empress and Grand Duke Michael were present at luncheon, to which were invited, besides all members of the German embassy staff, Count Minister Fredericks and many high dignitaries of the court, Russian knights of the German order of the Black Eagle, while the presence of Count Witte, the premier, and Count Lamsdorff, the foreign minister, gave ministerial sanction to the significant utterance. All wore full uniform. The emperor and Grand Duke Michael wore the uniforms of the Prussian regiments of which they are honorary commanders.

The emperor's choice of the word "ally" indicates that the defensive alliance with France is still considered binding, but undoubtedly, as has been the gossip in diplomatic circles here for some time, not a hair's breadth beyond the letter of the treaty providing for common action only in case France is not the aggressor, and there is no telling how soon it will be allowed to pass into desuetude.

The present relations between Germany and Russia have been a matter of slow but steady growth, and signs of the new alignment have long been in the air. Since the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war the warm personal friendship always existing between the two monarchs has been knit closer, and the many material tokens of friendship manifested by Germany during the war, compared with the lukewarm support which France gave, and limited by her new-found entente with Great Britain, has combined to build up strong Germanophile sentiment in influential quarters in St. Petersburg. At the same time much of the necessity to France of the Franco-Russian alliance vanished when France clasped hands with Great Britain and practically assured herself of an ally in case of war.

The present relations between Germany and Russia were also the text of an address delivered by Ambassador von Schoen before the German residents of St. Petersburg who assembled in honor of Emperor William's anniversary.

Will Lose Their Jobs.

St. Petersburg.—In continuation of the policy of retrenchment by the weeding out of inactive members of the military organizations, the retirement on half pay of twenty-two generals and three admirals, who hold sinecures on the Alexander committee for the care of the wounded, will shortly be gazetted. The committee has fifty-one members, who are doing little except drawing their salaries.

CHINESE WANT A REPUBLIC.

Young Men Who Have Returned From Foreign Schools Plan to Overthrow the Dynasty.

San Francisco.—The Rev. S. H. Little, of the Episcopal mission at Hankow, China, who recently returned to the United States on the steamer Mongolia, said in an interview:

"The revolutionary party, agitated by young men who have been at the universities of Japan, wants a republic. They are determined to drive China into a conflict with the powers or secure the overthrow of the present dynasty. They are radical in the extreme, and want to accomplish in China in a few years all that Japan has accomplished in the last fifty years. Their motto is "China for the Chinese." They welcome foreign teachings, but oppose the exploitation of their country for the benefit of foreigners, including the Japanese. These agitators are well organized and are determined to accomplish their purpose. They are engineering the boycott. The Japanese are as much alarmed over the situation as are the Americans. During the recent outbreaks Japanese left the country in haste, fearing for their lives. That uprising was narrowly prevented from becoming general. The next time it may not be so. In any event the whole country is ripe for a change. Japan's success has set them thinking. Never was there a time when need of teachers was so great. China today is not only inviting, but demanding the instruction she needs in advanced thought."

HARSH MEASURES.

Revolutionists in Baltic Provinces Shown Little Mercy—Rounding Them Up by the Troops.

Wenden, Livonia.—The pacification of the Baltic provinces is reaching the final stage so far as the agrarian movement is concerned. Nearly 200 revolutionists have been shot, several thousand are under arrest and 5,000 rifles have been captured by the troops. Generals Orloff, Mainhardt and Wendt are now operating in the Wenden district with 10,000 troops, completing a circle, in which the revolutionists are being gathered. The generals have the names of the leaders of the revolutionists, who will be tried by court-martial when caught and either shot or imprisoned. The majority of those already executed were Lettish teachers or students.

The revolutionists have stopped burning buildings, but they occasionally fire on the troops. Among the burned castles is that of Baron Rosen Grossroop, about twenty miles northwest of Wenden, which was destroyed with all its contents, servants who had been in the service of the baron for twenty years assisting in the work of destruction.

Altogether the revolutionists in this district burned 200 castles, valued at $4,000,000, without including the articles of value which they contained.

To Remove Revenue.

Washington, D. C.—The ways and means committee of the house of representatives has concluded to investigate the advisability of allowing the use of free alcohol in the arts and manufactures. The tax on pure alcohol at present is $2.07 per gallon. The idea is to denaturize the alcohol so that it cannot be drank and then to exempt the tax on the denaturized alcohol. Mr. Underwood, of Alabama, a member of the ways and means committee, has been interesting himself in securing the consideration of this matter by the committee and in getting hearings on the matter, which will commence this week. In answer to a question as to his views on the matter, Mr. Underwood stated that all the European countries allowed the use of denaturized alcohol in the arts without taxation; that America was the only country which taxed the use of alcohol in the arts, and by that taxation had practically deprived the people of the United States of its use.

Abolishes Use of Bible.

New York.—Justice John M. Tirney, of a municipal court in the Bronx, has abolished the use of the Bible in his court. Explaining his action, he said: "I have removed the Bible from my court. It was a desecration to use it there. Lying words from the mouths of lying witnesses made it a mockery, a travesty. I was brought up to regard it with veneration and reverence as the word of God. It is shocking to find men calling upon the Deity to witness the truth of what they say—'so help me God'—with a lie in their hearts and upon the lips by which they profaned the Good Book."

GENERAL STATE NEWS.

Current News Garnered as It Falls From the Plant of Report.

Found Near Cairo.

Birmingham, Ala.—The decomposed body of a woman, supposed to be that of Mrs. J. O. Mangrum, of Nashville, a sister of Mrs. Logan Trousdale, of this city, has been discovered near Cairo Ill., in the Mississippi river. On account of the body being under the water for a great length of time positive identification has not yet been reached, but, as stated above, it is thought they are the remains of Mrs. Mangrum. The only mode of identification appears to be from the make of the shoes worn by the woman at the time of death. A description of the shoes and make were forwarded by detectives of Cairo, Ill., to the Nashville detective department, and have been identified as the same make as some sold to Mrs. Mangrum by a Nashville firm just before she left that city. Some three weeks ago the unfortunate woman, who is only 30 years of age left her home in Nashville to make a visit in St. Louis. When she left she had $2,500 in money on her person and wore diamonds valued at $2,000. From the time she left nothing was heard from her, and her husband began to grow uneasy. Investigation was started and all police departments notified to be on the lookout for her. Nothing was learned, however, of the woman's whereabouts until the body was discovered in the river.

In passing the postoffice he saw a light, but thought nothing of the matter supposing the postmaster was in the office. After passing the office a man followed him to his boarding place. Mr. Wallington paid no further attention to the matter. There is no clue to the identity of the robbers. The loss is quite heavy on Postmaster Williams. An inspector was at once telegraphed for and the department informed of the matter. Just one year and twenty-two days ago two safes of merchants were blown open in Gordo.

ALLIANCE

Of Russia and Germany Now Probable—Cordial Relations of Czar and Kaiser.

NEW GROUPING OF THE POWERS.

Alliance Between France and Russia Is Crumbling, and German and Russ Will Unite.

St. Petersburg.—A new grouping of the powers of Europe, with Germany and Russia arrayed side by side in the closest friendship and the mismatched alliance of the empire with republican France lagging in the rear, was forecasted by the words of Emperor Nicholas at a gala luncheon of Emperor Nicholas in honor of Emperor William's birthday. Rising to his feet before a brilliant company of Russian and German representatives to propose a toast to the German emperor, Emperor Nicholas lifted his glass and said slowly and distinctly, as if weighing every word:

"I drink to the health of the emperor of Germany and the king of Prussia, my brother and very dear friend."

The phrases chosen were significant enough in themselves, the emperor in previous years having proposed the health of the emperor-king without the qualifying expression of brotherhood and friendship; but turning to Herr von Schoen, the German ambassador, who was standing at his right, the emperor grasped him by the hand and is reported to have said:

"Frere, est plus que allis," (Brother, that's more than ally).

The stage of the momentous utterance was the great dining hall of the Alexander or "Little Palace" at Tsarskoe-Selo, where the emperor has his winter residence. The empress and Grand Duke Michael were present at luncheon, to which were invited, besides all members of the German embassy staff, Count Minister Fredericks and many high dignitaries of the court, Russian knights of the German order of the Black Eagle, while the presence of Count Witte, the premier, and Count Lamsdorff, the foreign minister, gave ministerial sanction to the significant utterance. All wore full uniform. The emperor and Grand Duke Michael wore the uniforms of the Prussian regiments of which they are honorary commanders.

The emperor's choice of the word "ally" indicates that the defensive alliance with France is still considered binding, but undoubtedly, as has been the gossip in diplomatic circles here for some time, not a hair's breadth beyond the letter of the treaty providing for common action only in case France is not the aggressor, and there is no telling how soon it will be allowed to pass into desuetude.

The present relations between Germany and Russia have been a matter of slow but steady growth, and signs of the new alignment have long been in the air. Since the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war the warm personal friendship always existing between the two monarchs has been knit closer, and the many material tokens of friendship manifested by Germany during the war, compared with the lukewarm support which France gave, and limited by her new-found entente with Great Britain, has combined to build up strong Germanophile sentiment in influential quarters in St. Petersburg. At the same time much of the necessity to France of the Franco-Russian alliance vanished when France clasped hands with Great Britain and practically assured herself of an ally in case of war.

The present relations between Germany and Russia were also the text of an address delivered by Ambassador von Schoen before the German residents of St. Petersburg who assembled in honor of Emperor William's anniversary.

Funeral of General Wheeler.

Washington, D. C.—Gen. Joseph Wheeler, whose death occurred in Brooklyn Thursday, was buried in the national cemetery at Arlington with the full milary honors due an officer of his rank—brigadier-general of the United States army.

The plot selected was on the slope to the right of the historic Arlington house, where his body finally was placed at rest. The funeral services were held at St. John church, in this city, Monday afternoon, and were conducted by the rector of the church, Rev. Cotton Smith. Chaplain Charles C. Pierce, stationed with the troops at Fort Micer, assisted in the service at the grave. The escort consisted of troops from all branches of the service.

Will Lose Their Jobs.

St. Petersburg.—In continuation of the policy of retrenchment by the weeding out of inactive members of the military organizations, the retirement on half pay of twenty-two generals and three admirals, who hold sinecures on the Alexander committee for the care of the wounded, will shortly be gazetted. The committee has fifty-one members, who are doing little except drawing their salaries.

CHINESE WANT A REPUBLIC.

Young Men Who Have Returned From Foreign Schools Plan to Overthrow the Dynasty.

San Francisco.—The Rev. S. H. Little, of the Episcopal mission at Hankow, China, who recently returned to the United States on the steamer Mongolia, said in an interview:

"The revolutionary party, agitated by young men who have been at the universities of Japan, wants a republic. They are determined to drive China into a conflict with the powers or secure the overthrow of the present dynasty. They are radical in the extreme, and want to accomplish in China in a few years all that Japan has accomplished in the last fifty years. Their motto is "China for the Chinese." They welcome foreign teachings, but oppose the exploitation of their country for the benefit of foreigners, including the Japanese. These agitators are well organized and are determined to accomplish their purpose. They are engineering the boycott. The Japanese are as much alarmed over the situation as are the Americans. During the recent outbreaks Japanese left the country in haste, fearing for their lives. That uprising was narrowly prevented from becoming general. The next time it may not be so. In any event the whole country is ripe for a change. Japan's success has set them thinking. Never was there a time when need of teachers was so great. China today is not only inviting, but demanding the instruction she needs in advanced thought."

HARSH MEASURES.

Revolutionists in Baltic Provinces Shown Little Mercy—Rounding Them Up by the Troops.

Wenden, Livonia.—The pacification of the Baltic provinces is reaching the final stage so far as the agrarian movement is concerned. Nearly 200 revolutionists have been shot, several thousand are under arrest and 5,000 rifles have been captured by the troops. Generals Orloff, Mainhardt and Wendt are now operating in the Wenden district with 10,000 troops, completing a circle, in which the revolutionists are being gathered. The generals have the names of the leaders of the revolutionists, who will be tried by court-martial when caught and either shot or imprisoned. The majority of those already executed were Lettish teachers or students.

The revolutionists have stopped burning buildings, but they occasionally fire on the troops. Among the burned castles is that of Baron Rosen Grossroop, about twenty miles northwest of Wenden, which was destroyed with all its contents, servants who had been in the service of the baron for twenty years assisting in the work of destruction.

Altogether the revolutionists in this district burned 200 castles, valued at $4,000,000, without including the articles of value which they contained.

To Remove Revenue.

Washington, D. C.—The ways and means committee of the house of representatives has concluded to investigate the advisability of allowing the use of free alcohol in the arts and manufactures. The tax on pure alcohol at present is $2.07 per gallon. The idea is to denaturize the alcohol so that it cannot be drank and then to exempt the tax on the denaturized alcohol. Mr. Underwood, of Alabama, a member of the ways and means committee, has been interesting himself in securing the consideration of this matter by the committee and in getting hearings on the matter, which will commence this week. In answer to a question as to his views on the matter, Mr. Underwood stated that all the European countries allowed the use of denaturized alcohol in the arts without taxation; that America was the only country which taxed the use of alcohol in the arts, and by that taxation had practically deprived the people of the United States of its use.

Abolishes Use of Bible.

New York.—Justice John M. Tirney, of a municipal court in the Bronx, has abolished the use of the Bible in his court. Explaining his action, he said: "I have removed the Bible from my court. It was a desecration to use it there. Lying words from the mouths of lying witnesses made it a mockery, a travesty. I was brought up to regard it with veneration and reverence as the word of God. It is shocking to find men calling upon the Deity to witness the truth of what they say—'so help me God'—with a lie in their hearts and upon the lips by which they profaned the Good Book."

THE COTTON CROP.

New Orleans Bulls Somewhat Anxious Over the Outlook for Larger Crop.

New Orleans.—There has been a rather marked change in sentiment here in regard to the future of cotton, and it is of little use disguising the fact that the figures for cotton ginned to January 16 have shaken confidence in quarters where the short-crop doctrine had been preached most vehemently, while even the more conservative operators acknowledge that the situation has changed from that apparently assured a week ago.

The question of whether the figures justified the drop, which has been marked, is hardly worth debating, although it must be said that the decline has established a much healthier condition as regards the parities between here and Liverpool. Thus the market will be likely to respond to any evidence of the wish of the spinner to get out of his hand-to-mouth groove; in fact, it may be said that this is about the only factor which will be likely to carry weight with either side of the ring.

Straddling operations have made themselves felt in the decline, and this fact may perhaps be traced in the course of events at Liverpool, where not only were there signs that the census figures had not received the credence accorded on this side, but the spot sales were large.

The figures of the report—9,998,000 bales—prove that ginning operations have been much more active than anticipated, and the knowledge that there is still part of the crop to pass through the gins, the amount of which as an uncertain quantity has been emphasized by the above figures, has called a halt on estimates with a maximum of 10,250,000 bales for the crop. There's practically no talk along this latter line, and there are not a few who were wedded thereto who are now willing to compromise a divorce on 250,000 extra.

UP AGAINST IT.

Standard Prevented From Continuing as Buyer and Transporter of Indian Territory Output.

Bartlettsville, I. T.—Orders have been received by the Standard Oil Company that hereafter only a third of the mid-continent field's output would be bought, owing to the fact that the Standard Company would be prevented from continuing as a buyer and transporter of petroleum through the proceedings instituted by Attorney-General Hadley, of Missouri.

There is a production of 50,000 barrels daily. The operators are organizing to send a delegation to see the Standard Company's agent in Kansas City, since the enforcement of such an order for long would mean the suspension of all activity here. Failing, they will go to Mr. Hadley to see if he intends to prevent the Standard from transporting oil across Missouri. The committee will tell him that if the Standard is ousted from Missouri it will shut off the market for petroleum products in this field, because the pipe line from the mid-continent field runs through a portion of Missouri.

Already the reduction by two-thirds of the amount formerly taken by the Standard Company has demoralized business, and there are fears that the Standard will cease entirely to take oil during the agitation.

Pretender Active.

Madrid.—According to a dispatch from Melila, the Spanish seaport on the north coast of Morocco, the troops of the pretender, Bu Hamara, have ravaged the Rif region, a coast range of heights and mountains in Northern Morocco, bordering on the Mediterranean, wild and difficult of access in parts, inhabited by the Rif Berbers. There was much fighting, in which the loyal Kybile tribesmen were invariably beaten.

Mohammed el Torres, minister of foreign affairs, who heads the Moroccan delegation at Algeciras, learning that a foundry at Marchacalsa is engaged principally in furnishing the pretender with arms and munitions of war, has sent a telegram to his son, ordering the dispatch of the warship Turki, with instructions that he bombard the factory.

Washington, D. C.—The senate committee on judiciary Monday by a vote of 7 to 5 decided favorably to report the nomination of Erastus J. It is asserted that Parsons is not a resident of the district for which he is named, and this has figured largely in the opposition to him.

Our National Spirit Is a Love of Work

By William M. Ivins, Late Candidate for Mayor of New York.

IF you were to ask me what is America, I should say the whole body of living Americans, and all Americans who have gone before. The story of our national character is the history of our entire national achievement. America consists not only of living men and women, but of great captains of the Revolution, of fathers of the constitution, of soldiers of the war for union and disunion as well, of all the fine and brave spirits that have lived on our soil, and whose souls go marching on in our history, still shaping it from their glorious graves.

It is not easy to put our finger on what might be called our "spiritual centre of gravity." As a nation we certainly have one, but I am not prepared to admit that it is pure commercialism. I should say it was a national love of work. That is why we as yet have no intellectual proletariat and no body of declasses.

One thing which I believe I discovered is that as a nation we are too far from the spiritual, too near the physical and sensual. We are suffering from contagion of luxury. It was one of the causes of both Greek and Roman decline. Yet the luxury of Rome was a sordid want compared with the luxury of America. We are certainly not a religious people in the old sense of the word, but if religion means a quest of the eternal, hunger for knowledge of the infinite, then I do not hesitate to say that we are not irreligious, even if the nation is not spiritually potent to raise a Francis of Assisi, a Savonarola, a Milton, a Pascal or a Newman.

But what is it that is sacred to us—the law? We are probably more disregardful of law than any other people in the world. The Church? There is no church. Property? Possibly. Still, I think what we hold most sacred is the ennobling power of work, and deep down I believe our nation has a sovereign ideal of righteousness—that finally, that is the thing that is sacred to us.

The American is fundamentally "square" and intrepid and generous. He is full of courage, except where he is a mere money bag and where cowardice of the till has made him practically an alien to our temper. Restless activity has come to be recognized as a universal characteristic, and we must admit the restlessness and the activity. Neither industrialism nor commercialism can by any possibility beget dignity or ideals or reverence.

The press is our most suggestive institution. It partakes of all our frailties, but it also partakes of the strongest and best that is in us. The chief function of the press is to equalize the strain of change and to prepare men's minds for it, so that it comes with order and as a natural development. The pulpit has ceased to be the national university, and the press has taken its place. Is the press doing its work well? What kind of men is it making? Very good men, I think—at any rate, better men than I find in the making anywhere else.

"Kill All the Human Wrecks."

By Dr. Charles Eliot Norton, Harvard's Noted Man of Letters.

YOU ask me to express my opinion, in such form that it may be given to the public, concerning the prolongation of life by medical or surgical science when it can be prolonged only at the cost of misery.

The matter has of late acquired new claim for consideration owing to the rapid advance in knowledge and in skill alike of physicians and surgeons and to the application of this increasing knowledge and skill to the lengthening of wretched lives.

The principle that it is a duty to prolong every human life as long as possible, at whatever cost, has hitherto been generally accepted.

Its main support has been the doctrine of the sacredness of human life, and this has been reinforced by two practical considerations of great weight; one, the freedom of physician, surgeon or bystander from all responsibility of decision of a question grave in any case and in which a mistake in judgment might be severely blameworthy; the other, the natural desire on the part of members of the medical and surgical profession to exhibit the resources of their art in mastering extreme difficulties.

The doctrine and the practice have both been pressed too far. There is no ground to hold every human life as inviolably sacred, and to be preserved, no matter with what results to the individual, or to others. On the contrary there are cases to which every reasonable consideration urges that the end should be put. Setting aside all doubtful cases, no right thinking man would hesitate to give a dose of laudanum, sufficient to end suffering and life together, to the victim of an accident from the torturing effects of which recovery was impossible, however many hours of misery might be added to conscious life by stimulants or surgical operations.

Or take another instance, that of an old person whose mind has become a chaos of wild imaginings productive of constant distress not only to the sufferer, but to all who live with and attend him. The plain duty in such a case is not to prolong, but to shorten life.

It is not to be hoped that a superstition so deeply rooted in tradition as that of the duty of prolonging life at any cost will readily yield to the arguments of reason or the pleadings of compassion, but the discussion of the subject in its various aspects may lead gradually to a more enlightened public opinion and to the consequent relief of much misery.

Needs of Our Diplomats.

By Andrew D. White.

IN the greater capitals of Europe the general public know the British, French, Austrian, Italian, and all other important embassies or legations, except that of our country.

The American embassy or legation has no settled home, is sometimes in one quarter of the town, sometimes in another, sometimes almost in an attic, sometimes almost in a cellar, generally inadequate in its accommodations, and frequently unfortunate in its surroundings.

Both my official terms at St. Petersburg showed me that one secret of the great success of British diplomacy, in all parts of the world, is that especial pains are taken regarding this point.

The United States, as perhaps the wealthiest nation in existence—a nation far-reaching in the exercise of its foreign policy, with vast and increasing commercial and other interests throughout the world—should in all substantial matters be equally well provided for.

And in order fully to free my mind I will add that, while the provision for a proper embassy or legation building is the first of all things necessary, it might also be well to increase somewhat the salaries of our representatives abroad. It is utterly impossible for an American diplomatic representative to do his duty upon the salary now given, even while living on the most moderate scale known in the diplomatic corps. To attempt to do so would deprive him of all opportunity to exercise that friendly, personal, social influence which is so important an element in his success. If the carrying out of these reforms should require an appropriation to the diplomatic service 50 per cent. higher than it now is, the total additional cost to each citizen of the United States would be less than half a cent each year.—From the Autobiography of Andrew D. White. Copyright, 1904, by the Century Company.

The Case for Municipal Ownership

By Frederick C. Howe, of Cleveland.

MUNICIPAL ownership is becoming the most insistent issue in local politics. The spontaneity of the issue indicates the deep-seated dissatisfaction with private monopoly. The elections in New York, Cleveland, and Chicago are but political cross-sections of the country at large. The conviction has become well-nigh universal, that the franchise interests are responsible for most of the municipal corruption. It is the desire for franchises, whose values run into fabulous figures, that explains not only the positive corruption, but the indifference of the better-to-do classes, and the heavy burden of reform. These franchises have been appraised at $450,000,000 in New York city; in other large cities they run into hundreds of millions. Their value depends upon no labor except the labor incident to a control of the council. They are created by grant from the city. And they can only exist through a performance of this control. This explains the activity, as well as the corruption, in local politics.

These conditions will be corrected through municipal ownership. When the city owns its own franchises, all classes will demand good government and efficient service. Population can be distributed into the country-side. Cheaper light, water, and heat will relieve the poor of their most serious burdens, while the incidental savings to the community will be tremendous. For municipal ownership pays. The net earnings of the New York Water Works amount to $3,300,000 per year; of the Chicago water plan $2,269,621 the Cleveland waterworks $500,000, and the Detroit waterworks $250,000. Similar [illegible] from other cities. Detroit claims that it costs but $60 per lamp to light its streets by electricity. New York city earns nearly a million dollars a year from its docks, and $315,000 from its markets. The city of Cincinnati, which owns the Cincinnati Southern Railway enjoys a revenue which will leave the property without indebtedness in fifty years' time.

CANDLE AND STAR.

Said the Candle to the Star,
"How very small you are!
You never can outshine
Such radiance as mine,
Because you live so far,
Said the Candle to the Star.

Said the Star, "Now wait and see
What comes to you and me.
Though I live far away,
A million years I'll stay,
But you'll forgotten be"
Said the Star, "Now wait and see."

The little Star shines on,
The Candle's light is gone,
For one is God's own plan,
The other made by man,
The Candle's light is gone;
The little Star shines on.
—Arthur Macy, in Youth's Companion.

A FINLAND BOY'S BATH.

When the boys of Finland want to take a bath, this is the way they do it:

In the first place it is very, very cold in Finland, and the bathroom is not in the house at all, but in a building quite separate.

It is a round building, about the size of an ordinary room. There are no windows, so light and air can only come in when the door is open.

Inside the benches are built all along the wall, and in the centre is a great pile of loose stones. Early on Saturday morning wood is brought in, and a great vessel standing near the stones is filled with water.

Then some one cuts ever so many birch switches, and these are placed on the floor of the bath-house. Next the fire is made under the stones, and it burns all morning. In the afternoon, when the stones are very hot, the fire is put out, the place is swept clean, and all is ready.

The boys undress in their houses and run to the bath-house. As it is generally thirty degrees below zero, you may be sure they do it in double-quick time.

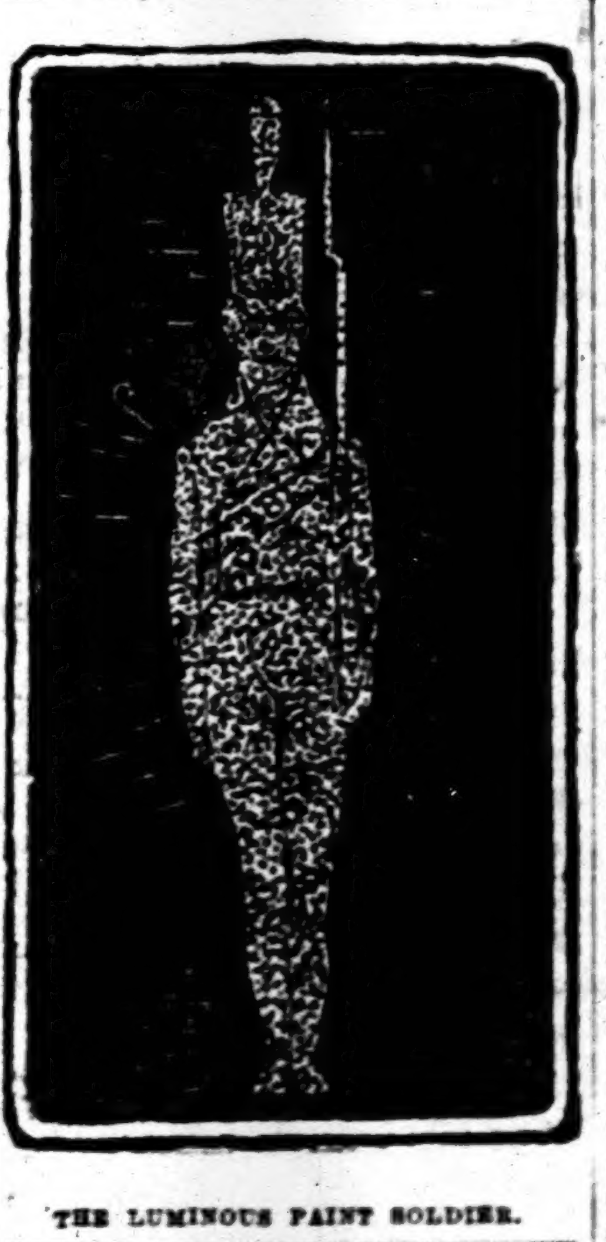
As soon as they are in the bath-house, they shut the door tight and begin to throw water on the hot stones. This, of course, makes the steam rise. More water is thrown on, and there is more steam, until the place is quite full.

And now comes the part that I think you boys would not like at all. Each boy takes a birch stick and falls to whipping his companions. This is to make the blood circulate, and, though it is a real hard whipping, no one objects, but all think it great fun. At last, looking like a lot of boiled lobsters, they all rush out, have a roll in the snow, and make for home.

A SIMPLE EXPERIMENT.

Have you ever seen a room on a dark night whose walls gave out light? If you have, it was because the walls were covered with luminous paint, and this will tell you how to prepare the paint at home.

Wash oyster shells in warm water until they are thoroughly clean, and then heat them for half an hour or so in a hot coal fire. When they have grown cool, pound them in a mortar, removing and throwing away all gray pieces, until only the white remains, ground to a fine powder.



THE LUMINOUS PAINT SOLDIER.

Get a quantity of flowers of sulphur equal to the white powder from the shells, and put into a crucible a layer of the powder, then a layer of the sulphur, alternating the layers until all the powder and the sulphur have been used.

Cement the lid of the crucible with sand mixed with glue, and bake it in hot coals for an hour. When the crucible is cooled off and opened, the resulting powder in it should be white. If any is gray, remove it.

The white powder can now be made into paint by mixing it with gum arabic and water. The powder is sulphide of lime, formed by the union of the lime of the oyster shells with the sulphur. Any object coated with this paint will have for a long time the quality of glowing in the dark, and if the interior of a room is painted with it the room will be filled with a faint light on the darkest night.

Any boy, in the city or in the country, can easily make this luminous paint. It need not be used on the walls of a room, but may be used with a curious effect on toys of various kinds, which will glow in the ... like little ghosts. It is sometimes used on the face of a small clock, the glow being bright enough to enable one to tell the time in the dark.—New York Evening Mail.

A YOUNG SHEPHERD.

"Jack," called papa, "you had better feed the sheep a little early to-night, for a heavy storm is coming."

So little Jack ran obediently to the barn, to find, to his dismay, an empty fold, while a gate slightly ajar told that the flock of sheep and lambs had gone through the long lane to the wood-lot beyond.

"It is all my carelessness," thought the poor child. "I left that gate unfastened this morning. O dear, how black that sky is! But I won't ask any one to help me. I'll just get the big umbrella and hurry as fast as I can."

The sheep, of course, knew that the storm was coming, and were huddled closely together in one corner of the woods. They knew Jack's clear call of "Ca'day! ca'day! ca'day!" and ran joyfully to him as he let down the bars, while great drops of rain began to fall.

The gentle creatures were tired with their long walk, after the winter's captivity, and when about half-way hime one sheep and her lamb lay down, quite unable to go farther.

"Poor Nannie! Can't you go on? Let me help you." But in spite of Jack's coaxing the sheep lay still.

"She'll get sick, lying here, but we can't wait. The others must go home. What shall I do?" and tears came into Jack's eyes and voice. Then a happy thought struck him. "I will just put my umbrella over Nan and her baby, and papa will come back with me to carry them home."

Mr. Acton was in the barn, and started off with the wheelbarrow when his little son told him what had happened, and soon Nannie was safe with her mates in their warm pen.

Mamma looked quite anxious when she saw Jack's dripping little figure, but she gave him a hot bath and some ginger tea, and said, as she tucked him in bed, "Weren't you afraid of catching cold when you left Nan the umbrella?"

"Oh, I did not think about myself; but I couldn't let Nannie get sick, you know, mamma."—Lucy Cartman, in the Youth's Companion.

CAPTIVE GIRAFFES.

I never see a captive giraffe munching his bunch of hay, the mainstay of his life wherever he is a prisoner, without wondering how he can eat such strange food.

No one in Africa ever saw a giraffe eat grass, either dried or in its green condition. They did not bend their necks to the earth to get food, as they are often compelled to do in captivity.

The food of the giraffe in his native home consists almost entirely of the leaves and tender twigs of various kinds of acacia. There are some 400 varieties of this plant. Many of them exude gums resembling caoutchouc, and no animal could eat their foliage; but the leaves and twigs of other kinds make good provender for several species of animals.

The giraffe is among them, and, though I have seen him eat the leaves of other shrubs and trees, he seems to prefer these kinds of acacia. The natives say that he will wander out into the parched wilderness and remain there for about a week without a drop of water, the juices of the acacia being a very good substitute.

So the softest and most pulpy and juicy vegetation, without any of the fibrous quality found in most grasses, is what the giraffe craves for and needs. I don't think that his anatomical conditions adapt him for the fodder he is compelled to eat in captivity.

I have said this to the managers of menageries and zoological parks, and have told them also, as other men have done, that their giraffes are not thriving, and the principal reason is that their food is not suitable.

They are poor in flesh, and the vertebrae in their necks are actually revealed through the hides of some specimens in this country. The giraffe in captivity lacks the plumpness, the sleek fine coat, and the general air of well-being that makes him in Africa the most beautiful creature among all the mammalia.—New York Sun.

KOREA'S GREAT WHITE PARROT.

Min Yung Whan, the Korean prince who killed himself as a protest against the Japanese protectorate, lived in a magnificent palace of his own, which came down to him by hereditary right, and was surrounded with an army of retainers, fighting men, slaves and women. He had a table of beaten silver, crusted with the most precious sapphires, and his state dress was so heavy with gorgeous jewels that it took two men to lift it over his head.

He carried with him on his travels a great white parrot, with rose-colored lining on his wings. The parrot's beak was perforated and on either side was set with priceless sapphires.

The ignorant natives believed that the great white parrot was Min Yung Whan's familiar spirit, and that when he died Min Yung Whan would die, too. When Min Yung Whan's body was found lying on the purple cushions of his couch, the great white parrot flew screaming out of the window and disappeared in the palm trees.—Philadelphia Record.

The census of 1900 gave the population of Clanton as 611. Since that time, from the number of new houses that have been built, every one of them occupied, it is generally conceded that the present population is fully 1200, and when the census of 1910 is taken there is every reason to believe it will be at least 1500. There is a steady and growing demand all the time for residential property, numbers of applicants being forced to go elsewhere.

As expected, Senators Morgan and Pettus have announced their desire to be re-elected, and there is very little doubt but that their wishes will be realized. As their possible successors, John B. Knox of Anniston, Richard H. Clarke of Mobile, and William C. Fitts of Mobile, have already announced their candidacy, and there will probably be others.

We understand that up to three days ago, fully as many poll taxes in Chilton had been paid as the total of last year, with a strong possibility that at least 200 or so more would be paid, February 1, the limit allowed by law. This is a very good showing for Chilton, proving our citizens are well disposed to education, and are anxious to get the fullest possible benefits for their children. The special election for school tax takes place on the 20th of February, and there is strong hopes that it will carry by a substantial majority.

The revival of interest in the cultivation of sugar cane that has followed upon the success of the convention in Macon, Ga., in 1903; Jacksonville, Fla., 1904 and Montgomery, Ala., 1905, we have every reason to believe will be intensified at the convention appointed to meet in Mobile, Ala., Feb. 7th, 8th and 9th, 1906. Of this we are assured by the great interest manifested over the six States comprising the Association in the meeting and the evidences of active co operation from all classes interested in the agricultural and industrial development of these States.

In the death of Gen. Joe Wheeler the South loses one of its brightest and devoted sons, and the country one of its most faithful citizens. Small of stature, large of heart, he did his duty in whatever situation he found himself. As a soldier in the Confederate cause he gained the love and respect of all who served with him, and the admiration and esteem of his opponents. As a warrior of the Union he added laurels to his reputation, proving himself a gallant soldier and patriot. As a statesman he fearlessly contended for that which he thought was right. As a man he was genial in manner, smooth in temper, in short a Southern gentleman.

President Harvie Jordan says that 470,000 bales of the crop were ginned prior to September 1 and were counted in the commercial crop of 1904 5, but have been made a part of the census bureau report of 9,998,111. Deduct the 470,000 bales from the published total of 9,998,111, leaves 9,528,111 to be counted in the crop of 1905 06. Add to this 150,000 bales, and there still remains a crop under 10,000,000 bales. He says that wide investigation shows that spot holders are not selling their cotton and that practically there is no cotton for sale in the face of the present depression.

OUR INTOLERABLE HIGHWAYS

Congress being in session, it is a good time for the friends of highway improvement to be up and doing. We all fully understand that there is at this time much general legislation in the interest of which almost everything else will be sidetracked. The existing obligations of the government must be met first. Appropriations to meet current expenses of government always have precedence, but it is just as well to remember that there are other obligations of government than those now recognized by Congress, and which must be considered if the general welfare is to be conserved. Chief of these and paramount to all others is the matter of improved highways. We boast of the greatest country under the sun, and we have a right to. But its greatness will not be complete until the general government leads the way in systematic construction of wagon roads in connection with the States and subdivisions of States. There is no contention anywhere as to the necessity of better roads. Seventy-five years of experience has sufficiently demonstrated that State methods, no two of which are alike, can never establish systematic road building, or indeed any better roads than we had at the beginning of our national history. The potent aid of the government alone can give what the country needs along this line. The government owes a duty to its citizens in this matter which can never be denied upon tenable ground. Will the government discharge that duty? We are clearly convinced that it will. There is a way to bring it about. The right of petition is recognized without dispute. The people of the several States are clothed with superior power, and a demand for audience will always be heard by the law making bodies at Washington. The Brownlow-Latimer bills are again before Congress, their purpose being to secure national aid to good roads. We suggest to the readers of this paper that they not only write letters in their individual capacity to our Senators and Representatives, urging support of these bills, but that petitions be gotten up in every neighborhood and sent to Washington, emphasizing the demand for this legislation. Representative Brownlow will be glad to send a copy of his bill to any one who will write for it, as will Senator Latimer. A letter or postal card to either of our U. S. Senators will secure a copy of Senate Document No. 204, 2d Session, 58th Congress. This document is a valuable compendium of Good Roads thought, and can be had for the asking.

BONUS FOR NEW SCHOOLS.

State Superintendent of Education I. W. Hill has given out an interview in which he states that he has been authorized by the Peabody Board to announce that the board has given $1,000 to the rural schools of this State and Mr. Hill has found a novel way to put it to a good use by building schools. Mr. Hill said in an interview:

"One of the crying needs of Alabama is better school houses in the rural districts. In order to encourage the building of the same, I will give to the first ten communities (not more than one in a county) a bonus of one hundred dollars each if they will build school houses to cost $500 or more from plans furnished by me. The money will be paid as soon as the county superintendent reports that the building is complete. The house must be built on a location selected by the county board of education, and, together with the lot, must be deeded in fee simple to the county board of education and its successors. All applications for this bonus must come through the county superintendent. I am enabled to make this offer through the generousity of the Peabody board."

This will mean much for the rural schools and Mr. Hill deserves much credit for getting this much for the rural schools. He worked hard to get this donation and his efforts were rewarded. This will stimulate interest in the building of school houses in the rural districts.

The South's remarkable industrial development is mirrored in the Februrary Review of Reviews, in which a group of writers headed by Richard H. Edmonds, the well-known editor of the Manufactures' Record, of Baltimore, describes the contemporary progress of that section, giving special attention to the recent growth of the Gulf ports, the wonderful story of Galveston's rescue from an encroaching sea, and the latest phases of the boom in Southwest Texas.

IN MEMORIAM.

MURDOCK MCQUEEN.

"The age of man is three score years and ten," and Murdock McQueen had passed the allotted span of life when he died at his home at Vine Hill, Jan 11, aged 81 years. Born in North Carolina of sturdy Scotch ancestry, he was brought to Autauga county when only four years of age and during his long life he was an esteemed and respected citizen of that county, taking an active part in the affairs of the community. For forty years he served Autauga as county surveyor, and by the conscientious discharge of his duties made many friends. Upright and honorable, a member of the Presbyterian church, he lived and died a Christian gentleman. He was also a member of the Masonic fraternity. Until about eight months ago he was an active man, but the infirmities of age began to tell upon him. Always an intelligent observer of public affairs, he believed in discharging the full duties of a citizen and never missed casting a Democratic vote at any election since he was 21 years old, getting out of a sick bed to perform that duty at the last election. A widow and seven children survive him, comforted by the reflection that their loved and honored husband and father has gone to prepare a way for them.

Sayers-Roberts.

A beautiful surprise took place at Cooper on Sunday morning, Jan. 21, at 11 o'clock, when the rites of holy matrimony were celebrated by Mr. A. L. Roberts and Miss Teris Sayres at Chestnut Creek church, the Rev. Mr. Howell officiating.

Miss Sayers was handsomely gowned in white, and Mr. Roberts wore the conventional black.

Miss Sayers is well known as a charming hostess and entertainer, as well as a splendid young lady of many attainments.

Mr. Roberts is a successful business man of Ashland, Ala. Their many friends predict for them a happy and successful life.

Hon. Howard S. Doster of Prattville is a candidate for Senate from this, the fifteenth senatorial district, composed of the counties of Autauga, Chilton and Shelby. Mr. Doster has a splendid reputation, and it would be no more than he deserves to elect him without opposition.

For Thin Babies

Fat is of great account to a baby; that is why babies are fat. If your baby is scrawny, Scott's Emulsion is what he wants. The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. They are happy because they are comfortable. The fat surrounds their little nerves and cushions them. When they are scrawny those nerves are hurt at every ungentle touch. They delight in Scott's Emulsion. It is as sweet as wholesome to them.

This distressing ailment results from a disordered condition of the stomach. All that is needed to effect a cure is a dose or two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Mr. and Mrs. Baker Entertain.

On Saturday evening last, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Baker entertained a number of friends from 6 till 10. The host and hostess began to receive the party at 6 and at 7:30 the crowd had assembled which numbered 56. After enjoying some nice music furnished by the Ward band, the guests assembled in the dining room where refreshments were served, the table being well supplied. The premium cake failed to be cut as nobody was strong enough to cut a cake of its kind. So we failed to learn who was to get married first. In conclusion I will say that it was the bicest supper that I was ever at. There was good behavior with one and all. At ten o'clock the crowd reassembled in the west room and thanked the host and hostess for their nice entertainment, then left for home wishing that they could go to another one just as nice as that one was. It is long to be remembered by all that were there.

Vinol THE COD LIVER PREPARATION WITHOUT OIL

Vinol is fast superseding old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions because, without a drop of oil or disagreeable feature, it contains all the medicinal elements of cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers. By our process the oil, having no value either as a medicine or food, is separated from the medicinal elements and thrown away. Unlike old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions, Vinol is deliciously palatable, agreeable to the weakest stomach, and therefore unequaled as a body builder and strength creator for old people, puny children, weak, run-down men and women, after sickness, and for all pulmonary diseases. Everything Vinol contains is named on the label.

OUR GUARANTEE—We have such faith in VINOL that if you will take it we promise if it does not benefit or cure you we will return you your money without question. We take all the risk.

Tumors Conquered Without Operations

Unqualified Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in Cases of Mrs. Fox and Miss Adams.

Fannie Fox
Miss Luella Adams

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy, Tumor.

So-called "wandering pains" may come from its early stages, or the presence of danger may be made manifest by excessive monthly periods accompanied by unusual pain extending from the abdomen through the groin and thighs.

If you have mysterious pains, if there are indications of inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation; secure Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once and begin its use and write Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Read these strong letters from grateful women who have been cured:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (First Letter.)

"In looking over your book I see that your medicine cures Tumors. I have been to a doctor and he tells me I have a tumor. I will be more than grateful if you can help me, as I do so dread an operation."—Fannie D. Fox, Bradford, Pa.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (Second Letter.)

"I take the liberty to congratulate you on the success I have had with your wonderful medicine.

"Eighteen months ago my periods stopped. Shortly after I felt so badly I submitted to a thorough examination by a physician, and was told that I had a tumor and would have to undergo an operation.

"I soon after read one of your advertisements and decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. After taking five bottles as directed, the tumor is entirely gone. I have again been examined by the physician and he says I have no signs of a tumor now. It has also brought my periods around once more; and I am entirely well. I shall never be without a bottle of Lydia Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the house."—Fannie D. Fox, Bradford, Pa.

Another Case of Tumor Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"About three years ago I had intense pain in my stomach, with cramps and raging headaches. The doctor prescribed for me, but finding that I did not get any better he examined me and, to my surprise, declared I had a tumor.

"I felt sure that it meant my death warrant, and was very disheartened. I spent hundreds of dollars in doctoring, but the tumor kept growing, till the doctor said that nothing but an operation would save me. Fortunately I corresponded with my aunt in one of the New England States, who advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before submitting to an operation, and I at once started taking a regular treatment, finding to my great relief that my general health began to improve, and after three months I noticed that the tumor had reduced in size. I kept on taking the Compound, and in ten months it had entirely disappeared without an operation, and using no medicine but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and words fail to express how grateful I am for the good it has done me."—Miss Luella Adams, Colonnade Hotel, Seattle, Wash.

Such unquestionable testimony proves the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and should give confidence and hope to every sick woman.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all ailing women to write to her at Lynn, Mass., for advice.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. OTHO F. BARTHOLOW.

Subject: The Limitations of Life.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Dr. Otho F. Bartholow, pastor of the James M. E. Church, preached Sunday on "The Limitations of Life." The text was chosen from Colossians iv:18: "Remember my bonds." Dr. Bartholow said:

It is hard to conceive how the glowing and comprehensive statements of the first three chapters of Paul's Epistle to the Colossians could be reinforced. Each sentence is so full of divine truth, it fairly overflows with its Christly abundance. Yet with the words of our text Paul did most positively and beautifully reinforce every other sentence of this intensely spiritual epistle. He did it in that charmingly inferential way that added the warmth of the heart to the purely logical statements of the mind. In writing to the Colossians of Christ's divinity and of the complete and joyous loyalty every soul should render to Him, Paul in the few words of our text delicately refers to the example found in his own experience. "Remember my bonds." This was an infusion of experience to all the preceding precepts that developed an incalculable force in that unlimited element of sympathy which were at once operative.

Paul had no intention of glorifying himself or his sufferings, neither did he sentimentally long for human comfort. This very brief allusion to himself in our text was but to strengthen and confirm that feeling which would exalt and glorify Christ Jesus the Lord.

What Christian in Colosse could have read or heard Paul's letter and not have felt when he came to the words, "Remember my bonds," this man writes out of life's experience and of what he knows—not like so many of the religionists and philosophers of that time out of his imaginations and dreams.

Yet another inference is contained in out text. It is that which emphasizes the fact of life's limitation. In writing his advices and directions to the Colossians Paul did the very best his position would allow him to do. He wished and prayed to do more. That more was to be with them in person, to give them all that he felt was in personal effort for Christ and His kingdom. Over against this wish, this desire, this prayer, was his physical imprisonment—a limitation. Paul was chained. The things he would do he could not do.

The fact of life's limitation, its recognition and resolution are suggestively presented in these words of the heart. The fact of limitation is apparent everywhere, in everything and every person. Go to the uttermost boundaries of space—to the sun and stars, limitations are there, their boundaries are fixed that they cannot pass. Gravitation, chemical affinity and other agents of law bind them with invisible chains to their limits. As with these mighty spheres, so with the tiniest atom; the plane of activity and expression is fixed. The reign of law marks insuperable barriers.

In persons as well as in things the fact of limitation is strikingly manifest. The body in which we live is clearly confined in bonds. Each body has an amount of nervous and muscular energy which limits all that may be received or given. The bonds of place and heredity bind each man to a very narrow zone of physical and mental activity. That a man is what he eats and where he lives is a certain degree manifestly true.

The spiritual in man is limited in all its expression and life by the presence of the carnal. Paul's pathetic cry: "O, wretched man that I am; who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" is applicable to all the children of Adam's race. These distinctions are the marks of a general limitation, the bonds that all men in their investigations and experience must remember because they are of themselves. Within the general limitations there are special and personal limitations. Mental endowments, disposition, health and grace are largely determinative in establishing the individual bonds that cannot be passed.

The nervous prostrations, the brain fag, the strokes of apoplexy, the creeping lassitudes that seize so many of our bright and energetic people are in a great majority of instances but evidences of failure to know or remember the physical and mental limitations to which life is conditioned.

Failure to record and recognize personal limitations and to be directed by them causes not only lapse and disaster in our service to Christ, but ofttimes the essential breaking of the moral law. Our fathers were accustomed to keep the commandments, to worship God and reverence His day by preparing hours in advance for that most solemn and imperative duty. Saturday preparation of body and spirit was, in the thought of our Puritan ancestors, essential to the real keeping of those commandments that enforce our duty to God. They had a fine recognition of the limitations inherent in the body. Their preparation for the Lord's day was a "remembrance of bonds." It is only the fashion in these progressive days to ridicule the religious practices of these fathers of our country. With all of which ridicule we have no sympathy, continuing to believe that our grip on God, for loyalty to Christ and His law they continue to be the most inspiring and helpful examples. They certainly shed a helpful light concerning the meeting of limitations in the keeping of those commandments that refer to God and His day.

They made religion a life and found delight in it, largely because they remembered their limitations. They refused to rob God by allowing the world and its activities to so rush in upon them during six days that there was nothing for the Sabbath but physical weariness and dullness. In yet another relation it is imperative that we remember our own and others' limitations. In relation to others we should be quick to ask: Are we understood and do we understand?

Believing fully that every man is more than anything he does or says, we are led to believe that all avenues of expression and reception are to a degree limited and incomplete—"are in bonds." Every man has in him a best and a worst, neither of which fairly represents him. Many, however, are to them final from their experience of one or the other phase of life.

When I read Cardinal Newman's "Lead, Kindly Light," I think of a highly intellectual, devout and charitable character. On the other hand, when I read his bigoted and narrow estimate of Arius, especially his statement "that a publisher of heresy (meaning, of course, anything contrary to his religious denomination), should be treated as if he were embodied evil." I think naturally of a narrow, unsympathetic and bigoted man. It is very evident that any fair estimate of the cardinal as a character cannot be obtained from either or both of these writings. He had his limitations. They must be remembered. Not until they are estimated can there be a substantial understanding of the person back of the utterances.

But are we understood? We, too, commonly assume that we are. Thinking we fully understand what we say and mean, we naturally infer that others do. But do they? "Oh, the trouble, the heartaches, the disasters and the deaths to happiness and peace that have come to this old world simply because people have not understood one another," exclaims the writer of an hundred years ago. Human nature has naturally changed since that day. An appeal to experience must convince even the most superficial observer that this is deeply true, even in the everyday experience of life. Acknowledging the fact of limitation and realizing its force in life, we find the only sure approach to its resolution is in the Christ of Paul.

Our Saviour entered our limitations. He took upon Himself the form of a servant; He became obedient to death, even the death of the cross; He emptied Himself; He was in all points tempted as are we. He remembered our bonds. Limitation itself brought trophies to His feet. Christ made it minister to His eternal glory by living: (1) The simple life—a life of forethought and order. In Him there was no trespassing of body upon mind, or mind upon spirit. Each was kept to its sphere. There was in His soul no conflict in the duties owed God, man and self.

The temptation in the wilderness is a perfect presentation of His clear and simple recognition of these duties that leaves no confusion in the mind of the disciple. In Christ was no haste, no confusion whatever. He had for each and everything the full measure of its claim. In His speech He gave line upon line, precept upon precept. He did nothing in secret. (2) The charitable life. Christ ever made allowance in all human equations for the elements of ignorance, inheritance and condition. He remembered the bonds of men, their limitations. Thus we find Him dealing with the individual as the wise and loving parent does with the child, as the teacher with the pupil. He built on that best possible interpretation of each man's nature, which required ever and always a complete knowledge of limitations.

He healed some in public because their bonds would stand it; others He withdrew to the quiet place alone. He recognized conditions best for the individual. When two of His favored disciples desired to burn those men whom they judged heretics; when Peter followed afar off and at last altogether denied Him, with what divine consideration He remembered their limitations and forgave them! With Christ there was neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision or uncircumcision, Barbarian, Scythian, bond nor free, because His charity understood and eliminated all differences that such distinctions implied.

(3) The triumphant life. Christ saw the crown above the cross, life beyond death, and lived in them. Hope, with all its expectancies, was His. He saw the morning when it was midnight. He knew the Father knew. The triumphant life of Christ was lived for us, and so became vicarious. We could not live it ourselves, because of an unnatural bondage—the awful bondage of sin. Christ, however, lives it for us, and shares it with us, making it possible for us to have His simple, loving and triumphant life. "I live, yet not I but Christ liveth in me."

Oh, what comfort there is to the poor, wounded heart that is struggling to do its best against sin and trial in the narrow straits of life to say and realize, "He remembers my bonds." He took them upon Himself. Simple faith in this truth brings relief and ultimate triumph. This gracious truth sugests another limitation that we speak of with profoundest reverence, the limitation of God Himself in the matter of bestowing pardon, peace and love upon the heart of man. God has, according to the revelation He has given us, limits that He cannot pass in the salvation of man. The salvation in Christ marks the boundaries of God's ability to save the human soul.

God cannot force the soul's will to accept of His Son for salvation. He presents Him with all love and power, for He will have all men to be saved and to come unto the knowledge of the truth. Beyond this He cannot go. God is bound by His gift of free will. Christ the God cried: "I would but ye would not."

May God help all of us to recognize and act upon the limitations to which God has committed us.

Strength For To-Day.

God promises strength to enable us to do our present duty. If we believe that, and act accordingly, we shall never, never fail. "As thy days, so shall thy strength be." That is the promise—a promise that never fails. Yesterday has gone, not to return. To-morrow has not come to us, and it may never come. To-day is our day, and it is the only portion of time that is. Men who regret that they did not do their work of yesterday, lose their present time because they are not giving their whole strength to it. Men who fear that they will not be able to do to-morrow's work are losing to-day, and are not getting ready for to-morrow. God does not promise strength for yesterday which is gone, nor for to-morrow which may never come, but for to-day, which is here. Let us therefore, trust, and use, while we have it, God's promised strength for to-day. "Sufficient unto the day is the evil (and the good) thereof."—Sunday School Times.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR FEBRUARY 4.

Subject: The Temptation of Jesus, Matt. iv., 1-11—Golden Text, Heb. iv., 15—Memory Verse, 4—Topic: A Study of Christ's Temptation—Commentary.

I. Jesus in the wilderness (vs. 1, 2). 1. "Then." Immediately after His baptism. Such are the violent alternations of human experience; baptized and tempted; approved of God and handed over to the devil. "Led up." Our lives are so ordered that we are carried into places where the metal of our religion is tried. Temptation is part of the divine scheme. The devil is under the control of God. Open the page of history where you will and you can hardly find the story of any great, noble soul, that has not had its hour of battle with the powers of darkness. "Of the spirit." Luke says He was "full of the Holy Ghost." Mark says, "The spirit driveth Him." A divine influence led Him on. "Into the wilderness." Tradition has fixed upon a high ridge called Quarantania near Jericho. "To be tempted." Christ begins His work with a personal encounter with Satan. To tempt is, literally, to stretch out, to try the strength of. Temptation is the testing of a person. The three temptations of Christ were typical ones, comprehending all the forms of temptation by which human nature can be assailed. They cover the same ground as "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes, and the pride of life" (1 John 2:16). "The devil." "Diabolos," always in the singular and with the definite article.

2. "Forty days." Moses, Elijah and our Lord could fast forty days because they were in communion with God and living a heavenly life. Luke says He was tempted during the whole forty days. "Afterward an hungred." After the forty days were ended the reaction came with terrible force.

II. The first temptation (vs. 3, 4). 3. "The tempter came." How Satan appeared to Christ we do not know, but if he came in bodily form it must have been as an angel of light. "If Thou be." Beware of temptation that comes with an "if" in its mouth. "The Son of God." The consciousness of His divine Sonship may now in a measure have been withheld. Alone in the wilderness and weak and worn from fasting, Satan saw his chance. "Stones—bread." You are hungry; now if You are the Son of God use the power You have to supply Your necessities and thus prove Your divinity.

4. "It is written." See Deut. 8:3. In each case Jesus answered and defeated Satan by a proper use of the word of God. A man who has scripture hid in his heart has a sharp sword to fight the devil with. "Not live by bread alone." Human support depends not on bread, but upon God's unfailing word of promise and pledge of all needful providential care.

III. The second temptation (vs. 5-7). The order of the temptations is different in Luke, but this is immaterial, as there is no statement that insists on any particular order. 5. "Taketh Him." So far as the necessities of the trial required, yet with no power of violence or contamination, our Lord's person was in his hand. How else did Satan take Him to the temple's summit or to the mountain top? "Into the holy city." Whedon believes that His person was transported "with the quickness of a thought, so that He is not to be conceived as on His way at any intermediate point." There seems little reason to doubt that Jesus actually went with Satan to the pinnacle of the temple. "Pinnacle." Probably the royal porch built by Herod, overlooking the Cedron.

6. "If Thou be," etc. Satan presses his point. In His first reply to the devil Jesus had shown His unbounded confidence in God. Now Satan takes Him at that very point and assumes that if He did not cast Himself down it would show that He lacked faith in God and that His claim to divine Sonship was unfounded. "Cast Thyself down." Show your faith in God. All the world will wonder at so grand an exploit. Prove at once that You are the Son of God. "It is written." In Psalm 91:11, 12. The devil has a Bible, but he misquotes and misapplies. This was a temptation to presumption. 7. "It is written again." In Deut. 6:16. There is always danger in using isolated texts. One text explains and modifies another. The Bible is often perverted by wicked men. "Not tempt." To tempt God is to put Him to the proof—to demand evidence of His power and of His will to fulfil His promises, instead of waiting patiently and trusting. This is manifestly wrong. The first temptation appealed to the animal appetites. This one rises to the higher sentiment, the love of show—the gratification of admiration.

IV. The third temptation (vs. 8-11). 8. "Exceeding high mountain." Some high mountain in Judea where a general view could be had of the country. "Sheweth—kingdoms of the world." The root of the third temptation lay in the supposition that the kingdoms of the world were the devil's kingdoms and that he could dispose of them. 9. "All—give Thee." By this Satan evidently meant that he would withdraw his opposition to Christ and make Him a great earthly ruler. "If—worship me." Here the devil appears in his true character. Christ was tempted to idolatry, which is the root of all evil. 10. "Get thee hence." Jesus parleys with him no longer, but with authority commands him to go to his own place. 11. "Devil leaveth Him." Satan had made the strongest effort of which he was capable and had been baffled at every point. "Angels." Heavenly messengers; spiritual beings of a higher order than man. "Ministered." Supplied Him with necessary food to support nature.

Seven Perish in Snowslide.

Salt Lake City.—Seven men were killed at the mining camp at Alta Saturday by a snowslide, according to the latest message received before the telephone wires broke. Efforts to gain further information have been fruitless, owing to the condition of the wires and the deep snow in the mountains. The nearest approach possible even on snow shoes, is three miles. Alta is twenty miles from Salt Lake City.

Humanitarianism.

Among the late events, showing the progress of humanitarian principles, may be mentioned:

The use of the check rein has been discontinued in the Royal Court equipages at Berlin.

The president of the police of the city of Berlin has forbidden the use of blinders on the horses of public conveyances.

The Lord Mayor of London adheres to the reform initiated by his predecessor, viz., the discontinuance of the check rein and the omission from the menu at the Lord Mayor's banquet of pate de foie gras, in the production of which geese are subjected to great suffering.

The Fashionable Hurlingham Club in London has given up live pigeon shooting.

The Pennsylvania legislature passed a bill to introduce humane education into all the schools of the state. A number of states have already such a law.

The military institutes of Berlin and the building contractors connected with them, have issued the regulation that "only healthy and strong animals can be used; all rough and cruel treatment is forbidden; for heavy pulls there must be extra horses. When the wheels are covered with sand or gravel, etc., they must be freed before the team is required to pull. The harness must have proper back straps, that the animals need not pull back by the neck. The use of the check rein is forbidden. In cold weather, the animals, while standing, must be blanketed. The places of exit and entrance to building places, to sand or gravel pits, etc., must have a suitable platform or planks for the wagon to run upon. The drivers are admonished that all cruelty will be reported to the police.

"I have been particularly benefited by its use for colds in the head and throat. I have been able to fully cure myself of a most severe attack in forty-eight hours by its use according to directions. I use it as a preventive whenever threatened with an attack.

Old Timer, Sure Enough.

Congressman J. Warren Keifer, the venerable Ohioan who has once more taken his seat in the house, has not kept posted on the up-to-date methods in vogue there. During the reading of the president's message last Tuesday he wanted a page, and in the style of long ago clapped his hands. The signal was repeated twice and his fellow members thought he was applauding the message. Finally the head page, who has been in the service of the house forty years, hurried up and explained to Mr. Keifer that there was a push button at every desk. "Well, I'm a has-been sure enough," said the ex-speaker, laughing.

Swift & Company

Year 1905 Sales.

The total distributive sales for 1905 exceeded

$200,000,000.

This total is realized from the sale of fresh meats (beef, mutton and pork), provisions, produce (poultry, butter and eggs), soaps, glues, oils, bones, fertilizers, feathers, casings, hides, wools, pelts and other by-products derived from cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry.

Margin of Profit.

The industry is operated on a margin of less than 2 cents to each dollar of sales. Swift & Co. do not sell at retail. Their entire output is sold at wholesale to many thousands of dealers in various parts of the world. There are hundreds of local slaughterers throughout the United States, who buy their live stock in competition with the packer doing an interstate and international business. Likewise the packer must sell in competition with the local slaughterers. There are no secret processes in the industry, no complicated and expensive factories, and as live stock can be purchased in almost every hamlet and city, and the preparation of meats is simple in the extreme, local slaughtering will long remain a factor in the production of fresh meats and provisions.

Economic Advantages.

The large packing houses will, however, always have these advantages: Locations at the chief live stock centers, with the opportunity to buy the best live stock; manufacturing in large quantities, at the minimum of expense; utilization of all waste material; refrigeration; mechanical appliances; highly efficient business management. These advantages are reflected in the quality of the packer's output, a quality that has reached its highest development in the products bearing the name and brand of "Swift."

Purchasing Live Stock.

The principal live stock centers are Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, St. Louis, St. Joseph, St. Paul and Fort Worth. The same methods of purchasing cattle, sheep and hogs prevail at all cities. At Chicago, which is the largest market, there are about two hundred and fifty buyers, representing packers, local slaughterers in various cities, and exporters. Of this number, less than a score are employed by Swift & Company.

The farmer ships his live stock to Chicago, consigns them to a commission firm at the Union Stock Yards, who sees that they are unloaded and put in pens. Then the buyers inspect them, make their offers to the commission dealer, who accepts or rejects as his judgment dictates. All buying must be finished at 3 o'clock each day, and the buyer must pay spot cash. If the commission man has no satisfactory offers, he can hold his stock over to the next day. He gets his commission from the farmer, and naturally strives to get the highest possible price for his client.

Wholesale Distributing Houses.

A wholesale distributing house is a giant refrigerator, but instead of shelves there are trolley rails, from which are suspended hooks to hang the carcasses. Some of the houses cost as much as a hundred thousand dollars to build and equip. As a rule they are of pressed brick, the insides being lined—floor, walls and ceiling—with highly polished hardwood. The floors are covered daily with fresh sawdust and all are kept spotlessly clean. There are over three hundred of these wholesale houses in various cities of the United States, and the public is always welcome to visit them.

Packing Plants.

All the Swift & Company plants are located at the great live stock markets, in the heart of the great agricultural sections, where can be purchased the finest grades of cattle, sheep and hogs. We have seven packing plants, employing at each from two to eight thousand persons.

The following gives the locations and sizes of the different plants:

Packing Plants.

	Buildings, Acres.	Floor Space, Acres.	Land, Acres.
Chicago	44½	87¾	47
Kansas City	7⅝	30	19½
Omaha	6	26	23
St. Louis	7¾	19⅞	31⅝
St. Joseph	6½	25¼	19¼
St. Paul	5	12	16
Fort Worth	3	15	22

Employes.

The total number of persons employed in all the Swift packing plants and branch houses aggregate over 26,000 persons. Conditions for employes in the various manufacturing and operating departments is continually improving with the construction of new buildings and the installation of new and up-to-date equipment.

Sanitation and Hygiene.

The housewife makes no greater effort to keep her kitchen clean than we do to keep in sanitary and hygienic condition our abattoirs. They are thoroughly scrubbed at the close of each day's operations, and automatic appliances are used wherever possible in order to eliminate the personal handling of meats. Rigid rules governing these points are strictly enforced; laxity means dismissal.

Visitors Always Welcome.

No other industry in the world gives such a cordial welcome to visitors as Swift & Co. We keep open house the year around, and maintain a corps of specially trained guides, with special elevators and rest rooms. In one year we have entertained over a quarter of a million of men and women; in one day—Grand Army Day, 1901—we entertained 23,000. Among our visitors have been ambassadors from foreign governments, princes, noblemen and distinguished citizens from all lands and eminent folks from every State in the Union. We wish to familiarize the public with our methods, and the best way to do that is to let the public see for itself. We have no secret processes or methods in any department.

Swift's Premium Hams and Bacon.

Swift's Premium Hams and Bacon are more widely and favorably known than any other brand. Their popularity is due to the uniform quality and flavor of the meat, and to their fine appearance when received from the dealer. Each piece is branded on the rind, "Swift's Premium U. S. Inspected," and wrapped in cheesecloth and white parchment paper.

Look for the brand, "Swift's Premium," when buying hams and bacon.

Swift's Silver Leaf Lard

Is a strictly pure lard, kettle rendered, and put up in 3, 5, and 10-pound sealed pails. It is America's Standard Lard, and enjoys a high reputation and an enormous sale.

Swift's Soaps.

An interesting feature of a trip through the Chicago plant is a visit to the soap factory, one of the largest and most complete in this country. There we manufacture numerous toilet and laundry soaps, and washing powders.

Among which are:

Wool Soap, widely and favorably known; for toilet and bath, and washing fine fabrics.

Crown Princess Toilet Soap, highly perfumed.

Swift's Pride Soap, for laundry and household use.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Mother's Favorite.

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures have made it a favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children, for colds croup and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief, and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale by Upchurch Drug Co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

Randolph.

A serious cutting affray occurred last week just over the line in Chilton county. A Mr. Watson, whose given name could not be learned, and Jadie Brown were both painfully cut, Mr Brown perhaps fatally. It seems that the two young men were rivals in a love affair and that bad blood has existed for some time between them. Watson is alleged to have gone to the home of Brown and called him out of the house and commenced carving him with a huge knife, whereupon the latter proceeded to defend himself by using his knife as best he could upon his assailant. Watson soon broke away from Brown, but not before he had inflicted wounds from which the latter may die. Watson was painfully, though not fatally cut Both young men are of prominent families.

All old-time Cough Syrups bind the bowels. This is wrong. A new idea was advanced two years ago in Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar. This remedy acts on the mucus membranes of the throat and lungs and loosens the bowels at the same time. It expels all cold from the system. It clears the throat, strengthens the mucus membranes, relieves coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, etc. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co.

Some doctors take life easy—others take whatever they can.

A dentist is a man who pulls people's teeth; a lawyer is one who pulls their legs.

The Dying Drunkard.

Get my bottle Ada, bring it to me,
Don't you know I am dying? it seems that you could see,
My throat is dry and thirsty—oh, you are so slow.
Give me one more drink of whiskey before I have to go.

Don't talk to me of heaven, it is too late I know,
For me to get a pardon. But oh, the fires below!
They seem to burn me even now. Hark, listen to the chains
Of the Devil and his angels, my bottle, oh, my pains!

Oh, there's the fit, the burning fit, so full of wail and woe.
They're after me, those demons, my soul to hell must go.
They mock and beckon to me now, they laugh and grin in glee!
They're coming, yes they're coming, closer up to me.

Drive them back, oh, don't you see them standing round my bed?
Give me my bottle, let me drink once more before I'm dead.
I can't see you Ada, hold the bottle tight,
Those demons snatching at me, they have come for me tonight.

They've got me, oh, they've bound me tight, I go,
With red hot chains about me, I'm sinking into woe.
Goodby forever Ada, the drunkard wildly cried,
And shrieking loud in agony, 'twas thus the drunkard died.

THE DYING CHRISTIAN

Get my Bible Maria, read for me once again
How the blessed Christ while here on the rugged cross was slain,
How for the sins of a fallen world His precious life was given,
No words to His tormentors hurled, but looked straight into heaven.

Read Maria, read, my time's not long, my soul prepares to fly,
I seem to hear the angels' song break from the vaulted sky.
Come closer, yes my eyes grow dim, your form I cannot see,
Yet Christ has said look unto me and gain eternity

Hark! there's the light, the Saviour's face, the darkness all dispels,
My soul is ransomed by His grace, the sting of death He quells,
Listen Maria to the music of the angels' harps of gold,
While the gates of heaven are opening to receive my weary soul.

Brighter grows the light in glory, as my soul prepares to fly,
From this body cold and lowly, to its home beyond the sky.
Come closer Maria, hold my hand, on earth we'll meet no more,
But in that fair and happy land, we'll meet on Canaan's shore.

I'm going, Maria, going home, the Saviour's face I see,
He bids me come, oh joyful thought, His blood has made me free
Goodby until we meet in heaven forever to abide,
Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep, 'twas thus the Christian died.

IN MEMORIAM

Died at Stanton, Ala., Dec 17, 1905, Mrs. Mary J. [illegible], aged 65 years and 8 months. She was the wife of the late Edward M. [illegible]

She leaves two sons and a daughter to mourn the loss of their mother. Thus, one by one, the weary ones are gathered to eternal rest with their Saviour. A noble, unselfish and self-sacrificing Christian, she lived and labored for others

Though she has passed through great sorrow and suffering, she never murmured, but with meek submission to the Heavenly Father's will accepted the cross with a gentle patience, and with unwavering faith carried her burden to Jesus, the source of all strength. Of a retiring, unassuming disposition, of pure and upright conversation, charitable to all, never thinking or speaking evil of any one, she lived her lovely white life as a lily amid sordid surroundings. She had lived in closest communion with her God, joyfully awaiting "child come home" and when at midnight the death angel came, her sweet spirit passed away and the tired body and weary heart sank into a deep peaceful sleep, with a look of sweet peace on her face as if it were the shadow of angels wings Verily Stanton hath entertained an angel unawares. Startling But True.

People the world over were horrified on learning of the burning of a Chicago theater in which nearly six hundred people lost their lives, yet more than five times this number or over 3,000 died from pneumonia in Chicago during the same year, with scarcely a passing notice Every one of these cases of pneumonia resulted from a cold and could have been prevented by the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A great many who had every reason to fear pneumonia have warded it off by the prompt use of this remedy. The following is an instance of this sort: "Too much cannot be said in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and especially for colds and influenza. I know that it cured my daughter, Laura, of a severe cold, and I believe saved her life when she was threatened with pneumonia." W. D. WILCOX, Logan, New York. Sold by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

FOR REPRESENTATIVE IN THE LEGISLATURE.

I hereby announce myself a candidate for Representative of Chilton county in the Legislature, subject to the action of the Democratic party. J. J. HAWTHORN.

Pleasant Grove.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the skillful management of our Superintendent, J. S. Wright. Though it isn't what it should be, for we find so many that are careless and unconcerned about Sunday school. But we are proud to say that we havn't went into winter quarters. With the new year it is usual to make new resolves and plans for that year. This is a good thing, for we take stock, square accounts, and start fresh. What have we in mind for the year? What have we made up our minds to do for the world and those about us. It is a matter for us to settle and work for our plans. A man owes it to the world to do his best for those about him. He owes to society to make the most of his life and to do his best to make the world better. There is no field or work in which a man or woman can do more for society than in the field of sacred song and the work of the Sunday school. How we need men and women to help with the music of the churches and Sunday schools. For good music is the very life blood of the church and Sunday school. Let us resolve that we will sacrifice time and money if necessary to advance the cause of the church, the Sunday school and of sacred song. How much good we can do if we will but make up our minds to do it. How many lives we can inspire with new energy if we but strive to do it. Let each of us resolve to do our best during 1906 and if we live the year out take stock and see how much of joy, love and peace and good cheer we ourselves have gained. With best wishes to the Banner and its many readers, I am, very truly,

JAMES FRANKLIN.

CLANTON, ALA.

Germany Stands Firm on Police Issue.

Berlin.—Germany's attitude towards the proposition to place the control of the Moroccan police in the hands of France and Spain is one of firm opposition, since the arrangement would, according to the German view, amount practically to giving France full authority over the police, which Germany hitherto has steadily resisted. The foreign office says that the delegates to the conference at Algeciras will devote the next few days, while the conference is not sitting, to an informal exchange of views on the subject of management of the police in an attempt to shape acceptable plans for adjusting this vexed question.

Salvation Army Robbed.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—Thieves broke into the Salvation Army hotel here and stole nearly $100 which had been placed for safe keeping in the office. Part of the money belonged to the hotel, while the remainder belonged to guests and was a private fund of the captain. Entrance was made through a rear window from the top of a second story building. This is the second robbery at Salvation headquarters. Captain Sayers was held up recently and his watch and money taken by two masked men.

Hunt Ends Seriously.

Phoenix City, Ala.—Gordon and Dalton Hood, aged 11 and 9 years respectively, sons of Joseph Hood, of Wacoochee Valley, Ala., went rabbit hunting a day or two ago, and their dog running a rabbit up a hollow tree, they cut a pole with which to twist bunny out. Both boys wanted to do the twisting act, and in the scuffle the younger brother cut the other in the side with a pocketknife. The wound is serious, but not fatal. A negro witness declares that the boys were fighting, but they claim that the cutting was entirely accidental.

Poll Taxes in Escambia.

Brewton, Ala.—Five hundred and thirty poll tax receipts were issued by Tax Collector Holland up to the time of closing the books on the night of February 1, which is about 50 per cent of the poll tax payors of the county. There are in the county about 1,600 registered voters, and about 1,000 of these are subject to poll tax. In the year 1902 there were 531 poll tax receipts issued.

Mules in Big Demand.

Huntsville, Ala.—The horse and mule market in this section is more lively than in several years past, and large numbers of animals are being sold. Most of the mules are brought in from other counties. The demand comes from the farmers. They claim that they have the money to pay for stock that they have needed all along and that the demand for mules is not a sign that the cotton acreage will be increased.

"Jack the Slasher" at Work.

Washington, D. C.—Mrs. William T. Barton, wife of a local physician, was the victim of a "Jack the Slaser" while walking through a department store here Saturday afternoon. The man followed Mrs. Barton for some time before slashing her black velvet dress. He inflicted a clean, even cut about two feet long, the blade of the weapon, which was evidently a long, sharp one, extending almost to the flesh.

Commits Suicide With Chloroform.

Selma, Ala.—The body of Bertha Marsden, a white servant in the family of O. M. Cawthon, was found dead in her bed Monday morning. In her hand she held a small mug, in the bottom of which the girl had stuffed some cotton, and on a small table near by there was an empty ounce bottle in which there had been chloroform. It is thought that before retiring the young woman stuffed the cotton in the mug and then poured the chloroform in it and had then laid down and held the mug to her nose, and in that manner breathed her last.

Dozen Killed by a Bomb.

Berlin.—The Lokal Anzeiger prints a dispatch from Kattowitz, Prussian Silesia, announcing that a private house at Slice, across the Russian frontier, has been destroyed by the explosion of a bomb. The bodies of twelve persons can be seen in the ruins, and it is believed that many others were killed.

Vienna.—It is reported that a military convention has been concluded between Italy and Montenegro for the purpose of breaking down Austria's predominating influence in the Balkans, but neither confirmation nor denial of it can be obtained in official circles here.

Chicago, Ill.—Because of the possibility of a strike of the coal miners a number of wholesalers in this city have advanced the price of soft coal 25 per cent.

ALABAMA STATE EVENTS.

Items of Interest Gathered as They Transpire Over the Entire State.

FAMOUS TRIAL BEGUN.

Well Known Man Is Charged with Killing His Brother-in-Law Over a Year Ago.

Montgomery.—Dan Stallings went on trial Friday in Greenville for the killing of the husband of his sister, Radford Buckhalts, Oct. 1, 1904, and the outlook is that it will be one of the hardest fought legal battles in the history of the state. Some of the best talent of the country is engaged to fight it out. For the defense appears his cousin, former Congressman Jesse Stallings, former Circuit Judge Terry Richardson of Montgomery, Clive Reed, C. C. Smith, R. B. Smyth and I. Y. Trawick; for the state, Solicitor Bricken, State Senator D. M. Powell and Claude Hamilton. The wife of the dead man was in the court room. Thursday was taken with the assembling of a jury. The defendant has entered a plea of not guilty by reason of self defense.

The story of the killing is one that resounded from one end of the state to the other. About a year prior to the day of the tragedy, Oct. 1, 1904, Buckhalts stole the sister of the defendant and they were married at Greenville. They went away to New Orleans for a week and then returned to live on their farm near that of Stallings. Though boyhood friends, the two men then became deadly enemies and never spoke again save in anger. On the day of the shooting they were in Greenville. Both are reported to have said that the other was a scoundrel. Buckhalts was getting ready to leave and was in the street in his buggy, to which was attached a mule. Stallings went out and asked if he had said that he was a scoundrel.

Just here the shooting began. Both had their pistols out in a twinkling and the air was at once filled with detonations. A cloud of smoke enveloped them. At the rattle of firearms the mule picked up its ears and ran away with the buggy several hundred yards before stopped. Buckhalts lay over on the seat dead. Several bullets had gone into his body and it had been short work with him. Back in the road lay Stallings. His body, too, had bullets stored away in it. He was taken into the office of a doctor and examined. The wounds were pronounced mortal. However, he won the fight over death by reason of his great strength and is now strong and well.

The trial is attracting great crowds and will likely run on for some time. Judge B. M. Miller of Camden is presiding, having exchanged places with Judge Richardson because the latter is father to Judge Richardson of the defense counsel.

Poll Taxes in Madison.

Huntsville.—The poll tax books of Madison county were closed at midnight Thursday, according to law, and up to the closing 1,564 voters had paid their polls. Fifteen hundred voters in this county disfranchised themselves by failure to pay the tax and the voting strength of the county, including those not subject to poll tax, will be only 3,100. An unusually large number paid this year and many of them had to pay five years back tax. Thirty-one persons paid for five years, seventy-six for four years, seventy-one for three years and three hundred and thirteen for two years. This was occasioned by the fact that there will probably be a warm fight here this year over the dispensary question.

Boy Has Leg Cut Off.

Huntsville.—While stealing a ride on a passenger train of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway, Willie Sorrel, a 7-year-old boy, fell under the wheels and a leg was mashed off. The boy was one of a crowd of young boys that have made a practice of jumping on moving trains in Defiance of police and depot employes.

Poll Taxes in Lauderdale.

Florence.—The payment of poll tax in this county has been very light, only 974 receipts having been issued by the tax collector when the books closed. Many white men have disfranchised themselves and the total vote of this county will not be much above 1,700.

Poll Taxes in Cherokee.

Centre.—Nine hundred and forty-seven poll taxes were paid in this county for the year 1905, an increase of 210 over the year 1904. There are estimated to be 500 voters in the county who have disfranchised themselves by failing to pay the poll tax.

Poll Taxes of Pike.

Troy.—Deputy A. J. Collier brought to Troy Saturday morning T. J. Wyatt of Coffee county, charged with retailing whisky. Wyatt was arraigned before United States Commissioner C. S. Tutweiler and case continued for further evidence.

There is quite a gain over last year in the number of voters who paid poll tax in Pike county. Last year there were 1,019 to pay poll tax for 1904, and this year 1,218 have paid.

FROM OPEN GRATE.

Woman's Clothing Catches and Death Is Result.

Birmingham.—Mrs. Ella Russell, aged 30, living on Avenue B and Twenty-third street, was burned to death Saturday morning, she being a victim of the open grate. Mrs. Russell was combing her hair, using a small looking glass which stood on the mantel board over the open grate. The flames enveloped her dress and the woman ran out of the house into the yard screaming. She then returned to the kitchen. A physician who was passing rushed to the woman's aid and threw a blanket around her, but he arrived after the clothing had been burned off and the woman was suffering excruciating pains. The unfortunate woman pleaded with the physician to give her relief and it was evident that the sufferings were terrible. Death relieved the woman of her pains in three hours. She kept house for her brother, who is employed at the Southern railway shops. The remains will be interred tomorrow afternoon.

Senator Morgan's Letter.

Selma.—A letter from Senator Morgan which was delayed in transmission, was received Saturday by Editor R. E. L. Niel of the Selma Journal and enclosed was a copy of the letter written to Mr. Mallory, chairman of the state committee, in which the Senator announced his candidacy. The letter reads as follows:

Washington, Jan. 26, 1906.

Hon. H. S. D. Mallory, Chairman Democratic Executive Committee.

Dear Sir—I desire to state to the executive committee of the democratic party of Alabama, that I will ask that my name may be placed on the ticket to be used in the Democratic primary election held in August, as a candidate for the seat in the Senate of the United States that will be vacant on March 5, 1907. On being advised by you, I will make this application in such form as the regulations of the committee require.

I take occasion to express my gratitude to the people of Alabama for the marks of confidence they have given me in my long service in the Senate of the United States. I have tried to thank them by a faithful and unremitting effort to do my duty to the state and the people of Alabama. If I should again be their choice for this responsible and honorable place, as their representative in the Senate of the United States, I will endeavor to express my gratitude for their confidence by serving them with continual fidelity, to the best of my ability.

It is very pleasing to me that I am permitted to announce my candidacy through your committee, whose chairman and many of its mebers I have known fro early childhood.

Permit me to tender you my congratulations on your deserved honors as chairman of a committee that is charged by the people with the great duties that are so importaet to their welfare.

I have the honor to remain, Your sincere friend,

JOHN T. MORGAN.

New Publishing Company.

Gadsden.—The Gadsden Times-News Printing company have filed with the probate judge papers of incorporation with a capital stock of $25,000. The Times-News, owned and operated by W. M. Meeks and Son, has been formed into a stock company. They will install a daily and take the Associated Press reports from all parts of the world. New printing presses and another linotype machine will be added. The paper will continue as heretofore, but will be improved. The stockholders are W. M. Meeks, Charles E. Meeks, J. R. McMullen, O. R. Goldman, J. M. Elliott, Dr. H. L. Allison, H. Meeks, H. B. Myers, Annie L. Meeks, O. R. Hood, S. E. Rosenbaum, W. P. Lay. The officers are W. M. Meeks, president; O. R. Hood, vice-president; Charles E. Meeks, general manager and treasurer; J. R. McMullen, secretary. The daily will be issued as soon as the new machinery can be installed.

Good Showing in Anniston.

Anniston.—A steady stream of visitors besieged the office of the tax collector Friday for the purpose of securing the necessary receipt which will allow them to vote next November. The number of receipts issued this year was nearly 1,300. This, however, is quite a little short of last year. The tax collector's office was kept open until midnight and many took advantage of that accommodation.

Moseley Gets Office.

Decatur.—A telegram from Washington, D. C., says that the appointment of William Moseley as postmaster of Decatur has been confirmed by the senate.

Mr. Moseley will probably take charge of the office early next week. Miss Floy Hinds, the present incumbent, was not an applicant for reappointment. The applicants besides Mr. Moseley were Thomas Baker and Rather Day.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON MARKET.

The Bull Contingent Losing Backbone. Course of the Market Dependent on Spot Situation.

New Orleans.—The week closes with the speculative cotton market in a somewhat anomalous position. There is now no evidence of backbone to the bull contingent; in fact, as one firm of brokers puts it, "the enthusiasm of 12 1-2-cent bulls has turned into 11 1-2-cent bear pessimism." The evidently better spot demand in Liverpool has failed completely to offset the figures of the census bureau, and the increased spinners' takings, as evidenced in the report of the visible supply, played to a crowd that was either without spirit or had taken on a Micawberish attitude in the face of the fact that there seems no Moses to lead the straggling multitude through the wilderness.

It is perhaps the want of a leader which has played quite as important a part in the week's operations as any actual bearish feature embodied in the census report, for all the slump seems to have been due to an increase over expectations of something like 50,000 bales, a mere drop in the bucket, when the trade consumption is considered squarely on its merits.

Secretary Hester's reduction by 4.52 pounds per bale on the average weight of cotton moved to December 30 had little effect, but the position as it stands emphasizes the fact that the course of the market will depend largely or the spot situation from day to day, and, with the first blush of liquidation through with, any disposition of the spinner to come in largely is likely to be followed by cautious coming in of longs, who for the present are doing little, but thinking a great deal.

The March position is looming more into prominence, and is seemed that bear pressure has been made with a view to reaching stop-loss orders. With these reached, covering by shorts came in evidence.

AMERICAN IS REMOVED.

Boycott in Pekin Against American Goods Is Being Renewed.

Pekin.—Yuan Shi Kai, viceroy of Chi Li province, has discharged Prof. C. D. Tenney, the foreign director of education, who organized the new school system in this province and within three years made it a model of the empire. Strong opposition has arisen lately to foreign management of the schools, and particularly against Dr. Tenney, because he is an American. Yuan Shi Kai told Dr. Tenney that he appreciated his work, but Yuan Shi Kai has so many enemies that he could not afford to keep him.

The boycott agitation against American good is being revived. When it began Mr. Rockhill, the American minister, and the American consuls urged the Chinese to wait until Congress had time to act on their demands, and the failure of congress to do so has aroused their resentment.

Strong pressure has been brought to bear upon the government to remove E. B. Drew, the commissioner of customs at Canton, who is considered one of the ablest men in the establishment of Sir Robert Hart, director-general of maritime customs, because he is an American.

Officers Expect Outbreak in China.

San Francisco, Cal.—Army officers who arrived here on the transport Logan report that the prospect of trouble in China is the chief topic of discussion in army circles in Manila. The Thirteenth Infantry and two squadrons of the Eighth Cavalry have been ordered to prepare themselves for field service. The destination of these troops remains a headquarters secret, but the only explanation of the order is that they are to be in readiness for a Chinese expedition at the first warning of an outbreak.

Those who came on the Logan asked first for news from China, as they said that most of the information on the subject which was current in the Philippines came by way of Washington. The officers of the troops under field orders have made preparations to leave on twenty-four hours' notice, and their expectation is that they will be sent to Pekin.

Mill Closes Down.

Huntsville, Ala.—The cotton oil mill of the Butler-Ryser Company has closed down because of inability to obtain cotton seed. The supply of seed was shorter than it has been in the last few years, and the mills throughout this district are closing down for the same reason. Next year, as an inducement to the farmers to plant more cotton in this immediate locality, the Butler-Kyser Company proposes to gin cotton free of cost. This is expected to precipitate a lively scramble next season, as there are two other cotton oil mills in Hunts ville and one seed buying agency, all bidding against each other for a limited amount of cotton seed.

Wants Divorce.

Paris.—Countess Boni De Castellane (formerly Anna Gould) has entered a plea for divorce. Representatives of the countess and count appeared before a jury, according to the French law, and endeavored to arrange a reconciliation before allowing a definite suit to proceed. It is said the judge's efforts were not successful, but that the suit will proceed, and owing to the secrecy in divorce proceedings here it is difficult to confirm this report.

GREATEST

Strike in History Imminent. 550,000 Miners Will Lay Down Tools April 1.

DIFFICULT TO COMPROMISE.

President of United States and Civic Federation the Only Agencies that Can Bring Combatants Together.

Indianapolis.—One of the most dramatic scenes ever witnessed in a national convention of the United Mine Workers of America was the final adjournment of that body Friday afternoon after the dissolution of the joint conference of operators and miners of the central and southwestern districts.

When the voices of the miners mingled in the singing of "America" had hushed an oppressive silence fell upon the assembled delegates, and President John Mitchell slowly pronounced the words that adjourned the seventeenth annual convention without day, thus dissolving every possible hope of avoiding a gigantic industrial war without the intervention of some unexpected conciliatory move.

The apparent determination of both operators and miners indicate that neither will make overtures to the other for further negotiations, and, as indicated by the speeches of both the radicals and conservatives of both organizations on the floor of the joint conference, unless some influence which is not now foreseen steps into the breach 500,000 men controlled by the United Mine Workers will walk out of the mines in every section of the country April 1.

There have been intimations that two agencies—the President of the United States and the National Civic Federation—may be appealed to to set in motion negotiations looking to a rehabilitation of the joint state agreement, or at least the discussion of some possible means of bringing the operators and miners together for further negotiations.

During an interview President Mitchell discussed some of the phases of the situation. In answer to a question, he said:

"Yes, it is true that never in the history of this country has a strike of such far-reaching effect been threatened. It means a national suspesion of mining if the strike comes on at the expiration of our mining contracts March 31, and it includes the anthracite districts."

According to the figures given out by the national officers of the miners' organization they expect the strike to bring out over 600,000 men—about 150,000 non-union miners in West Virginia and Pennsylvania, with 450,000 union miners.

Of this number about 150,000 will be out in the anthracite districts, 85,000 in the Pennsylvania bituminous districts, 38,000 in Ohio, 17,000 in Indiana, 60,000 in Illinois, 16,000 in Iowa, 30,000 in West Virginia, 3,000 in Michigan and approximately 60,000 in Kansas, Missouri, Teaxs Indian Territory and Arkansas.

INSURANCE MEN ARRESTED.

Officers of the Continental are Charged with Making False Reports.

Salt Lake City.—Hiram Tyre, president of the Continental Life Insurance company, for whose arrest a warrant was issued Friday at the instance of the county attorney on the complaint alleging that Tyre had made false reports of his company's business to the secretary of state, arrived here Saturday from San Francisco and surrendered himself. He was released under $5,000 bond. President Tyre professes to have no fear of the outcome.

Charles C. C. Wyle, secretary of the Continental Life Insurance company, was arrested later in the day, the charges against him being the same as those made against President Tyre. Both are accused of falsifying the accounts of the company to deceive the policy holders and the public as to the status of the company.

Fifty Men Burned by Explosion.

Genesee, N. Y.—Fifty men were burned, many of them seriously, in an explosion at the Sterling Salt company's mine near Cuylerville Friday. The explosion was caused by an accumulation of gas in the sand house near the surface. The men were coming up the shaft at the close of the day's work when the gas was ignited by one of their lamps. A blinding explosion followed. The men were all brought to the surface by rescue parties.

Missionary's Home Is Looted.

Hong Kong.—The home of Rev. Andrew Beattie, an American missionary at Fati, in the district of Canton, was looted Saturday by an armed band of Chinese. The missionaries were bound and their clothes, watches and silver, valued at $1,000, were taken by the robbers. Dr. Beattie is in charge of five of the day schools of the board of missions of the Presbyterian church of America at Fati.

Oil Explode and Spread Fire Broadcast. Scenic Display.

TREMENDOUS LOSS

Property Amounting to Over One and a Quarter Millions in Value.

St. Louis.—Fire which originated in the Union Grain elevator in East St. Louis, Ill., Saturday night, after completely destroying that structure, spread to surrounding buildings and freight car yards of the terminal association and caused damage estimated at a million and a quarter dollars before its progress was checked. A detailed estimate of the losses follows:

Union elevator, $300; grain in elevator, $950,000; St. Louis Transfer company, barn, $15,000; horses, $10,-[illegible]; feed, $3,000; Waters-Pierce Oil company, $5,000; seven dwellings, $7,-[illegible]; twenty box cars, $20,000; total, $1,-[illegible]6,500.

The fire spread to the stables of the St. Louis Transfer company and two hundred horses and as many wagons were burned in addition to the buildings.

The fire orginated in a brick engine house thirty feet away from the elevator proper, and was discovered by the night watchman.

Before the arrival of the fire department the flames had spread to the elevator. Assistance was sent from St. Louis and the efforts of the firemen were directed principally toward preventing the spread of the fire to adjoining elevators and warehouses, the Union Elevator having been converted into a furnace within a few minutes after it caught fire.

Seventeen dwelling houses were covered with burning oil by the explosion of four tank cars and entirely destroyed. The occupants, however, were either outside viewing the conflagration or were enabled to escape before the flames consumed their homes.

A brisk southwest wind whipped solid columns of smoke, flame and back the firemen and igniting several cars in the adjoining terminal yards. The oil tanks which exploded were standing nearly 400 yards from the elevator. They belong to the Waters-Peirce Oil company and contained [illegible],000 gallons of oil each.

Just north of the oil tanks, three strings of cars in all about twenty, were deluged by the burning oil and entirely destroyed with their contents.

Switch engines and crews worked for several hours towing strings of empties and loaded cars out of the danger zone and several fire engines were detailed to prevent the spread of flames to the hundreds of box cars on sidings in the immediate vicinity of the path of the fire.

WRECK ON SEABOARD.

One Brakeman Is Badly Mangled and Burned by Escaping Steam.

Jacksonville, Fla.—An extra freight train on the Seaboard Air line was wrecked at White House, twelve miles west of this city by running into an open switch and colliding with freight cars. One brakeman (colored) name unknown, was killed, his body being fearfully mangled and scalded by escaping steam. Engineer Jenkins was crushed internally and scalded.

Conductor Wainwright was bruised about the head and body and badly scalded. Robert Riley, a negro brakeman, leaped from the train, one leg being broken by the fall. The fireman and flagman were also scalded and slightly injured.

STRIKE ORDERED.

Central Federated Union will Support Housesmiths—Men Called Out Feb. 15.

New York.—At a meeting of representatives of all the building trades unions in the city of New York Friday night, it was unanimously decided to order the various unions in the building trades to go on strike Feb. 15 in sympathy with the housesmiths. The conference was held under the auspices of the central union and announced that the failure of a union concerned to support the housesmiths would mean the expulsion of that particular union from the Central Federated Union. This resolution was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That on and after Feb. 15, 1906, no member of the union will be allowed to work on any building or job where union men have been locked out or are on strike, or have been replaced."

The Vote of Bullock.

Union Springs.—The poll tax list closed with 519 who hold receipts. In 1904 there were 407 receipts issued and in 1902, 565. The per cent of registered voters who are subject to poll tax is about sixty. According to these figures, 260 more persons should have paid poll tax. The numbers not subject to poll tax will make the number entitled to suffrage about 1,600.

PERSIA HAS REOLUTION.

Affair Is Described as Picturesque and Is Now Assuming a More Acute Character.

St. Petersburg.—According to private advices received here the picturesque revolutionary movement in Persia is assuming a more brute character. The Shah in great alarm, recently summoned home his most trusted advisers in Europe, in order to consult with them as to the best methods for meeting the crisis. A "constitution" has not been realized, even on paper. The church party which includes the all-powerful Mullahs, is pressing its advantages to the utmost.

The developments are being watched with interest in diplomatic circles here, as Persia is one of the pawns in the larger game of international politics.

The Persian minister at St. Petersburg has departed for Teheran.

Senator Pettus Among Poorest.

Washington.—Senator Pettus of Alabama confessed at the white house that he will easily take rank in the class of the poorest men in the senate, there having been some gossip as to the poorest of men there. The venerable Alabama senator, 84 years old, called on the President.

"I agree with William Wirt, who was attorney general of the United States, that industrious lawyers work harder, love better and die poorer than any other class of people," he said.

Senator Pettus doesn't believe in leaving money behind him and thinks that it encourages laziness.

"I have grandsons and granddaughters and still another generation coming on," said the Senator. "I do not want to leave them so they will not have to work, for these men with millions do not have to labor and consequently they do not work."

"Is it true, Senator, as quoted in the newspapers, that you said if you had life to live over again, you would get out in the middle of a big farm and stay there?" some one asked.

"Well, I don't remember saying that, but I certainly have thought it a number of times," was the response.

Charged with Lynching.

Barnwell, S. C.—W. J. Myrick, Wade Sanders, C. W. Pogg and Tom Huggins, all prominent farmers of this county; Postmaster Joseph Halford of Ulmer, and Constables W. J. Harter and Milledge Lee were lodged in jail here charged with having assisted in the lynching of Frank Deloach, colored, and John Deloach, colored, father and son, at Ulmer Dec. 22.

The younger negro was accused of having killed Haynes Criddock, a prominent farmer of this section, having done so at the command of his father.

Auccuracy of Report Doubted.

Washington.—Speaker Cannon Saturday made public the census bureau figures on ungined cotton immediately after the house was called to order. The total amount of unginned cotton shown by the report is 250,884 bales, with 1,643 ginneries unheard from. This publication was in accordance with the Sims resolution passed by the house requiring Director North of the census bureau to furnish to Congress all data on unginned cotton of the crop of 1905 collected to Jan. 16.

An effort was made to have Speaker Cannon order the report read in the house, but he flatly refused to do this, saying the document must pass through ordinary channels and announced that he thought the figures were misinformation rather than information; that they were based on partial returns and of little value.

Plans Canals in Russia.

St. Petersburg.—The American of the name of Wendell Jackson has a project for linking the Uuni and Nneiper rivers by a canal near Vitebsk and forming an internal waterway from the Baltic sea to the Black sea. The plan is seriously thought of in some quarters and a committee composed of representative ministers of commerce, finance and railroad was established today to examine and make a report on the matter, though owing to the financial situation there is no immediate prospect for favorable action being taken.

St. Louis.—Believing that the life of Meyer shot and killed his brother, Joseph W. Meyer. At the time Joseph was brandishing a heavy wrench, declaring he would kill his mother after she had remonstrated with him for becoming intoxicated.

Tennessee to Make Trial Trip.

Washington.—The trial trip of the armored cruiser Tennessee has been set for Feb. 9 and will occur over the course off Rockland, Me. The trial will be attended by the officers of the trial board and by the junior officers of the navy school of steam engineering at Washington.

Candidates for Sheriff.

Bay Minette.—Coroner N. J. McKenzie of Daphne, who was appointed to that office by Governor Jelks and who lead the posse which began its march to Bay Minette and which was disbanded in Mobile, is announced for sheriff. An authoritative statement from ex-Sheriff T. A. Booth is to the effect that he will again aspire to that office.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. SPENCER S. ROCHE.

Subject: Lessons of Elijah's Life.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—At St. Mark's P. E. Church, the Rev. Dr. Spencer Summerfield Roche, the rector, preached Sunday on "Lessons From Elijah's Life." The text was from I. Kings, xix:9: "And he came thither, unto a cave." Dr. Roche said:

The lessons present quite fully the life of that grand old prophet Elijah the Tishbite. From a sublime scene in his life I shall attempt to draw such lessons as may fit the hour. Let us select the moment when his soul yearned to be on Horeb, the mount of God. Give your thoughts to this statement, "And he came thither, unto a cave."

I shall speak of the coming and of the cavern; of the grief the journey brought to view, and the glory the cavern revealed. Throughout we must remember that we study a typical case of Almighty God's dealing with His discouraged servants. What the Lord said and did to Elijah, He would have us believe He says and does to ourselves.

From one of the most striking situations in history we are to see Elijah hurled in an instant. The occasion of his fall was one of the slightest of incidents, as when an avalanche which carries down the side of a mountain is started by the waves of the air aroused by a tourist's halloo. Ahab talked with his wife. We have seen greatness of character in reticence, as when to the numerous interrogatories of Pilate the Son of Man "answered him never a word." So meanness, cowardice are seen often in that easy flow of words which lets out everything. A wife may tell her husband what he has no business to know; a man may make himself contemptible blabbing everything to his wife. "Ahab told Jezebel all that Elijah had done and withal how he had slain the prophets with the sword." I do not understand he spoke in wrath or malice; quite the contrary; he knew he had a tigress to deal with, and used all the tact his lean wit could summon. He was afraid to tell her that he himself had abandoned the sinking cause of the Baalites. He divided his matters, putting the small things first; last of all—her beloved ministers of falsehood and fraud were slain. The tigress rolled her angry eyes and showed her cruel teeth. She sent this message to Elijah: "The gods do so to me and more also if I make not thy life as the life of one of them by to-morrow about this time." Jezebel's blood was up. "He arose and went for his life." The man who had confronted the king and his armed retainers fled terrified from a woman.

There is a lesson here for all. Life's victories only lift us to new battlefields. One of Elijah's mistakes was his supposition that all would go well if one event resulted favorably. He succeeded beyond his wildest dreams only to find his real troubles yet to begin.

So we regard the office to which we hope to be elected, the partnership we are anxious to form, the fifty or hundred thousand we are striving for. When the great achievement is won we are simply like the army landed on a hostile shore under the guns of the fleet. Shut up for weeks in narrow quarters, tossed by the sea, fed on ship's fare, the men long for the land with its fruit and forage. The joy of the landing is quickly exchanged for the sense of insecurity and the fear of sudden attack.

A day or so after Carmel, Elijah was at Beersheba. Even there he was full of alarm. He fled into deeper solitude. The farther he fled the lower sank his spirits. See his awful consternation in his inconsistency with regard to life. He had run away to save it. Under the juniper tree he begged it might be taken. So low is Elijah fallen! Now for the second stage of the journey. The prophet is broken down. He thinks the end has come. See now God cheered His disconsolate servant. First He took care of Elijah's body. The prophet was fatigued, famished, spent. Natural law carrying out divine purpose caused the pining and sighing to bring slumber.

The discouraged Christian can often do worse than lie down and take a nap. When the world is too much for us, when the strain and worry seem as if they would never cease, when the disappointment is bitter, when the letter comes destroying our hopes, when bereavement leaves the heart desolate, heaven guides the afflicted soul to calm and quiet, and the peace of submission. "So He giveth His beloved sleep."

Next God fed Elijah. "An angel touched him and said: 'Arise and eat.' And behold there was at his head a cake baken on the coals and a cruse of water." Our depression has at times an intensely physical basis. Our Lord fed the multitude before He instructed them. A full stomach is not always the sign of a pure heart, but who doubts that if we could give one good meal to the wretched creatures infesting the streets of cities we might begin in some of them the salvation from sin.

Elijah slept and ate, and slept and ate again. The repose was natural, the repast supernatural, but the lessons are universally applicable. Calmed and strengthened, his holy spirit reasserted itself. He would see Horeb the Mount of God.

"And he came thither, unto a cave." Notice the parallel with Moses. These two who were united in a post-mortem communion on the Mount of Transfiguration, were in life granted the most inspiring visions of Jehovah in perhaps the same identical spot. How often in the Old Testament and in the New, as well as in the later history of Redemption, we are reminded that God grants additional favors and mercies in the place where prayer is wont to be made. Places in the lapse of time acquire redoubled sanctity. This church was rebuilt over the spot where God had for many years listened to His people's prayers and praises. We see it again this morning after an interval of several months, changed, but the same; not yet in the final form of beauty which we shall see in a few weeks and which will justify unusual services and unusual gladness, but already brighter and fairer than we have ever seen it before.

We love to apply the term old to our churches, and the world has no more inspiring localities than those areas in some of the great cities of Europe where churches have stood since the days of Charlemagne, of Constantine, and possibly in some cases from the age of St. John. Where God had revealed Himself hundreds of years before to Moses He now shows His glory to Elijah. "What dost thou here, Elijah?" The answer illustrates mistaken, thoughtless zeal. The Tishbite is severe on Israel and careful for his own life, and betrays a wrong spirit. Very good people, even in their religious opinions, their most pious aspirations, err greatly. They show overwhelming conceit, or unworthy estimates of others, or the most wrongheaded choice of means, or a selfish regard for their own comfort, and even life. Among the mistakes of good men think of the miserable narrowness of those who talk against missions to the heathen and refuse to contribute; or the coldness of those who discourage under the term "slumming" efforts by Christian people to fight the devil in his own strongholds of the brothel and the rummery. Elijah, though a good man, made some mistakes. So far has he turned aside that we are tempted to think his estimate is just that he can henceforth be of no service to his Lord. But we shall see that heaven can make abundant use of even cross-grained energy, so only it have a good heart. See His method with this devout, heroic, but misguided saint.

God showed Elijah the impotence of the Carnal. There is no reproach. "Go forth and stand on the mount before the Lord." There came sweeping down the granite crags of Sinai a gust and then a blast and then a hurricane that uprooted the ancient trees, and rolled the loose fragments of rock against one another till they flew in pieces like millstones subjected to too swift revolution. The appalled saint knelt breathless, and as the tornado spent its force he lifted his eyes for a nearer view of God. "But the Lord was not in the wind." The earth rumbled, the crags were split, the mount itself rocked, the ground opened great fissures, the day of the dissolution of nature itself appeared to have come. He looked again. "But the Lord was not in the earthquake." The lightning darted out of the clouds, flash following flash in the terrible splendor of Oriental tempests till the atmosphere seemed charged with continuous flame, and Mount Sinai and the cave and the firmament itself seemed ablaze. Again he strained his vision to discern in the blinding glare One yet more glorious. "But the Lord was not in the fire."

As has been finely said Elijah had conceived God simply as power. His own achievements had been wrought by power. He is now made to recognize the futility of mere force. This is a needful discovery for us. Especially for the world's great ones. The man who in finance or industry has won the greatest success is speedily convinced of the impotency of that which men ordinarily consider victory. Whatever teaches us this is good. Failure, disappointment, sickness, each is a blessing in disguise if it lifts us out of ourselves and makes us feel that with all the world can give there is something else needed.

He showed Elijah the infinitude, the inexhaustible power and goodness and glory of the divine. The cyclone was stilled, the earthquake spent, the lightnings burned out and yet God came not. "Then on perturbed and tormented nature a silence rested as when the lashed galley slave is permitted to rest, as when the Atlantic roaring for days falls into a calm." The cave, in its deepest grotto, was penetrated with the spirit of stillness. No breath stirred. The seer felt an awe, not less, but greater than before, when there came a voice, mysterious, thrilling his heart and asking the old question. The old answer was given, we must believe, with a new meaning, for the great lesson of time and eternity had been taught.

In the cave of Horeb the fundamental truth of the Christian religion is revealed, a truth every mission, however humble; every church, however adorned; every cathedral, however magnificent, must illustrate. Not the earthquake, cyclone, hurly-burly, but the still small voice. Here is the secret of God. Not the startling, but the pleading; not the violent, but the tender; not force, but pity; not Sinatic fury, but gospel grace; "not by might nor by power, but by My spirit, saith the Lord." God is love. Not an unseen God, but a saving Christ. "He came to Horeb a voice, he left it an initiated man," says Maurice.

But from the living of the Christian turn to his dying. The close of every good life has dignity like unto "chariots of fire and horses of fire." But the likeness runs on immeasurably beyond death. St. James tells that Elijah was a man of like passions with us. Then our infirmities, thank God, allow us a life that does not end with earth. The thought of All Saints is of the steadily accumulating honors and joys of redeemed souls. We see Elijah go. But it is not the last of him. Malachi said he would come back on earth. Centuries later the world asked John the Baptist if he were Elijah. Some believed Jesus must be. On the day of Transfiguration, Elijah for a moment was with us, at once on earth and in glory.

We can trust those dear departed ones, whose memorials cluster around us, with the Lord God of Elijah.

THREE DEAD IN WRECK.

Oriental Limited, on the Great Northern, in Collision.

Spokane, Wash.—A collision on the Great Northern Railway one mile west of Columbia Falls resulted in the death of three trainmen.

The Great Northern Oriental Limited No. 1, westbound, crashed into eastbound passenger train No. 2. A fireman on each train and an express messenger were killed.

RUSSIANS SHOOT BRITAINS.

Sailors Told to Halt, But Did Not Understand Language.

London, England.—A dispatch to the Standard from Moscow says that two British seamen who were landing at Reval were shot and killed by sentries, who shouted from behind for them to stand.

The sailors did not heed the call, not knowing the language or that the sentries were shouting at them, whereupon the guards fired.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR FEBRUARY 11.

Subject: Jesus Calling Fishermen, Luke v., 1-11—Golden Text, Eph. v., 1—Memory Verses, 5, 6—Topic: Laws of Soul Winning—Commentary.

I. Jesus teaching the people (vs. 1-3). 1. "The people pressed." Leaving Nazareth our Lord went to Capernaum and perhaps abode in the house of Peter. The power of His preaching drew crowds, which pressed upon Him as He was walking along the white beach which forms the margin of Lake Genesaret. "To hear." There was a good prospect for a glorious revival of religion. There were times in the life of our Lord when thousands were anxious to hear Him, for the common people heard Him gladly. "Lake of Gennesaret." The most sacred sheet of water which this earth contains. Called also the Sea of Galilee. It is a clear lake about twelve miles long and five broad, with the Jordan River flowing through it. This was the region of the early labors of our Lord.

2. "Two ships." Fishing boats. They must have been small. This is clear from the accounts given of them. A few men could handle one, and a single large draught of fishes endangered them. "Standing by." Anchored, or drawn up upon the beach. "The fishermen." Peter, Andrew, James and John. "Washing their nets." They had spent the night in fruitless effort, and now they were cleaning the filth of the sea from the threads of the nets and mending any defective or broken parts. It is interesting to notice how often Christ appeared to men while they were busy with their temporal affairs. 3. "One of the ships." The ship of James and John appeared to be at some distance away; this one belonged to Simon Peter and to his brother Andrew. See Mark 1:16. "Prayed him." Asked him. Jesus in a familiar manner takes possession of Peter's boat and makes it His pulpit.

II. The draught of fishes (vs. 4-7). 4. "Launch out." Christ forgot His own weariness and only seemed to remember the disappointment of His followers in toiling all night in vain. This verse has often been used to illustrate the fact that Christ would have us leave the shore of selfishness, worldliness and sin and launch out into the depth of His love and fulness. "For a draught." Let down your nets for the taking of fish. 5. "Master." This is the first time that the word here translated master is used in the New Testament, and it is used only by Luke. The other evangelists called Him Rabbi or Lord. This is not the word usually rendered master, but is a title of respect. Note how familiarly Peter addresses Jesus. "Toiled all the night." Peter thus shows how unlikely it was that they would catch anything. The night was the best time for catching certain kinds of fish and if they had caught nothing then they could not expect to catch any in the daytime. This is no doubt reported by Luke to cause the miracle to appear all the more striking. "At Thy word." No doubt Peter was weary and somewhat discouraged, but he had faith enough in Christ to lead him to go at the direction of his divine Master. 6. "Their net brake." "Their nets were breaking." R. V. There was such a multitude of fishes that a snap in some weak part of the net warned them that they must have assistance or lose the entire "catch." The miracle was an acted parable, of which the significance is explained in Matthew 13:47.

7. "Beckoned." Made signals. The distance evidently being too great for the voice to reach. "They came." James and John with their ship. "Began to sink." The boats would hardly hold as much as the nets.

III. The disciples astonished (vs. 8, 9). 8. "Simon Peter." His full name is here given, for this is the turning point in his life. Simon is destined to become Peter, a rock. "'Peter' expresses the possibilities Jesus saw in the nature of Simon." "Saw." It seems that it was not till Peter saw the boats beginning to sink that he realized the greatness of the miracle. "Fell down." The common posture of a suppliant. In amazement he fell at the feet of Jesus trembling and afraid. "Depart from me." Peter's feelings were not unnatural, but were an involuntary, sudden request, and arose from ignorance of the character of Jesus. We are not worthy to be with Him, but He came to seek the lost and to save the impure. The exclamation of Peter was wrung from a heart touched with a sense of humility, and his words did not express his thoughts. "A sinful man." Peter saw himself a very sinful creature. When we get near Christ we shall see that in our unregenerate state we are without moral beauty or holiness. 9. "Was astonished." "Was amazed." Humanity stands "amazed" before the power of God.

IV. Forsaking all for Christ (vs. 10, 11). 10. "Sons of Zebedee." The children and wife of Zebedee are often referred to, but in this transaction only do we meet with Zebedee himself (Matt. 4:21). "Fear not." He calmed their fears and stilled all their troubled feelings. "From henceforth." Hereafter. "Catch men." Literally, thou shalt be catching alive.

11. "Ships to land." They drew them up on the beach for a final abandonment. "Forsook all." Although it was not much which they had to leave, yet it was all they had, even all their living. The sacrifice was a willing one and showed their love for Christ and a readiness to obey Him. "Followed Him." They returned again to their occupation as fishermen after the crucifixion, and were again called to abandon it and devote themselves by a second miraculous draught of fishes and by the direct precept of Jesus.

Killed Two Women and Himself.

The bodies of Charles Winn, a freight handler; his wife and Mrs. Charles E. Riggs, of Portland, Me., sister of Mrs. Winn, discovered in the apartments in which the Winns lived, at Providence, R. I., revealed what the police believe a double murder and suicide. Winn apparently shot the two women and then killed himself.

SAVING A COMRADE

A Flock of Terns Rescue a Wounded Mate From Its Hunter.

Stories of affection and apparent reason among wild animals have divided the "nature writers" into two schools. One believes that animals act merely from instinct, the other holds that the dumb brute feels and reasons. In "The Life of a Scotch Naturalist" Mr. Smiles quotes from the journal of Thomas Edwards the story of how a little flock of terns rescued a wounded companion whom the naturalist had shot:

I fired and he came down with a broken wing, screaming as he fell into the water. The report of the gun, together with his cries, brought together the party he had left, in order that they might ascertain the cause of the alarm.

After surveying their wounded brother round and round, as he was drifting unwittingly toward the shore with the flowing tide, they came flying in a body to the spot where I stood, and rent the air with their screams. These they continued to utter, regardless of their own individual safety, until I began making preparations for receiving the approaching bird. I could already see that it was a beautiful adult specimen, and I expected in a few moments to have it in my possession, since I was not very far from the water's edge.

While matters were in this position I beheld, to my utter astonishment, two of the unwounded terns take hold of their disabled comrade, one at each wing, lift him out of the water and bear him out seaward. They were followed by two other birds.

After having carried him about six or seven yards they let him gently down again, and the two who had hitherto been inactive took him up.

In this way they continued to carry him alternately until they had conveyed him to a rock at a considerable distance, upon which they landed him in safety.

I made toward the rock, wishing to obtain the prize which had been so unceremoniously snatched from my grasp. I was observed, however, by the terns, and instead of four, I had in a short time a whole swarm about me. On my near approach to the rock I once more beheld two of them take hold of the wounded bird as they had done before, and bear him out to sea in triumph, far beyond my reach.

Hawk and Jack Rabbit.

Two weeks ago a correspondent asked for reports on the action of small game in dodging the assault of hawks and other birds of prey.

Some years ago two of us were hunting quail and rabbits in the northern part of Kansas and were walking along the railroad track when we came to a section gang, and inquiring of the foreman if he could direct us where the other party could get a jack rabbit to take to his home in Chicago, he pointed to an adjoining field and stated there was a large one that lived in the field, if a hawk, that had been after him for two weeks, had not got him." While talking he pointed to a large hawk in the distance and said: "If he comes this way we can soon tell if he has yet caught the jack." The hawk came sailing on, and when over the field made a swoop down upon the ground, and as he rose in the air a jack rabbit darted out of the stubble and ran in our direction, and the hawk made two darts at the jack in plain sight of us. As it would near the jack he would flatten himself out upon the ground and as the hawk passed over him he would spring up and run toward us. Thus eluding the hawk, he came quite near us, trying to get into some very tall rank grass and weeds by the side of the railroad. As the hawk was making his fourth dive, a load of No. 4 shot from my 12-gauge Parker ended the destruction of game by that field robber, and before I could object my friend had killed the jack.

We noticed that the jack would squeal whenever the hawk darted at him, but a close examination of the back and ears of the jack showed that he had not been touched by the talons of the hawk.

This being the only time that I was ever close enough to carefully note the action of the hunted, I look forward with anticipation to the reports of other brothers of the field who have had more and better opportunities to note the acts of self-defense on the part of the hunted.—Correspondence in Forest and Stream.

Too Impressionistic.

Of John S. Sargent, who has been accused of painting a Baltimore physician's beard blue, a Bostonian said the other day:

"Mr. Sargent will take this fling about the blue beard good humoredly. He likes flings at artists. At a dinner here during his late visit to America. I heard him tell a pretty good anecdote at his own expense.

"He was visiting, he said, a country family, near Woodstock, and one morning by a lake side he set up his easel and began to paint. His subject was the stretch of water and the rolling hills behind.

"As he painted away, a house servant came to tell him that luncheon was ready.

"As Mr. Sargent slowly cleaned his brushes, he noticed that the man was lingering to study the wood and water scene upon the canvas.

"'Well,' said the artist, 'what do you think of my picture?'

"'Why, sir,' the servant faltered, 'I can't say as it's such a very good likeness of the master.'"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

ONE touch of winter makes the whole world shiver.

THERE seems to be no desire for an early primary for the nomination of county officers in Chilton—the date set for the State primary (Aug 27) appears to be soon enough.

HAVE you fully decided to vote for the special tax of ten cents on the hundred dollars for the public schools? The election comes off on the 20th of this month, and it is hoped that Chilton will be the banner county of the State and carry the election by a bumping majority.

ACCIDENTS will happen, and we are glad that there was no serious consequences to Senator Pettus who fell on the slippery sidewalk at Washington But it emphasizes the wisdom of the State Executive Committee in providing for the nomination of senators—in case of accidents

CONGRESSMAN Bowie is making a valiant effort to lesson the evils of blind tigers He says: "that this is an evil which needs to be remedied seems to me to be clear, but it is equally clear that Congress will not act on the matter until forced by public opinion. I believe a protest against this iniquitous condition of affairs can not be made too strong."

Ex-Presidents ought to go to the Senate as representatives of the country at large. There ought to be a constitutional amendment requiring them to pass from the White House to the Capitol immediately upon the inauguration of their successors and to remain there for life; first, because their experience and knowledge would be of the greatest benefit to the country; second, they would be free from partisan and personal motives, and, third, they would be placed upon a pedestal where their reputations could not be damaged or dignity soiled. If General Grant had gone to the Senate he might have been preserved from the conspirators of Wall street, and President Cleveland would not now be sitting as an umpire of insurance squabbles.—Wm. E. Curtis, in Chicago Record Herald.

BOWIE SHOWS STARTLING VIOLATION OF LIQUOR LAWS.

Representative Bowie, of Alabama, presented a startling array of figures before the Committee on Ways and Means yesterday, showing the illegal sale of liquor in different States and the number of "blind tigers" in operation in prohibition States and local option districts.

The committee had under consideration two bills introduced by Mr. Bowie. One of these requires Federal authorities to furnish evidence, when and to whom they issue licenses, when they are requested to do so by State or municipal authorities to aid in the criminal prosecution under State statutes.

The other measure prohibits the issuance by Federal authorities of special tax receipts from the Federal government to those persons who have not complied with the State or municipal license requirements. Such a law, Mr. Bowie argued, would have a strong tendency to abolish the illegal sale of liquor

Mr. Bowie's figures show that there are in the State of Alabama 1,592 Federal licenses, and only 763 State licenses or 829 "blind tigers," Colorado, 3,220 Federal licenses, 2,000 State licenses, and 620 "blind tigers," Georgia, 1,896 Federal licenses, 930 State licenses and 966 "blind tigers," Deleware, 423 Federal licenses 290 State licenses, and 133 "blind tigers," Kentucky, 4,052 Federal licenses, 1,983 State licenses, and 2,070 "blind tigers," Louisiana, 4,558 Federal licenses, 1,752 State licenses, 2,806 "blind tigers," Maine, 640 Federal licenses, no State licenses, accordingly 640 "blind tigers," Michigan 8,860 Federal licenses 5,554 State licenses, and 3,306 "blind tigers.

In the eight States cited, Mr. Bowie showed that there are 11,370 "blind tigers." He expressed the belief that full reports would show that there are fully as many "blind tigers" throughout the country as there are legalized saloons, or that the Federal government issues twice as many licenses as all the States combined.—Washington Post.

CHILTON COTTON ASSOCIATION

The regular monthly meeting of the Chilton branch of the Southern Cotton Association was held last Saturday at the court house, Clanton, N. J. Calloway presiding, in the unavoidable absence of Pres. F. A. Culledge.

The expenses of the four delegates to the New Orleans convention was ordered paid as follows: F A. Gulledge $18; T. J. Jackson $15; J. D Sims $15; W. H. Killingsworth $15, and a bill for stationery was ordered paid to the Secretary.

The following recommendation from Pres. Harvie Jordan was well discussed, and adopted in its entirety:

COTTON AREA FOR 1906.

What shall the cotton area of the South be in 1906? This question can be asked by anyone It can alone be definitely and correctly answered by that great army of cotton growers, who will solve the problem for themselves and the world within the next 90 days. The great Cotton Convention, which met at New Orleans, La., Jan. 11-13 1906, and the Executive Committee of the Southern Cotton Association, which convened at the same place on Jan. 14th, both harmoniously and without a dissenting voice, passed and recommended the following resolution:

"Believing that the 25 per cent reduction in cotton acreage, recommended and insisted upon by the Southern Cotton Association at its meeting at New Orleans, La., a year ago was eminently wise and salutary, this committee suggests with all the insistence at its command that for the year 1906 the Cotton Association endeavor to continue that work, to the end that the original 25 per cent reduction from the acreage of 1904 may be accomplished in the year 1906

It is generally admitted that the reduction in cotton acreage for 1905 amounted to an average of 15 per cent The demand for a full reduction of 25 per cent from the enormous area planted in 1904 would mean that we must still further reduce the area planted in 1906 from that of 1905 at least 10 per cent. Those farmers who reduced their cotton acreage 25 per cent last year will not be asked to reduce again this year, but they will be expected to hold their acreage down to that planted last year Those farmers who did not reduce last year are expected to cut their acreage 25 per cent this year. The man who reduced 15 per cent last year is expected to cut his acreage another ten per this year. In other words, it is imperative that the cotton area planted on every farm in the south this year shall be at least 25 per cent less than that planted in the spring of 1904.

This is easily understood and should be strictly carried into practical operation if the advice of the best brains from leading Southern farmers, the Southern Cotton Association and the perils of overproduction are to be heeded The farmers are generally getting into a position of thrift and independence. This is due to the fact that for the past few years, with but one exception, the crops of cotton grown, have not materially exceeded the demands for consumption and fairly good prices have prevailed,

DIVERSIFICATION THE WATCHWORD.

That the area planted in cotton last year was too large there can be no question of doubt. But for the bad climatic conditions prevailing in the southwestern states, we would have produced over 12,000,000 bales and suffered a tremendous depression in prices. With the area planted in 1904, which amounted to 27,000,000 acres, it is easily possible, with normal seasons, to produce a crop of over 13,000,000 bales. What is the sensible thing to do, cut the acreage and hold production within the limits of consumption at good prices, or plant largely, produce superabundantly and sell at ruinous prices? This is the question which now confronts every cotton grower in the South Diversification is the key-note to the proper solution of the problem. Plant more land in food-supply crops; less land in cotton; live at home, and sell your staple crops slowly, and at prices showing a profit on the year's labor. Cotton is today the cheapest commodity on the market, figuring the true cost of its production.

The true doctrine of diversification and reduction in cotton acreage will be preached from every hill-top and valley, by the officers and members of the Southern Cotton Association, during the next 90 days The entire Southern press will be urged to lift its voice, in behalf of these two fundamental propositions upon which the South must stake her fortune in 1906. The wise man will heed this advice, and exercise every possible influence over any of his neighbors who are not disposed to exercise prudence before it is too late. Make your farms self-sustaining and grow happy and prosperous

As the markets of the world are gradually broadened and the demand increases, then and not till then, let the acreage planted in cotton be increased' Regulate the supply to meet the present existing demand for consumption, and thereby have a controlling voice in the prices of the raw product. No power on earth can control prices, when the legitimate laws of supply and demand are recklessly disregarded. The farmers are the arbiters of their future fortunes. We will point the way to success. Pause and reflect before it is too late.

The wagon roads of the country belong to the nation—not to the States, counties, or townships. Every highway in the land is pre-empted by the general government for the carrying on of an essential part of its business, any interference with which, even though it be a highway commissioner or road overseer, is immediately resisted with the government, and the offender sent to prison. The general government holds fast to the highways of the land for the transmission of mails, and no authority, State or county, may intervene. The government does not pay one farthing as a privilege in doing this. The government does not pay one penny of the expense of improving or constructing a single foot of road in the land, except in its reservations, parks and cemeteries The government has the roads for its own use, and under federal statutes, if necessary to the continuance of the mails, all other business could be stopped thereon without further ado about it. And yet, we have people who think the government ought not to participate in the expense of road building in the States.

All Run Down

THIS is a common expression we hear on every side. Unless there is some organic trouble, the condition can doubtless be remedied. Your doctor is the best adviser. Do not dose yourself with all kinds of advertised remedies—get his opinion. More than likely you need a concentrated fat food to enrich your blood and tone up the system.

In Memoriam.

Our beloved brother William J. Blalock passed away from earth Jan 26, 1906, at the home of his son, W. C. Blalock, near Coosa. Ever since last May he had been suffering with dropsy, and for two weeks before his death he had a very bad cough and frequent hemorage of the lungs. Though suffering intense pain he never complained at his suffering, but trusted fully in his Saviour, and prayed hourly to God to bless him and let his death be without pain. And his prayers were answered. Although he could not speak for several hours; he knew he was dying, and just a short time before he died he held up his hand to show he was going to that home not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Born in Person county, N. C. Sept. 28, 1819 In 1848 he came to Montgomery county, near where the city of Montgomery now stands. In 1849 he married Mary E. Barret of that county, and in 1856 he moved to Coosa county where for 46 years he lived on his large plantation, an honored citizen, loving husband and devoted father. A strict member of the Missionary Baptist church, his house was always the home of ministers and their families during protracted meetings, and his doors always open to traveling ministers who passed through that country. A large host of friends and ministers will always remember the tall gray haired man with the Spirit of God dwelling in his heart, and the light of God's love shining in his kind blue eyes as he made them welcome to his home. He resided there until seven years ago, when, being too old and feeble to attend to business, he sold out over there and moved to Chilton. where he resided at the home of his son, George W. Blalock, for nearly four years. A beloved member of Concord chuurch. To know him was to love him, and a host of friends will mourn his loss. For the past five years he has visited and lived among his children. He leaves a wife and eight children, and nearly a hundred grand children and great grand children to mourn his loss. In his death we see the passing away of a noble christian, one whose uppermost thoughts all through life was to serve God and obey the commands of his Saviour. In his death we see the fulfillment of the scriptures, that to the children of God death has no sting. For to him death was peaceful as falling asleep, for he did indeed fall asleep in Jesus, to wake with God.

Weep not for him ye loving wife, remember your loss is God's gain, for God doeth all things well, and the dear companion is waiting for you and will meet you at the beautiful gate. Weep not friends and and relatives, but remember he is at rest, and that some sweet day you shall meet him in that beautiful beyond, where no night shall ever dim the splender of perfect day, for the Saviour's face is the light, and no sorrow shall ever come again, and no tears shall dim the vision of the glorified Spirits as they chant the heavenly anthems, and dwell forever and ever in the presence of the blessed Saviour in the new Jerusalem, the Holy City of God.

A FRIEND.

Luckiest Man in Arkansas.

"I'm the luckiest man in Arkansas," writes H. L. Stanley, of Bruno, "since the restoration of my wife's health after five years of continuous coughing and bleeding from the lungs; and I owe my good fortune to the world's greatest medicine, Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which I know from experience will cure consumption if taken in time. My wife improved with first bottle and twelve bottles completed the cure." Cures the worst coughs and colds or money refunded. At Upchurch Drug co. 50c and $1,00. Trial bottle free.

THE NEW WEST POINT.

STRENUOUS LIFE PROVIDED FOR THE YOUNG CADETS AND FUTURE OFFICERS.

Aim Is to Make Men Quick and Self-Reliant—Extensive Additions Being Made to Institution—Social Life a Feature.

The United States Military Academy at West Point has long enjoyed an international reputation as the finest military institution in the world, and its prestige will be considerably enhanced upon the completion of the splendid scheme of improvements now under way, upon which Congress will expend more than seven million dollars ere they are fully completed in the year [illegible]. Already the creation of the "new West Point" has progressed far enough to prove how beneficial will be the undertaking.

While the primary purpose of Uncle Sam's unique institution on the banks of the Hudson River is, of course, to educate young men for positions as officers of the United States Army, the superiority which has won for it world-wide fame is due to the marvelous efficiency of the mental and physical training without regard to the use to which the knowledge is to be put. It is in the interest of this ambition to graduate perfect specimens of American manhood that the costly improvements are being carried forward.

Nearly Trebles Present Capacity.

For one thing the new buildings will provide accommodations for 1,200 cadets, instead of for 450 as at present, and these new structures will also include a new gymnasium, riding hall, academic building, cadet headquarters, etc., as well as a handsome hotel for the accommodation of the numerous visitors, including many members of the fair sex, who come to the Point for the various social functions which are scattered through the school year.

[illegible]

The new West Point will place some added comforts within reach of the cadets in gray but it will result in no lessening of the strenuous activity of their every day life. The West Pointer is roused at six o'clock every morning, after eight hours sleep. He must be on the jump from the moment he opens his eyes, for only twenty minutes is allowed him to wash, dress, fold up his bedding and set in order his room and its contents. At 6.30 o'clock the young men form in companies and march to the mess hall for breakfast. Almost immediately after breakfast begins a routine of study that includes such branches as mathematics, drawing, modern languages, geography, chemistry, geology, etc. Interspersed between the study and recitation hours are intervals of drill, and what in any other school would be given over to recreation periods are devoted to athletics in accordance with a definite program.

To Make Physically Perfect.

The cadets at West Point go in for almost every known muscle-building exercise. Early in the morning they go through the well-known "setting up" drill and time is also devoted particularly in summer to tennis, golf, polo, hurdle riding, baseball, foot ball and swimming. The gymnasium pursuits include boxing, fencing, single stick exercise, etc., in addition to which instruction and practice in dancing are compulsory during two years of the four year course.

The social side of life at West Point has unquestionably proven one of the greatest attractions of this unique school, admission to which is so eagerly sought by young men in all parts of the country. Ordinarily the West Pointer has only half an hour daily,—the interval following supper—that he can call his own. On Saturday after noon however, the lads are "free" from two o'clock until 6.30 o'clock, the supper hour, and on Wednesdays there is similar freedom from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 6.30 o'clock. At such times the famous Flirtation Walk, where so many romances have had their beginning is a mecca for a considerable portion of the young men. On Saturday evenings from 8.30 to 10.30 o'clock there is dancing.

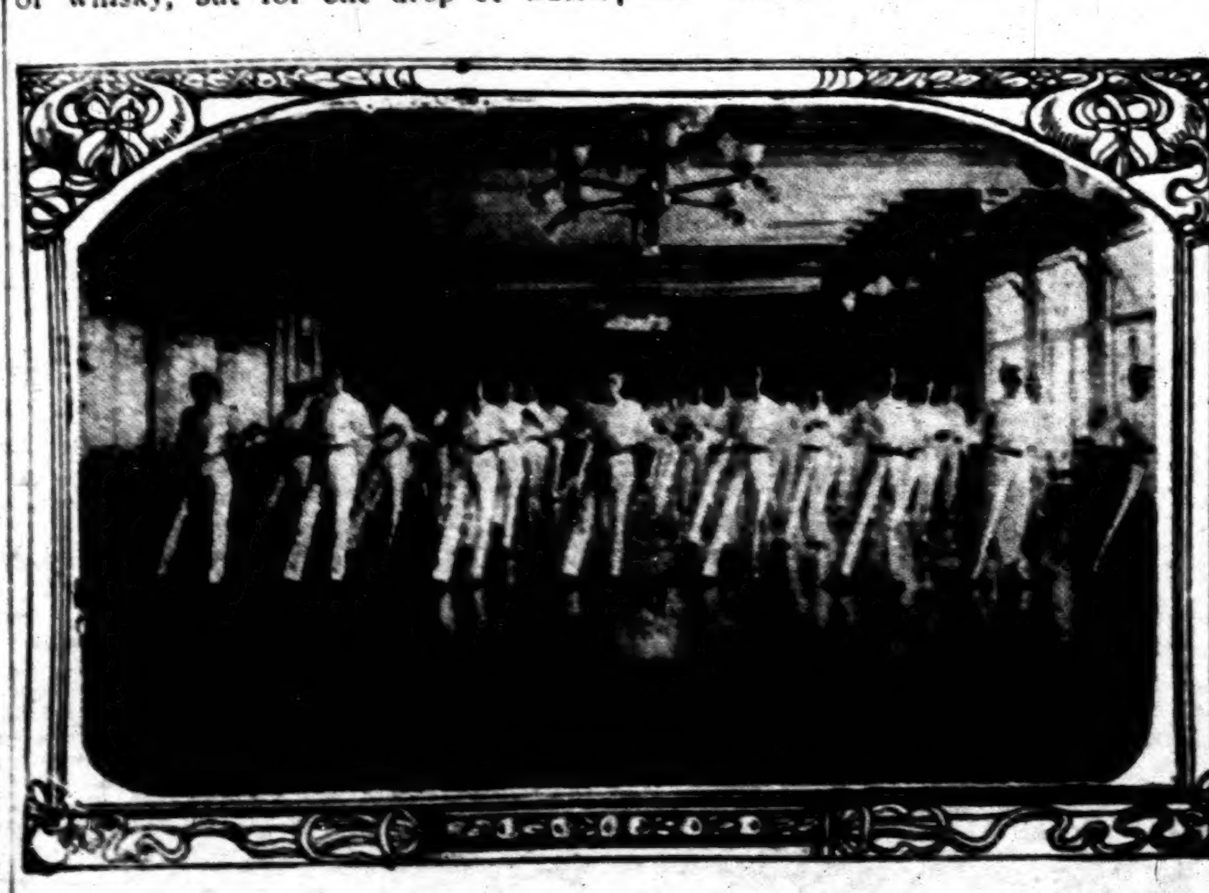
When They Camp Out.

In the eyes of most of the cadets the happiest portion of the year at West Point is the summer interval when the whole battalion goes into camp in the wooded area on the north side of the Academy grounds, remaining under canvas from June until September. During this season visitors are especially numerous, and the social life at the Point is seen at its best.

The cadets at West Point are in very truth picked men, for not only is admission gained by passing a very severe entrance examination, but there are examinations scattered all through the four year course and if a cadet fails to come up to the mark at any of these periodical tests he is almost certain to be dropped from the rolls. Indeed, so severe is this weeding-out process that only about one-half of the young men who enter West Point succeed in graduating.

A Democratic Institution.

One phase of conditions at West Point which is calculated to make every American proud of the institution is the splendid democracy which prevails. Special privileges are unknown at the Point. The boy whose father is a multi-millionaire wears the same grade of clothing, sleeps in the same kind of a bed and eats food that is precisely on a par with that furnished to the cadet who started in life as a bootblack. Each student at the Military Academy receives from Uncle Sam the sum of five hundred dollars a year and out of this he must purchase all his necessities at the "store." If he spends more than the allowance such excess is a debt which is duly charged against him and must be liquidated from his future pay.



DANCING IS CONSIDERED A NECESSARY ADJUNCT TO THE "POINT."

He Broke up the Meeting.

A temperance lecturer, speaking in Keene, N. H., reminded his hearers of the story of Dives and Lazarus. He pointed out how, when Dives was in Hades, he did not ask for beer or wine or whisky, but for one drop of water. "Now, my friends," said the lecturer, "what does that show us?" A voice from the back of the hall instantly replied: "It shows us where you temperance people go to."

PALACE FIT FOR TITANIA.

MOST BEAUTIFUL PALACE IN ENGLAND RESIDENCE OF AMERICAN WOMAN.

Is Now Looking for an Irish Castle. Canada Wants a Local Premier—Native American Might Hold Such a Position.

The Duchess of Roxburghe, nee Goelet of New York, after many fruitless attempts to find a suitable residence in Ireland, has intrusted the matter to Lord Barrymore, who married, as his second wife, the widow of Arthur Post of New York, and thereby, quite naturally, greatly improved his financial position. That is one reason he is partial to American women and willing to do all in his power to assist them. Few men know Ireland better than he does. At one time he was one of the best hated men in the country, and diligent students of Irish history within the last quarter of a century would say that it is a wonder he is still living. He is looking out for a house for the Duchess in picturesque Galway. A fine mansion, constructed of Irish granite and situated between Tuam and Claremorris on the Midland and Great Western Railway, has been inspected in this connection. It is known as Grove Castle, and was erected about forty years ago by an eccentric bachelor millionaire named Cannon. The estate attached to the house is of little value, but the house and grounds are beautiful. There is plenty of fishing and shooting in the neighborhood, and in the hunting season it attracts many aristocratic folk.

Floors Castle is the English residence of the Roxburghes. It stands on a terrace overlooking extensive meadow lands spreading down to the Tweed at its junction with the Teviot. It is like a veritable fairyland of cupolas and minarets, of turrets and embrasured parapets. The castle was built in 1718 by Sir John Vanbrugh, in the conception of some happy moment. Sir Walter Scott described "the mansion of Floors" as "a kingdom for Oberon and Titania to dwell in, whose majesty and beauty impresses the mind with a sense of awe mingled with pleasure." Vanbrugh might well be dubbed the "architect to first dukes," from his close association with Blenheim for the first Duke of Marlborough, Kimbolton for the first Duke of Manchester, and now Floors for the first Duke of Roxburghe, who had just received this further title. The third duke was so engrossed with the lifelong task of getting together his priceless collection of old English literature that he had no time for the domestic life, and, dying unmarried, left no son. The distant kinsman who succeeded died also without a son, and the title for a while was dormant pending a dispute between three claimants. Until this time the family surname had been Ker alone, being the ancient family of the Kers of Cessford; it now became Innes-Ker, as it remains—for the settlement of this three-cornered dispute awarded the title to Sir James Innes, as heir by right of a maternal ancestress. It is a very pretty little bit of characteristic history that Duncan Forbes, the historian, records in reference to this succession of James Innes as fifth duke that "his pedigree of thirty descents proceeds regularly from 1153, and that in all their long line the inheritance never went to a woman, that none of them ever married an ill wife, and that no one ever suffered for their debts."

Americans returning from Europe complain that invitations to the Italian court under the present king, Victor Emmanuel, are a good deal more difficult to obtain, and are more sparingly distributed than was the case when Humbert occupied the throne of united Italy in the Quirinal at Rome. The foreign envoys are required nowadays to personally vouch for the social standing of those of their countrymen who are admitted into the presence of the king. It is well-nigh an impossibility for our Ambassador to vouch for the social standing of every American tourist who happens to be "doing" Rome and takes it into his head to go and "call" on the king.

In the Dominion of Canada there is a sentiment growing more or less lately favoring the appointment of a Canadian to the exalted post of Governor-General. The country has always been ruled by some member of the nobility sent out from England by the Crown. It is possible, therefore, if the Crown looks with favor on the petitions, that some day a man born in the United States may become Governor-General of Canada. There is nothing but the sentiment of the people to prevent this. There is no native-born clause, as is the case with the Presidency of the United States. One who becomes a British subject by naturalization is just as good a Britisher as one born under the British flag.

Disguised as a Tramp.

That a man moving amongst the respectable classes should disguise himself as a beggar, and go in search of adventure, is not a new idea. A young man with a taste for such experiments, however, introduced a novel feature, when masquerading as a tramp, by visiting, amongst others, some of his friends.

He had a splendid opportunity of testing their benevolence, for none of them recognized him with his seedy garments and general air of wretchedness.

His pilgrimage lasted five days, and during that period (he started in an appropriate state of pennilessness) he begged or earned just about sufficient to live in a rough fashion.

He received innumerable insults (many from unsuspecting acquaintances), and only one kind word (from a stranger). Even when he entered a shop or lodging-house with money to pay for his needs his ragged garments procured him much contemptuous treatment, and he learned a severe lesson on the importance of clothes.

Indeed, his cynical conclusion is that a man who seeks charity should, before all things, be well dressed!

A Happy Family.

A so-called "happy family" P. T. Barnum used to exhibit consisted of a lion, a tiger, a bear, a wolf, and a lamb, all penned together in one cage. "Remarkable!" a visitor said to Mr. Barnum; "remarkable, impressive, instructive! And how long have these animals dwelt together in this way?" "Seven months," Barnum answered, "but the lamb has occasionally to be renewed."

VAST PETIRFIED FORESTS.

ANCIENT VOLCANIC UPHEAVALS IN ARIZONA DISCLOSE HUGE STONE LOGS.

Vari-Hued Adamantine Forms Millions of Years Old—Preserved by the Government Against Spoliation—Natural Wonders.

Once they were a forest of stately pines grown to a height far beyond that attained by the trees of today. Ages passed, and through some unexplainable act of nature they were uprooted, prostrated to the ground, probably buried beneath the earth by volcanic ashes and the snows of many winters. Next came the waters of floods, leaving over the prone giants an inland sea, and all traces of the green forest were swept away. Vast periods of time passed; the seas vanished; volcanoes sent their ashes high in the air, and the explosions from the interior of the earth swept upward the debris, among which were the wrecks of the pines. Following this period the waters hurried toward lower levels, gnawing the masses and endeavoring to eat into the very cell structure of the logs. Erosion was at work, and after centuries, through the probable action of acids and alkalies, the logs of the ancient forest are revealed to human eyes.

Preserved For Future Ages.

This is the history of the wonderful petrified forest of Arizona which Congress, at its last session, set aside as a Government reserve. There are in all about 5,000 acres of land in this reserve, land valueless for commercial or agricultural pursuits, but the hand of nature has created of this vast expanse a garden of monuments to the vegetation of long ago, forming an attraction for people from all parts of the world.

Trunks of trees, some a hundred feet long, and huge logs, lie in a confusion in the same position as when nature, in the resurrection of the ancient forest, broke out in explosion due to the eruption of volcanic craters. In every direction are to be seen pieces of petrified wood, some only as large as a toy marble; others in blocks and logs from eight to ten feet in diameter; others are buried partly beneath the shale, and occasionally there projects from the side, near the top of the mesa, the end of a huge log.

These mesas are in themselves wonderful structures. They are composed of shale, clay and sandstone of many colors, and the ravages of storm and wind have eroded their sides so that here and there they stand out like the playthings of a pre-historic giant child. By pondering upon this sight a faint idea is given of the countless number of years that have rolled by since this erosive process commenced.

While there are to be found various localities in Arizona, New Mexico and Utah, where petrified wood occurs in great quantities, yet the region known as the "Petrified Forest of Arizona" is most notable, and is properly classed among the natural wonders of America. In the first place, it is much more ancient than the petrified forests on the Yellowstone National Park, and of certain parts of Wyoming and California, the difference in their antiquity as geologists count being millions of years, and secondly, there is no other petrified forest in which the wood assumes so many varied and wondrous forms and colors. The solidified wood in this mineral state places the logs and blocks among the gems of precious stone. The mineral wood is converted into chalcedony, opals and agates, and many of the pieces closely approach the condition of jaspar and onyx. The degree of hardiness attained by them is such that they make an excellent quality of emery.

Among the color seen are every conceivable shade of black, red, white, yellow, blue-purple and lavender; and each piece has every natural appearance of wood, though all are as hard as steel. Here and there sections show signs of decay arrested by the peculiar progress which converted the wood into mineral. The traveler sees small chips upon the ground, and on picking them up, finds them as heavy as so much lead and as dense as flint. The Government, while allowing visitors to carry off little pieces of this character, prohibits the removal of any large blocks.

PETRIFIED SENTINEL OF THE MESA.

Huge Stone Log Bridge.

But after all, the climax of all this scenic beauty is the "Natural Bridge," consisting of a great petrified trunk lying across a canyon 20 feet deep, and forming a natural foot-bridge on which men may easily cross. At the point where the bridge crosses, the canyon is about 30 feet wide, but the trunk lies diagonally, and measures 44 feet between the points at which it rests on the sides of the canyon. The total length of the tree exposed is 111 feet, and measures where it crosses the center of the canyon, 10 feet in circumference.

In the past few years the log has begun to show signs of yielding to that peculiar inclination of all petrified trees to crack up into immense pieces; in fact, in several places traverse cracks have already appeared. The Government, in order to preserve this natural curiosity, has caused two stone abutments to be erected beneath it, making of it a bridge of three spans, in the hopes of preserving it for many years to come.

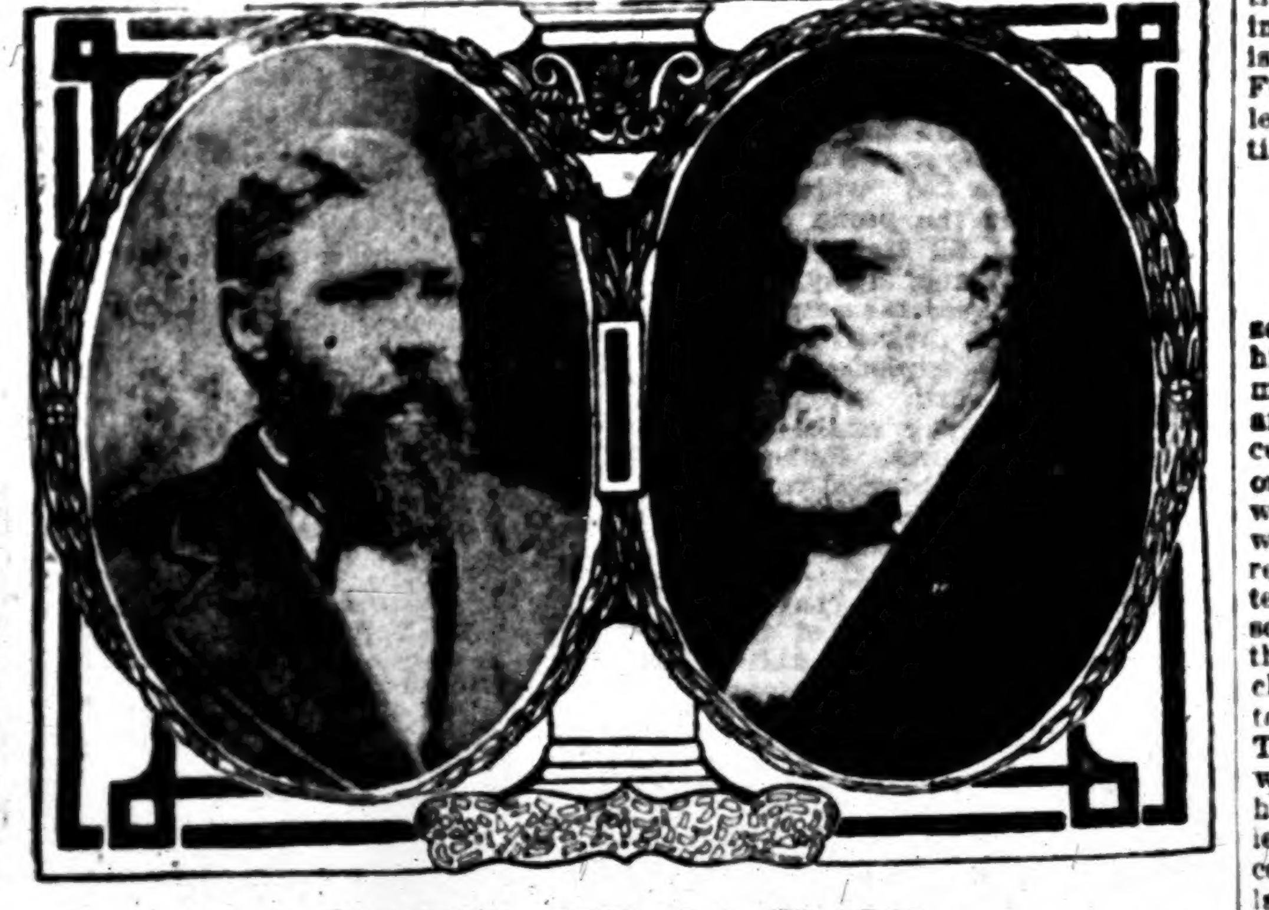
RETURN OF SPEAKER KIEFER

WAS CZAR OF THE HOUSE WHEN PRESENT SPEAKER "JOE" CANNON WAS MEMBER

Is One of the Three National Speakers Who Have Been Returned to Congress After a Long Laspe of Years.

The return of General J. Warren Kiefer to Congress after an absence of 22 years is of more than passing interest for the reason that he was Speaker of the House which was organized in 1881. It was a famous Congress and Kiefer's pathway was not one of roses. He became involved in a controversy with H. V. Boynton, then dean of the Washington correspondents, and the bitter attacks of Boynton had much to do with Kiefer's retirement from public life although he was but 48 when he finished his fourth term in the House. Since then he has not been idle but has been prominent in civil and military life. He returns to Congress as did Nathaniel P. Banks and Galusha A. Grow. They had been Speakers many years before and their return was notable. Each, like Keifer, lived for years without prominence in politics but both were older when they came back. General Kiefer is now 68 but remarkably hale and hearty. He was always a conspicuous man and is the more so now because of his white hair and beard which were tawny brown in the days of his speakership. He clings to the garb of the old time statesman and wears at all times an old fashioned swallow tailed coat cut much like the dress coats of to-day. General Kiefer served four terms in Congress, coming to Washington first for the special session of 1877. He was chosen Speaker of the 47th Congress, Dec. 5th, 1881, serving but the one term. Last year he was nominated for Congress and had no very hard time in getting the honor. The district is strongly republican and his majority was the largest ever given any candidate.



J. WARREN KIEFER AT 48 AND AT 70.

General Kiefer has a great war record. As a fighter and leader he had few equals in the Union army. He was practicing law when the first alarm of war was sounded in 1861 and he at once volunteered as a private. Before going to the front he was commissioned major and was promoted very rapidly, retiring in 1865 as brevet major-general and as a brigadier in active service. At the battle of the wilderness in 1864 he was severely wounded but would not give up. He stayed at it until Lee surrendered. A born soldier he could not resist the call to arms when the war with Spain came on, and was made a major-general of volunteers. He commanded a brigade under Sheridan in the Virginia battles that led up to Appomattox. At the battle of Sailor's Creek, General Kiefer had an experience out of the ordinary. Going alone at dusk to observe the lines of the enemy he found himself suddenly surrounded by a large body of confederates. They could not distinguish his Federal uniform in the dark and he was equal to the occasion. Wheeling his horse about he cried out in tones of command "Attention, men, right about face, march." Thinking it was one of their own officers the confederates followed him into the Union camp where to their disgust they found themselves prisoners.

He returns to congress vigorous and eager for active participation in the councils of the nation. As an ex-Speaker he has been given a chairmanship and was also allowed the privilege of choosing his old seat without going into the lottery scramble. Speaker Cannon was in Congress during general Kiefer's term as Speaker and they were warm friends. General Kiefer represents one of the best districts in Ohi containing big manufacturing establishments. He has found few of his old colleagues in the House. Many are dead and many more long ago retired to private life. Cannon and Bingham, Hitt and Payne, also Ketcham of New York, are about all who are now in the House who were with Kiefer in the stirring days of his speakership.

Very Trying.

A man who usually grumbled at everything and on every occasion, was attacked by rheumatism. He was carefully nursed by his wife, who was very devoted to him, in spite of his fault-finding disposition. Sometimes the sight of his suffering caused her to burst into tears as she sat at his bedside.

One day a friend of the invalid came in, and asked him sympathetically how he was getting on.

"Badly, badly!" he exclaimed; "and it's all my wife's fault."

"Yes. The doctor told me that damp places were bad for me; and there my wife sits and cries just to make the air in the room moist."

The highest mountain in Africa is in Uganda. On this mountain there are one hundred square miles of snow and ice directly under the equator.

NO INSURANCE LEGISLATION.

Congressmen Will Talk, But Won't Pass Bill.

Legislative experts at Washington do not look for the passage of an insurance law during this session of Congress. Statesmen of all sorts and conditions will talk much about it. There will be a great deal of discussion on the floors of both houses. Senators and Representatives alike will vie with each other in denunciation of the methods of the insurance magnates as exposed in the legislative investigation which occurred in New York. Already divers and sundry lawmakers at both ends of the Capitol have submitted remarks that have stirred their constituents to increased admiration of the eloquence and alertness of the men whom they have had the wisdom and foresight to send to Congress. But in the end nothing will be done—that is, nothing except a heap of talk.

No Constitutional Provision.

The reason of this is that the Judiciary Committees, both of the Senate and House, thus early have about concluded that the Constitution of the United States does not provide for the kind of legislation which is recommended in the President's message, and is being advocated by Senator Dryden, of New Jersey, president of one of the big life insurance companies, as well as by other financial magnates who, like Senator Dryden, are directly interested in insurance and are presumed, therefore, to know better than anybody else what the exigencies of the situation demand.

Senator Dryden, who studied law in Yale, but who has not practiced much in the courts, is of the opinion that there is nothing in the Constitution, either expressed or implied, which Congress should regard as an inhibition in this matter. But other members of the Senate who have practiced law for years declare that in this the New Jersey statesman is in error. It is assumed that, generally speaking, the picked lawyers of both branches of Congress compose the Committee on Judiciary in each house, and it can be positively stated that as the case now stands the majority of the members of both committees are opposed to the general proposition.

It is, of course, possible that a bill may be framed bringing the subject within the united powers of the Constitution, but none of the measures thus far presented meets the objections of most of the experts in Congress who have been consulted on the matter. There is a considerable element in the House insisting that the great Chief Justice Marshall blazed the way for just such an emergency as this in his famous decision defining in effect interstate commerce as intercourse between States, to say nothing of the applicability to this case of another all-embracing decision of his concerning the implied powers of the Constitution.

Not Satisfactory to Lawyers.

But broad as these doctrines are, they obviously are not satisfactory to the majority of the lawyers who are members of the two committees on the judiciary.

As usual, the Senate has gone more directly at the subject than has the House. At the opening of the session Senator Culberson, of Texas, introduced a resolution calling upon Congress to investigate the matter thoroughly, with the view of determining the disputed point as to the authority of the lawmaking body to deal with the subject as recommended by President Roosevelt. This resolution was referred to the Judiciary Committee. Two or three days before Congress adjourned for the holiday recess the Senate committee briefly considered the proposition presented by Mr. Culberson, and referred his resolution to a sub-committee with instructions to report in extenso as soon as practicable after the holiday recess.

The members of this sub-committee, Messrs. Clark, Spooner, Knox, Bacon, and Culberson, are of opinion that there is no warrant in the Constitution for Congress to assert over insurance the power which the President, Senator Dryden, and apparently all of the insurance magnates appear to think is inherent in the legislative department.

Meanwhile, a great deal of wire-pulling is going on in favor of the general proposition. It cannot be asserted that any one of the numerous bills thus far presented has the approval either of President Roosevelt or Senator Dryden, though it is presumed that a measure embodying their exact views will be submitted within the next few weeks. It is known that so anxious are the insurance people for some form of legislation taking away from the States the supervision of insurance companies that they are prepared to spend unlimited money in the work of education, but thus far they have not been able to make much headway.

Like all campaigns of education to which Washington has become accustomed, it is expected that the usual amount of speculation as to the outcome will be indulged, but this will not effect the judgment or the conduct of those members of Congress who have the final decision of the question through their influence with the Judiciary Committees.

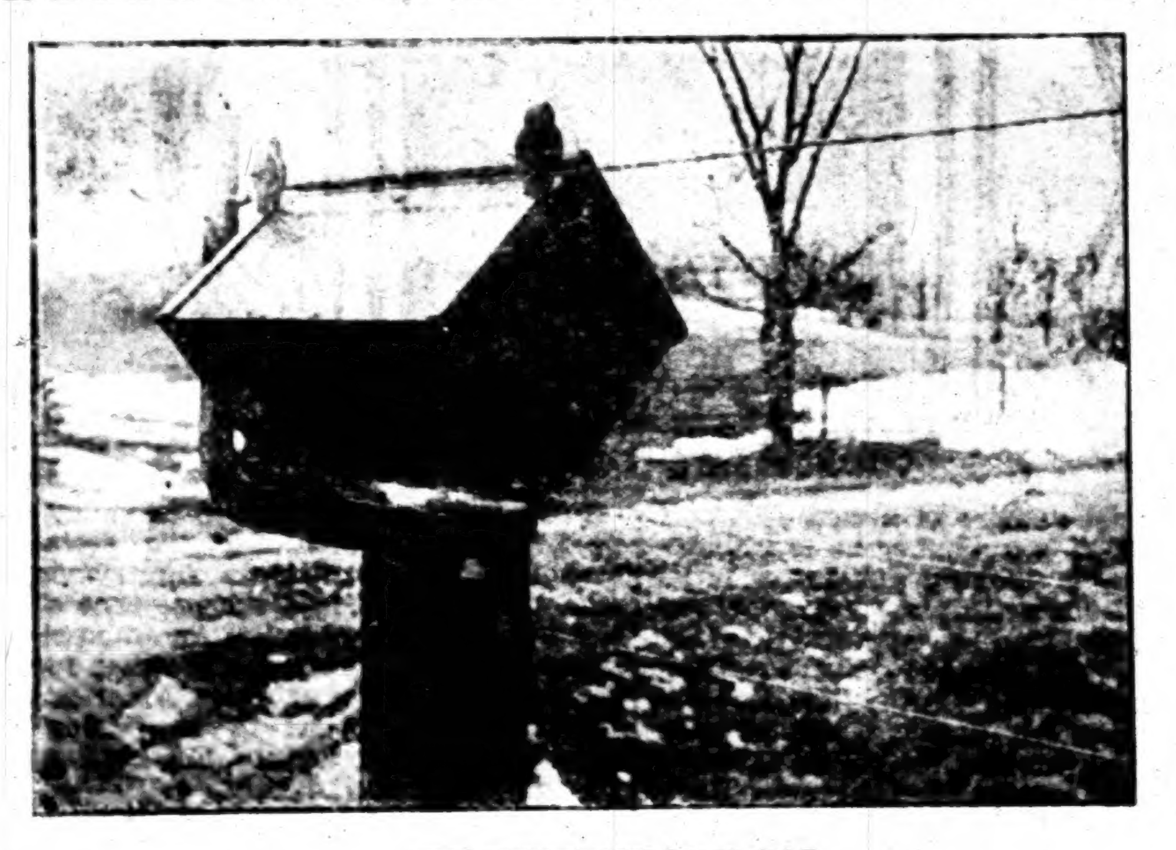
States Insist on Rights.

A factor of no inconsiderable weight in the matter is the insistence of nearly all the State governments upon their rights in the premises, and as Congress does not seem to care to lend further aid at this juncture to the centralization movement which is rapidly becoming an acute issue in State politics, it is regarded as altogether likely that the Federalization of insurance will at least be held in abeyance for some time yet.

Aerial Mail Box.

In Delaware, Ohio, an ingenious citizen by the name of Taggart lives on a high hill some little distance off the main road. The hill is of loose gravel and at its foot is a small creek, innocent looking and easily forded in ordinary weather, but swelling rapidly with heavy rains. The rural carrier, whose route extended to Mr. Taggart's residence, found the frequent high water and the rough, hilly road such a source of delay and inconvenience that the Department ordered the route changed and Mr. Taggart was directed to place his box on the main road. Mr. Taggart protested, declaring that he would not walk that distance. Then his inventive brain conceived the trolley or aerial mail box. At a convenient corner of his porch he placed a windlass, with a small steel cable extending down to the box-post on the main road, around a deeply-grooved wheel on the post, and back to the porch. As shown, the box is connected in this cable, forming the link for the broken ends. The box is fitted with top wheels, which run on a fixed cable, stretched tight from the porch to the post.

When the mail carrier reaches the box-post (which is visible from the porch), he puts in the mail and raises a signal. Some one at the house takes the handle of the windlass and turns it rapidly, and the box, with its burden of mail, comes sailing up the wire. The mail is then removed and the box coasts back to its post. The distance of one hundred yards is covered in about ten seconds, which is as fast as a good sprinter can cover the distance. Multiplying gears in the windlass increase the speed. So far as is known, Mr. Taggart is the first to apply this idea to a rural mail-box.



THE INGENIOUS MAIL BOX.

Would Spoil His Pleasure.

A certain Irishwoman, on her deathbed, called her husband to her side. "Patrick," she said, "I've a last rayquist to make of ye." "I couldn't rayfuse ye anything, Mary, darlint," responded the sorrowing husband. "Patrick," said Mary, solemnly, "I want ye sh'ud lave mother ride in the carriage beside ye to me funeril." "'Tis too much ye're askin' of me, Mary!" cried Pat, springing to his feet in desperation. Mary, however, was determined on this point, and Pat finally yielded to her "last rayquist." "I'll lave her ride be me side," he promised, weeping bitterly, "but mark ye, Mary, darlint, 'twill shpoil the day for me entoirely, that it will!"

The English authorities are so relentless toward the adulteration of food and drugs that recently a soda-water manufacturer was fined for putting too small a proportion of carbonate of soda in the water.

CHARACTER OF AARON BURR

Defender of His Fame Was Willing but Didn't Know Tricks of Oratory.

The first secret society with which I was ever affiliated was called the "Omega," which was two-thirds literary and one-third social, said an old college man, who has since won distinction as a national orator and campaign speaker. In our rival society, the "Alpha Rho," this order of things was reversed and we prided ourselves greatly on the fact that our "feast of reason" outranked the "flow of soul." Ours was a good deal of a debating society, and though I early gained some reputation as a speaker, I was either too bashful or too ignorant to take part in any of the debates.

One of my intimate chums was named Grant, who excelled in that line and although much younger than the average member, never hesitated to cross swords with the older ones and was not infrequently the victor.

He was very anxious that I should learn to debate, and frequently urged me to at least make a commencement, arguing that after I had gotten over my embarrassment, I would enjoy the fun and excitement.

The subject of debate one evening was to be, "Was the influence of Aaron Burr, upon the time in which he lived, good or bad?" Grant knew that I was quite an admirer of Burr, had read quite extensively about him, both in history and fiction, and said to me that this would be an excellent opportunity for me to make my debut.

Grant himself was to answer one of the oldest and best debaters and I could answer the one who followed him. He coached me very thoroughly, told me to listen carefully to what the opponents urged against Burr, to cite my proofs, showing he was neither a drunkard nor a libertine, as they would assert, and then show what a debt Washington and the country owed him for his military skill and ability during the Revolution. He said I must not allow myself to become flurried or excited, that I could occasionally refer to my notes and in fact talk and act just as if I were simply arguing with one or two of my schoolmates.

During the day I thought much of the important part I was to play in the coming drama, and there seemed to me no reason why I should not score a complete success. But as the hour of the meeting drew nearer the success seemed to grow more problematical and by the time the debate opened, my thoughts were completely topsy-turvy and I could hardly remember whether Burr was an Italian or a Chinaman.

The man who opened the debate showed plainly that my hero was everything that was vile and wicked and should have been tried and convicted as a traitor, and I found myself wondering how Grant could possibly answer all these terrible charges. But his defense was splendid. He spoke in his usual fiery manner and all my former admiration for Burr returned and I became eager to help defend him.

The debater who I was to answer was a slow, earnest speaking fellow, not very bright, but accustomed to argument and fond of statistics, and even before he had finished I had again veered around and found I was losing my faith in my side of the question.

When my name was called, I rose as if in a dream, and for about, I presumed, ten minutes, talked the veriest lot of nonsense that was ever heard in a debating club. If I looked at my notes I found that I had said everything about the subject that I could think of, and if I tried to extemporize, I repeated the former things over and over. The ordeal was finally passed and as I took my seat there was a little perfunctory applause, and then the president promptly decided the case against Burr.

Grant was sitting quietly and looking straight ahead into vacancy and I noticed he had made no demonstration in my favor. Leaning toward him, I timidly touched him on the shoulder and said, "Well, old fellow, did I make a complete failure" "No," he answered slowly, "You did pretty well for a first attempt, but the devil himself couldn't have made out on which side you were debating."

SHORT STORY.

BY D'ERF MAILLIW

[illegible] Senator and his fellow judges [illegible] stories in the great Collier's [illegible] contest of last year until [illegible] eyes were almost blind, their [illegible] almost too weary for consecutive thought and their ideas almost chaotic from the long continued [illegible] to allow an unbiased decision, [illegible] the distinguished statesman took from the table the last of many thousands of manuscripts, lighted a fresh Havana, and [illegible] himself wearily in the depths [illegible] big arm chair.

[illegible] sigh of satisfaction was still pronounced, when, as he tore the envelope, he found but a few [illegible] of typewritten matter, scarcely [illegible] words in all, and his [illegible] Heaven!" was re-echoed by his [illegible] as they also realized that [illegible] half hour would complete their [illegible] of self imposed labor.

[illegible] had been silence in the room [illegible] several minutes, while the others [illegible] thinking of the jumble of ideas [illegible] would for months occupy their [illegible] where love and war, humor and [illegible] had created a heterogeneous [illegible]

[illegible] of the stories submitted had [illegible] a very high order of merit—[illegible] of the very highest—and final [illegible] would, they realized, tax to [illegible] utmost their ability to select. [illegible] had been witty and brilliant, [illegible] able but verbose, but many, very [illegible] had proven tedious and trashy. [illegible] they each and all agreed they [illegible] never again care to read even [illegible] headlines of any "Short Story."

"[illegible]!" exclaimed the Senator, half [illegible], half profanely, "and so this [illegible] the tragic end of our dear chum [illegible] '71, one of the best and bravest [illegible] who ever lived."

"[illegible] the honor of old Harvard, gentlemen," bowing gravely to his associates, "let me read aloud this last of [illegible] short stories."

[illegible] sauntered into Station 17 of the [illegible] Department, late one stormy afternoon in December, a small, grayish, rather weazened specimen of humanity, looking as though he had made the acquaintance of a square [illegible] for many days. A close observer, however, would have noticed that his [illegible] were very bright and keen, his muscles well knit, his gait springy, [illegible] would, perhaps, have decided that [illegible] physique did not require a very [illegible] amount of sustenance and that [illegible] was ignorant of the pangs of dyspepsia.

[illegible] speaking to no one in particular, he [illegible] with a peculiar drawl:

"[illegible] sometimes think I would enjoy a [illegible] of this sort myself. It looks comfortable here."

"Seventeen" was known as the crack company of the force. Its members [illegible] all athletes and it had to its [illegible] an unparalleled record of brilliant and impossible rescues.

[illegible] these words of the old man, grim [illegible] broke over the faces of the half [illegible] men present. A young fireman, [illegible] of the most powerful and athletic [illegible] the entire department, replied:

"Why, grandpap, we have to do [illegible] here when the bell rings. Children aren't allowed on the force."

"[illegible] know they are not, sonny, but [illegible] all, I judge that age isn't the [illegible] thing that counts in this game."

"I'll tell you, grandpap," the young [illegible] added with a wink to his companions, "if you can follow me in a [illegible] little exercises we have here morning and night, I'll resign and recommend you for my place."

"Go ahead, sonny, your friends can [illegible] as judge and umpire."

The fireman walked over to the [illegible] side of the room, took up the oak [illegible] of a stone breaker, grasped it [illegible] in both hands, and with a sudden wrench, broke it squarely through [illegible] middle. Throwing the two pieces [illegible] the floor, he remarked laconically, [illegible] in a rather conceited tone,

"[illegible] there's another handle in the corner [illegible] I got this one, but I reckon you [illegible] care for it."

"No, perhaps this one will answer," [illegible] the old man, taking up the two short pieces and looking them over [illegible] curiously. With a quick jerk [illegible] broke one of the halves and then [illegible] other, and throwing all the pieces [illegible] the floor drawled out:

"Should call that more of a trick [illegible] a trial of muscle."

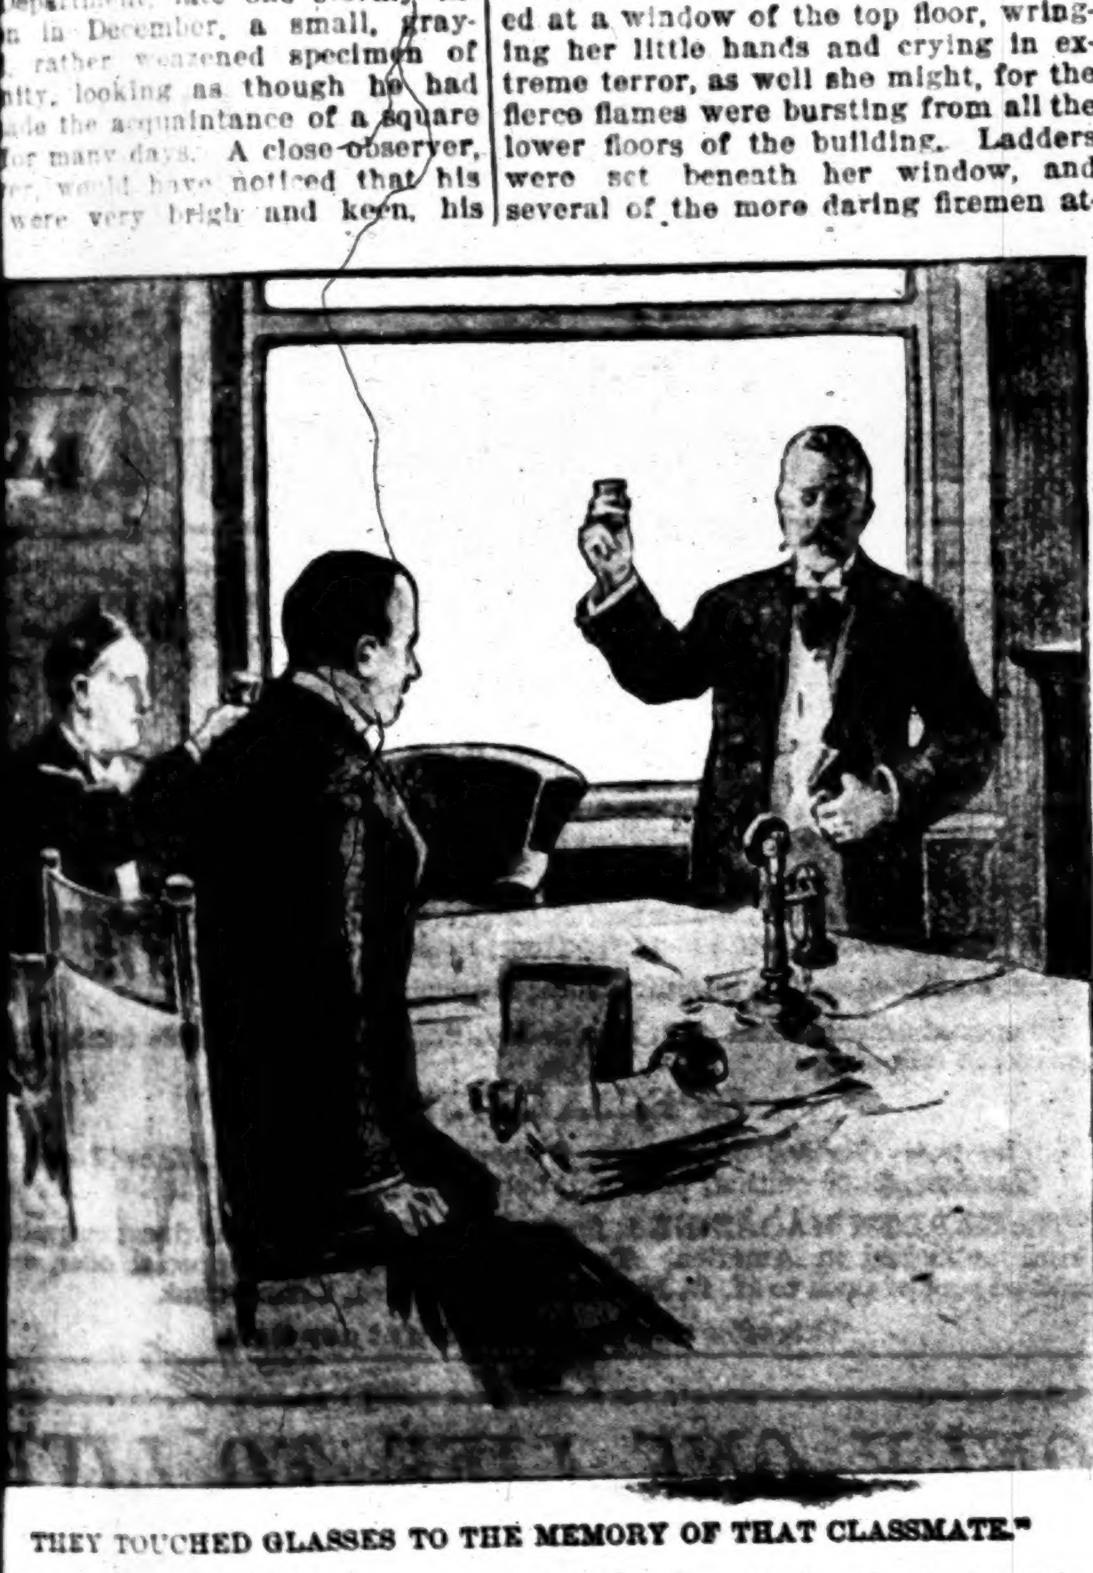
A murmur of astonishment ran round the room, and his young contestant showed no little chagrin, for this had been his favorite exhibition, which none of his associates had been able to accomplish.

The old fellow continued unconcernedly: "Now if it were a trial of strength, perhaps some of you younger fellows could tire the old man out." Then springing like a cat, he caught with his right hand one of the rounds of a ladder by which the men climbed to the second story, and pulled himself up with a single arm. Lowering himself, he repeated this "chinning" operation several times with great rapidity, first with one arm and then the other. Dropping to the floor he strolled over to a pair of 100 pound iron dumb-bells and began handling the heavy weights as if they were hollow or made of wood, passing the bells from hand to hand, poising them on high without a tremor, and finally laying them down without even the noticeable quickening of his breath.

The men looked sharply at one another. Not the best of them could give such an exhibition of strength. The sergeant was just growling, "Old man, who might you be, anyway?" when the alarm gong sounded, the firemen sprang to their places and the little old athlete was temporarily forgotten. A close observer, however, might have noted him dart out of the door and vanish around the corner with the speed of a trained runner.

The fire was in a lately finished apartment house and was well under way when the engines arrived. Ladders were quickly placed against the building, and the brave firemen made many trips, up and down, rescuing the frightened occupants. Finally all the inmates appeared to be saved and efforts were directed toward extinguishing the fire or preventing its spread.

Suddenly, everyone was startled by the wild screams of a child, and a little girl, of not more than ten years, whose scanty apparel gave evidence that she had but just awakened, appeared at a window of the top floor, wringing her little hands and crying in extreme terror, as well she might, for the fierce flames were bursting from all the lower floors of the building. Ladders were set beneath her window, and several of the more daring firemen attempted to ascend only to be driven back with scorched hair and blistered hands.



"THEY TOUCHED GLASSES TO THE MEMORY OF THAT CLASSMATE."

A cry from the crowd to the right attracted the attention of firemen and spectators, and all held their breath, as a little old man was seen, climbing, with the agility of a cat, the galvanized waterspout on the corner of the building. Reaching the top and grasping the cornice, he rapidly worked himself along until he was directly over the open window. He must have had a wonderfully correct eye, for as he seemed to expect, his left foot reached just to the top of the scaling ladder below him. Placing his foot firmly upon the slight support, he released first one hand and then the other, sliding them along the rough brick side of the building, as if grasping an imaginary rope. Cautiously lowering himself to a stooping position, he suddenly threw himself inside the open window, as the ladder, burned near the middle, fell to the ground with a crash. With scarce a moment's loss of time he reappeared and piled several thick books upon the window sill. Then with the child strapped tightly upon his back, he balanced carefully upon these, reached up and again grasped the cornice. The firemen at once realized what a desperate plan he was about to attempt and quickly placed another ladder just around the corner of the building, not yet reached by the flames. Slowly and carefully the old man, with his precious burden clinging to his shoulders, worked his way along the insecure gutter, his progress at times painfully retarded and the distance seemed great. Would he beat the flames in the race? Would he be able to hold out, encumbered as he was? The great crowd below held its breath. Finally he clutched the projection at the corner and swung his feet upon the rounds of the ladder. Long tongues of fire leaped from the room he had so lately occupied and seemed to be striking at the rescuer and the rescued, in vicious though impotent fury, but strong and willing hands met and relieved the old man of his burden and aided his evidently failing strength down the steep incline.

But the pitcher had been to the well once too often and even while the cheers and words of encouragement were sounding in his ears, the lifeblood gushed from his mouth, and sinking heavily to the ground murmured, "Hold tight, little one," and the brave old heart suddenly ceased its busy work.

"He's dead, the dear old fellow, saving a young life of which he had never heard," whispered one to the other, and a young minister, who, from the first, had watched the scene with an intense interest, bent over the body, and detaching a Greek letter badge from the vest, read to the sympathizing crowd, "J. R. H., Harvard, '71," adding reverently as he removed his tall hat:

"Greater love hath no man than this."

To their credit, there were real tears in the eyes of these big, strong men of the world, as in silence they touched glasses with the Senator to the memory of that classmate, whose soul was still marching on, and whose heroic death had added another star to old Harvard's glory.

CRUSADE AGAINST VICE.

The Great Work of Anthony Comstock has Brought Splendid Results.

Few of those who have read of the accomplishments of Anthony Comstock in his crusades against vice, which have made his name known in every section of the United States, have any idea of the history of the man whose single-handed exertions have been largely responsible for the suppression of obscene literature and photographs. He has been painted as a crank of the weirdest sort, a notoriety seeker, a grafter using a cloak of morality to enrich himself, and everything else wild and dishonest, but he is none of these and to-day his position is stronger and his influence more potent than ever before.

His life has been threatened scores of times by desperate criminals whom he has deprived of their unlawful gains and sent to the penitentiary. Many attempts have been made to stab, shoot and poison him; ground glass has been scattered in his food; infernal machines have been sent him through the mails and by express; he has been accused of unprintable depravity; his honesty has been sneered at and his every motive impugned, but he has gone unscathed amid physical perils and his reputation has escaped the cleverly planned pitfalls designed to ruin him in the eyes of the people and dissipate the enormous power for good which he has built up by almost a lifetime of devotion to a high duty.

Guardian of Youthful Morals.

Mr. Comstock is best known for his work in the prosecution of those who make it a business to sell indecent books, pamphlets and pictures to the young, but as a matter of fact he is equally active in crushing out other forms of vice, not only in New York, but in the country at large. He travels a great deal from city to city and has been a prominent figure in reform crusades in various sections of the country, and has frequently produced important results while others supposed to be helping him were engaged in talking it over.

In a recent interview Mr. Comstock tells for the first time the history of his life and how he abandoned a promising business career, in which he might have made a comfortable fortune, to pursue a vocation which has never netted him more than a living and has left him, in declining years, still with a mortgage of $10,000 on his house at Summit, N. J.

He is sixty-one years of age and was born in Connecticut. His brother Samuel was killed at the battle of Gettysburg and young Anthony took his place until the end of the war. Returning to his native State he entered a grocery store in New Haven, but later went to Tennessee, where he purchased supplies for the Lookout Mountain Institute. His health failed and he went to New York, landing there with $3.45 in his pocket. He got a job at $12 per week, but resigned it to take one at $5 because he thought the new one offered better opportunities for advancement. While eking out an existence on this salary he found that the young men in the store were readers of stories of the vilest sort, and he made his first raid. He learned that a bookseller in a shop a few doors away was selling the books. Young Comstock took a policeman to the place and had the proprietor arrested and in the case involved resurrected what was a dead letter law. He won out.

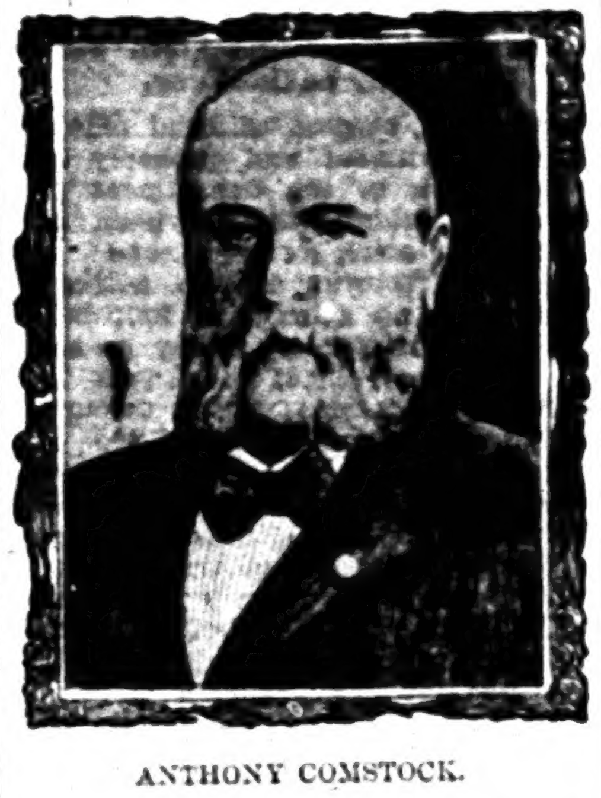
Progressing rapidly in the commercial world, the young man was soon making $1,500 a year commissions as a salesman, but his abhorrence of vice was in nowise abated. He found a man named Simpson trading in obscene literature and told a policeman his troubles. Instead of arresting the man the policeman warned him to skip out, and that was the pivot on which the life of the young reformer turned. He had the policeman dismissed for the bit of treachery and the papers began to take notice. They asked why he did not go into Nassau street and proceed against the open violators of the law there. Mr. Comstock answered the question by going. On all sides illegal publications were openly for sale, and on March 2, 1872, when he was but twenty-eight years old, he caused the arrest of seven men. The fruits of this were the suppression of 169 different books, the raiding of three publishing houses, the confiscation of $30,000 worth of plates and engravings from one man in Brooklyn, the seizing of $16,000 worth of plates and books from a man in Manhattan, together with six tons of stereotyped plates from his printer, and the destruction of $10,000 worth of bound books belonging to still another man. All of this was accomplished by Mr. Comstock without any assistance whatever from organization or committee.

He Found a Good Angel.

He had started to buy a home and had paid $500 down on it, but giving a mortgage for the rest, he used all he could save from his salary to carry on his crusade. He was a firm believer in prayer and he believed that it was in answer to his supplications that Morris K. Jesup, the philantropist, took him up at that time. Mr. Jesup gave him $500 to help him in the fight and $150 to reimburse him for his expenditures already made.

Since that time Mr. Jesup has taken a deep interest in the Comstock crusades and has given his money freely. A meeting was held at Mr. Jesup's house in 1873 by prominent citizens, the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice was formed and Mr. Comstock was engaged as its agent at a regular salary.

A determined attack on the publishers and vendors of obscene literature and pictures was at once begun, and at a fitting time, for never had there been so many and such brazen violations of the laws of the land and decency as at that time. Advertisements were boldly printed in the papers and thousands of circulars were distributed by the dealers, many of the circulars being placed in the hands of children as they left school. An ineffective law was passed in 1872 against the use of the mails for immoral purposes, but it accomplished nothing, and Mr. Comstock endeavored to have a more stringent bill put through. Mr. Jesup defrayed his expenses to Washington and Senator Buckingham, of Connecticut, introduced the measure in the Senate and Clinton L. Merriam in the House. Intense opposition was met from a powerful lobby of publishers, but the bill got through by a small margin, and with the aid of Speaker James G. Blaine, was among the last taken up and passed on the night of the final day of the session of 1873.



ANTHONY COMSTOCK.

He Refused the Salary.

After the law went into effect Senator Buckingham asked Mr. Comstock to take a position as postoffice inspector to see that it was enforced. He accepted the position, but declined the salary, on the ground that he might be placed under obligations to politicians, and on March 5th, 1873, was made a special agent of the department, which commission has been renewed each year since then.

So severe was the blow dealt the publishers of the profitable "sub rosa" literature that desperate efforts were made to have the law repealed, and in 1887 a petition containing 70,000 names and headed by Robert G. Ingersoll, backed by unlimited money and the most adroit lobbyists, was presented to Congress asking that the restrictions be removed. Mr. Comstock appeared alone before the House committee which had the repealing measure and in the face of severe and brutal condemnation was successful in preventing favorable action. As part of the campaign against him a book entitled "The Life and Crimes of Anthony Comstock" was published, and seventeen thousand copies distributed. It was stated that he himself was a dealer in the very things against which he waged war, and that he had been arrested by five district attorneys, but he kept on his way, and never once let up in the struggle with evil.

Mr. Comstock is still a postoffice agent without pay. He is allowed five cents per mile mileage and $1.50 per day witness fees while attending courts as a witness, but these payments he turns into the treasury of the society for which he is agent. In this way he has turned over more than $21,000 which he might have kept.

The work which Anthony Comstock has accomplished and is doing to-day is of incalculable benefit to the moral fibre of the maturing citizenship of the Republic. The man is one of God's appointed.

It is said that Admiral Lord Charles Beresford of the British navy was the first European to see the face of the Mikado of Japan. That was in 1868.

A MODEL FARM

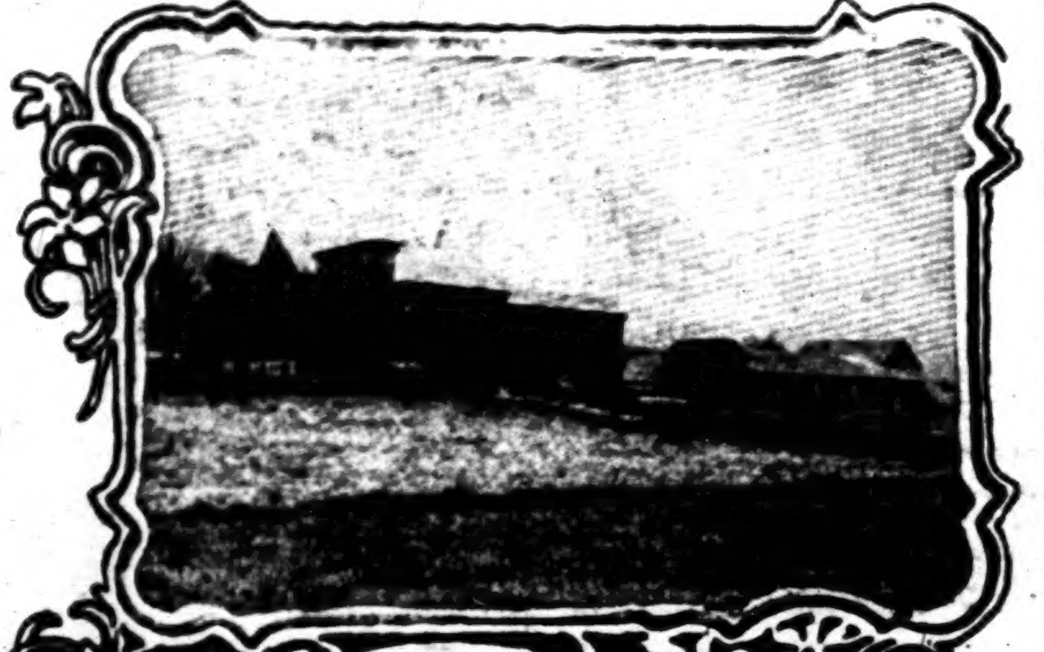
How a Clergyman Lifted a Mortgage on a Pennsylvania Farm

GUY ELLIOTT MITCHELL.

There is a farm in southeastern ennsylvania which the Department ! Agriculture considers a model twen-eth century farm. It consists of fif-en acres, thirteen of which are in iltivation, the remaining two acres ing occupied by buildings, yard, etc. his land came into the possession of e present owner—a minister of the ospel—in 1881 with a mortgage of ,200 upon it.

Improving the Soil.

The soil of the farm is a reddish mewhat gravelly clay. So run down as it in 1881 that it did not support e two cows and one horse kept upon . Last year it raised all the rough-ge for thirty head of stock, seventeen which are cows in milk. It has en brought up to its present remark-le state of fertility solely by the use stable manure applied directly from e barn. The system of handling this anure is such that none is lost, either quid or solid. No commercial fertil-ers have ever been used and no ma-ure has been hauled from the city. his is a practice greatly differing om that in vogue on the majority of e farms of this country, where the wner seeing a dollar in sight for a ad of manure readily sells it to a ighbor rather than apply it to his vn soil, where its value might be ree or four times as great. On the odel farm in Pennsylvania most of e crops are fed to the stock and thus rgely return to the land in manure.



Farm Buildings and Silos.

Applying Manure to the Land.

Upon assuming management of the rm the owner with no previous ex-rience in farming began to read hat agricultural literature was avail-le. One of the first books secured by m was Quincy's little treatise on the iling of cattle, written in 1859. Soil-g consists in cutting and giving een feed in summer instead of allow-g the animals to run on pasture. his system adopted by the farm vner did not prove satisfactory the st year because no other feed was ed and the cows did not do well. In dition the manure was difficult to indle and it was not easy to keep the rn clean. Before the next season, wever, the new farmer had procured ewart's book on feeding animals and om it learned his first lesson in alanced rations." He also learned feed some dry hay with the soiling ops, thus giving the manure a proper nsistency. Thenceforward the man-ement of the constantly growing rd of cows was a simple matter and e farm began not only to pay a profit it to increase in fertility, so that ithin seven years the entire mort-ge was paid off.

The farm is strictly a dairy farm, e only products regularly sold being ilk and a few head of young cattle ch year. The cows are all registered rseys except one or two picked up at ighboring sales. They are not only re bred but well bred. Male calves, worthy of it are reared for breeding rposes, but none is ever vealed. If male calf is not fit to raise for a eder it is killed at birth. "It esn't pay to feed $18 worth of meal a calf that will sell for $7," said the vner. The young cattle sold from is farm bring on an average $100 iece, and about five are disposed of ch year.

The milk is all sold at 25 cents a gal-n the year round to a State institu-on located two miles distant. The ilk tests high, is perfectly clean and ee from adulteration. There is never y complaint from the buyers; on the her hand, this farmer is considered public benefactor. As soon as the ilk is drawn it is placed in perfectly ean cans standing in cold water some stance from the barn and stirred equently to aerate it and aid the oling. The milk vessels are never lowed to stand around uncleaned, but e washed as soon as the milk is re-oved, first with cold water, then with iling and finally again with cold ater. The amount of milk produced om the seventeen cows is nearly the me at all seasons and averages about enty-six gallons a day. While this eld of approximately 4,800 pounds a ar for each of the seventeen cows pt is not enormous, by any means, is good. The income from the milk oduced is about $2,400 a year. The tlay for concentrated feeding stuffs $625 annually.

Economy in Farm Labor.

One man and a boy do the labor of e farm except in hay harvest and ring the cutting of silage. So systematic is the work that the owner may leave for a week without notice to the laborers, with no interruption to the regular routine. The feeding of the cows, the handling of the milk, keeping the barn clean and disposing the manure, are all worked out under such a system that they require little supervision on the part of the proprietor. There is no pasture on this farm for pastures on such high-priced land are out of the question. There is not even a barn lot, the thirty head of cattle remaining in the stalls the year round. We have been taught that this is not a good practice, for it has been supposed that milch cows need a certain amount of exercise, yet it must be considered that the Danish cows stand in their stalls from November to May and are staked out in the field from May to November, and yet Denmark ranks high in the dairy industry and her cows are healthy.

Balanced Rations a Necessity.

Notwithstanding this extraordinary practice the bill for veterinary services on this Pennsylvania farm during the past six years has been but $1.50, and this was made necessary by an accidental injury to one of the cows. One regular breeder is fifteen years old, but is still vigorous and healthy, giving milk enough to make it profitable to retain her in the herd. Experts in the Department of Agriculture state that they have never seen a thriftier, better kept lot of cows. Balanced rations are fed to them every day in the year, consisting of some succulent material—silage in winter, and rye, timothy and clover, corn or peas and oats in summer. A second portion is made up of dry hay or fodder, which gives some consistency to the manure. The third portion consists of meal products, of which three kinds are used—bran, oil-meal and gluten. Many dairymen would be surprised to learn that every cow on this farm has four ounces of salt daily, mixed with her fodder, fine table salt being invariably used and evenly divided among the three feeds. There are round silos on the farm, each ten feet in diameter and thirty-four feet high. These altogether hold about 100 tons of silage and this quantity of corn silage is produced on four acres, planted on June 22nd. Eleven men, three teams and a traction engine to run the cutter are employed in filling the silos.

The proprietor of this farm has not adopted any systematic rotation of crops, as every foot of land receives an abundance of manure every year or two. There is but little trace of weeds and those that do grow are not of the undesirable kind. Intelligent methods of cultivation enabled the owner last year not only to produce all the roughage required for thirty head of stock but to have left nearly 4,000 pounds of hay, which was sold.

Handling the Manure.

The remarkable yields on this farm are due entirely to the intelligent use of stable manure. Most farmers waste more than half of the value of the manure produced on their farms. On this model farm every particle of the plant food is utilized. The method of handling manure in this case can be used only on farms on which stock is kept in stalls and is therefore not applicable to all styles of stock-farming. Behind each row of cows is a gutter, eighteen inches wide and seven inches deep. These gutters have no outlets. They are thoroughly cleaned daily (the whole barn is disinfected twice a week by a free use of creoline, and the interior is frequently whitewashed). When cleaned, the gutters are sprinkled with ashes or dry dirt to absorb what moisture may be present. During the day a quantity of absorbent, consisting of leaf mold, rotten sod, etc., is placed in them. The manure is lifted from the gutters into a cart backed up to the door and is then taken directly off to the fields and spread over them. In summer it is applied to the land from which the soiling crops are removed; in winter it is spread on the rye and grass fields. No manure is used on newly seeded grass lands.

This is the experience of a pioneer farmer starting in with no previous training, but going to work in a methodical manner to learn what he could from the experience of others. He has applied principles and business methods and has blazed a path into a region of great possibilities. There is no doubt that his experience can be duplicated on other farms, but it depends on the soil and the man who has the management of it. It cannot be done by one who is not a student. A similar system may be developed on any dairy farm that disposes of pasture. Where land is cheaper and the dairyman can afford pastures, the system would be radically different in summer but not in winter. Probably the most important single feature of this Pennsylvania farm aside from the systematic manner in which it is conducted is the one of handling the manure. The fact that the stock is stabled the year round makes it possible to save all the manure both liquid and solid and apply it to the land. Being applied daily as produced, any leaching by rains, carries the leached materials into the soil where it is needed. The remarkable yields of every portion of this farm seem to indicate that this method of handling manure is highly satisfactory.

A BIG EDITORIAL OFFICE.

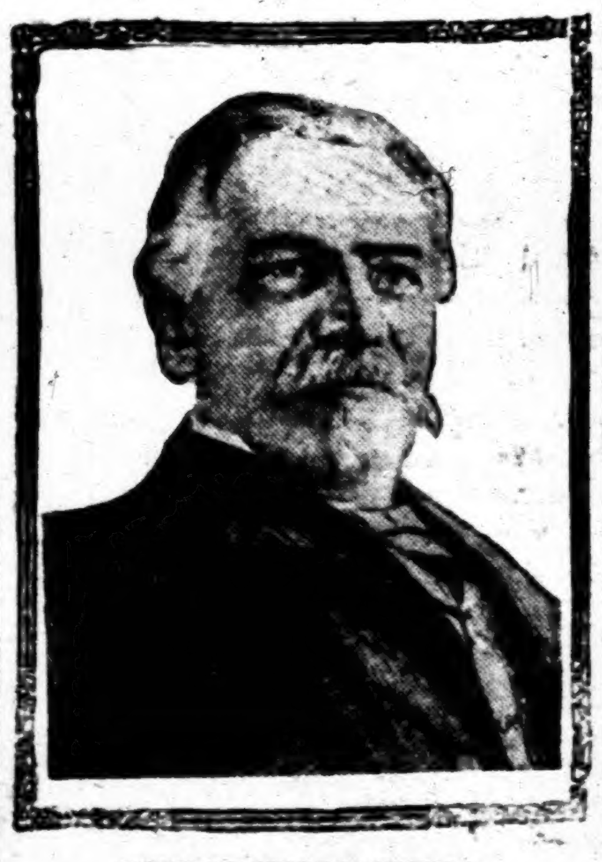
The Department of Agriculture Publishes Over Four Booklets for Every Day in the Year.

One of the biggest editorial offices in the Government and probably in the country is in the Department of Agriculture where the Division of Publications edits, revises, and in some cases returns to the authors for rewriting an average of four bulletins or books for every day in the year. During the last fiscal year 1,463 new publications passed through the editor's hands, nearly 400 of these, however, being issued by the Weather Bureau, which is under the Department of Agriculture. The total number of copies of the remaining 1,000 odd publications printed during the year was 12,000,475. Many of these are generously illustrated, and beside the great number of original photographs used, the artists of the Department make something over 1,000 drawings a year for illustrating.

The head of this Division, or the "Editor" of the Department as he is known, is Mr. George William Hill, an old-time editor of an agricultural paper, but he has held his present position for many administrations.

"There have been very many radical changes," said Mr. Hill, "in the publications of the Department within the last ten years. At one time, the Agricultural Reports and other pamphlets and bulletins issued were more or less technical, having the reputation generally throughout the country, of being written in about as dry and uninteresting a manner as possible. The present Secretary has continually impressed upon his Chiefs of Divisions the desirability of short, crisp articles and bulletins, especially in the annual Year Books, written in a practical and simple style, with the result that the Publications of the Department have come into very general favor with the farmers and are eagerly sought after, which is evident by the enormous number of requests for them."

The Farmers' Bulletins, descriptive of all sorts of farm work, stock-raising, fruit-growing, etc., and of which nearly 250 have been published, are by all odds the most popular of the Departments of Publications. They are brief, written in simple style and discuss subjects near to the heart of the agriculturist. Many of them have been condensed and rewritten from the longer and more technical bulletins, setting forth the results of exhaustive experiments. More than 6,000,000 copies of these popular bulletins were published and distributed last year. An active factor in the enormous work of editing the Agricultural Publications is the assistant chief and editor of the Division, Mr. Joseph A. Arnold, whose knowledge of the practical side of Agricultural Publications is something amazing.

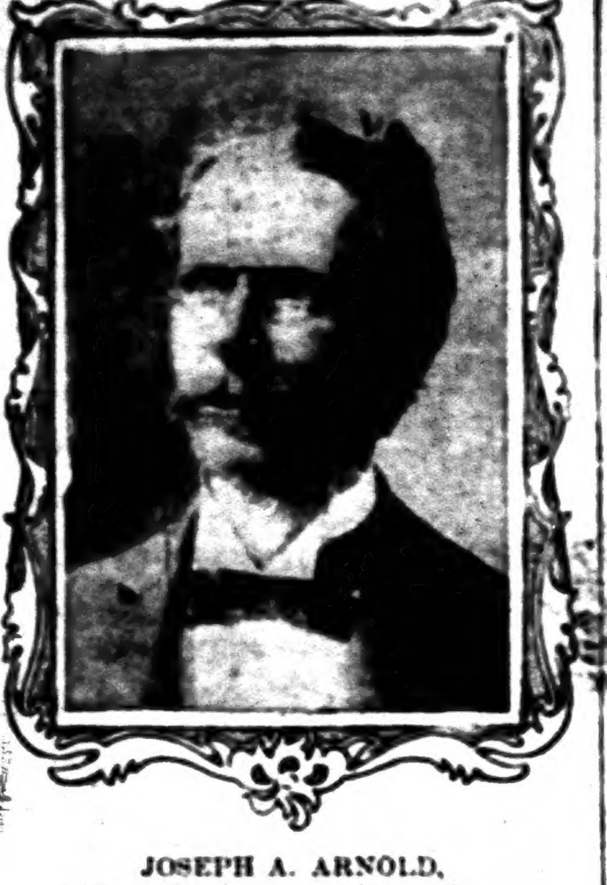


GEORGE WILLIAM HILL,
Chief of the Publication Division, Department of Agriculture.

The storage and distribution of this printed matter constitutes a large and important part of the Publication Division's work, the document section occupying the entire space of a large four story building. The total printing bill of the Division for the past year amounted to $352,172.

THE 3-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER OF A 16-YEAR-OLD JERSEY.

"Although we are sending out a vast volume of farm bulletins," remarked Mr. Arnold in speaking of this work of the Department, "I cannot believe that the farmers of the country as a whole appreciate what a splendid mine of agricultural information exists in these farm bulletins, which they can have for the asking. They cover every practical subject and would make an exceedingly valuable farm library. Bound together they would form several large volumes prepared by the best agricultural experts in the country and the result of the widest and most extensive scientific farm experiments ever made."



JOSEPH A. ARNOLD,
Editor, Department of Agriculture.

KING ALFONSO'S SHOPPING.

A Paris Millinery Shop Startled by Visit From the Spanish King.

An amusing anecdote is related in connection with King Alfonso's recent visit to Paris. In his leisure moments he was fond of taking a turn in the Rue de la Paix, which is noted for its elegant shops, and making a few purchases. His majesty's appearance naturally created a good deal of flutter, especially among the demoiselles de magasin, who rushed to doors and windows to see him go by, so when three gentlemen stepped into a certain establishment one morning and the most youthful of the party asked to see some hats they were politely requested, as the most natural thing in the world, to wait a moment, as the king was in the street, and the girls were all watching for him. The knowing smiles which thereupon pervaded the features of the little party had the effect of promptly putting the quick-witted shop girls on the scent. After announcing the great news excitedly to the proprietor of the establishment they clustered in a ring round King Alfonso and his companions.

This was a thousand times better than a peep into the street, and then, what an honor! Only to think of the Spanish sovereign walking in such simple fashion into their shop. And what followed delighted them even more. The mistress of the place had advanced, and, courtesying low, had uttered one of those pretty compliments which our French friends have so glibly at th tip of their tongues, when his majesty smilingly replied: "I wish to see some hats. I want three; one for my mother, in rather a quiet style; one for my sister, and one for my aunt, and please put them all up together in the same box." The masterpieces of the shop were presented and inspected. The selection of the three hats took some time, as the young king is not accustomed to that sort of work, and in his dilemma he exclaimed: "Well, I was never so puzzled in my life!" Finally the choice was made, and with the request that the hats should be sent at once to the hotel, King Alfonso took his departure, leaving the mistress of the establishment and her young women charmed with their experience.

A NON-PATENTABLE MEDICINE.

Universally Used by the Medical Profession.

What is the most important remedy known to the medical profession? A guessing contest might be established upon this question which would doubtless bring to the fore a great variety of remedies, yet, as stated by a very successful practitioner, there is one medicine given to patients which physicians find more important than any other. Strange to say, this is the quite universal and ineffective "bread pill," which, after all, is not bread, but only so-called on account of its harmless nature. The bread pill is sometimes nothing more than a plain sugar pellet, at others, where a liquid prescription is given, a weak solution of sugar and water, or a mixture of powdered licorice or gentian, both harmless drugs when given in the weak proportions prescribed by the doctor.

Of course the principle use of the "bread pill" is in the case of a patient, who, imagining himself ill, calls in his family physician, and the latter, knowing his patient to be perfectly well, prescribes the "bread pill." But, probably, the most opportune of all times for the use of the "bread pill" is when the man of science makes a visit to a particularly ill patient, but whose symptoms are of such a nature that he is perplexed as to the character of the disease or where they have not developed sufficiently for him to determine the true nature of the case. In this event he does not wish to display his ignorance or what in reality may be but an apparent lack of knowledge, since at some stages it is impossible to accurately diagnose a case; but a frank admission of this kind would destroy the patient's confidence in his physician. And so at this juncture the "bread pill" steps in, is given to the sick person, with no apprehension of any harm resulting therefrom.

OLD FOLKS TESTIFY

All Old People in Clanton and Their Children Take Notice.

A time comes to every one when the life forces begin to fail. We begin to feel that we are going down hill and perhaps that the end of active service, if not of life, is near.

These extracts from some letters recently received from old people should be interesting reading:

Mr. A. J. Baker of Evansville, Ind., says, "I believe there is no other medicine equal to Vinol for old people. I would not take $1000 for the good it has done me."

Mrs. Sarah J. Windrom, cousin of the late United States President, Zachary Taylor, says, "Vinol is a God-send to old people. I am seventy-six years old, but owing to the strength-creating qualities of Vinol, I feel young, active and well today."

Mrs. Jos. Bankson of Decatur, Ill., seventy-eight years of age, says, "Vinol has made me strong, active and well."

A member of the Upchurch Drug co., says, "Vinol owes its virtue to the fact that it contains in a highly concentrated form all the active, curative, strengthening and body-building properties of cod liver oil. It makes rich, red blood, healthy body material and sound, steady nerves. In this way it repairs worn tissues, checks the natural decline of the aged and replaces weakness with strength. Every aged person in Fall River should try Vinol on our guarantee to refund the money if it fails to give satisfaction." Upchurch Drug co.

Mr. Joe Clackler and family gave a flying visit to Mr. John Wyatt last Tuesday.

Mr. I. W. Maddox and family made a visit to Mr, J. A. Thompson last Sunday.

They never gripe or sicken, but cleanse or strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels. This is the universal verdict of the many thousands who use DeWitt's Little Early Risers. These famous little pills relieve headache, constipation, billiousness, jaundice, torpid liver, sallow complexion, etc. Try Little Early Risers. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

Why Not?

Our Sunday school is still progressive under the management of our faithful superintendent, P. C. Weldon. Rev. J. I. Williams preached at this place Sunday last and all appreciated his sermon very much.

Mr. Marshal Baker and sister, Miss Bessie, were visitors here Sunday.

Our school is progressing nicely under the skillful management of Prof. J. T. Williams, with an enrollment of 50 pupils. He is certainly one good teacher.

Mrs. Alice Foshee and daughter Miss Mamie, were pleasant visitors here Sunday.

Mr. Rube Miller reports a [illegible] time at the candy breaking at M Williams on last Saturday night. I guess he will come again.

Prof. C. M. Baker and Miss Lizzie Rhodes were welcome visitors here last Sunday.

Mr. G. W. Willis has moved back to his home in this community.

With best wishes to the Banner and its many readers I will close.

What John F. Stevens Did.

It was in 1890 that he began the most difficult, and as it proved, the most notably successful piece of engineering of his career, the building of the Rocky mountain division of the Great Northern.

He set out from Assinaboine, Mont., to make the preliminary reconnoissance with two Indian guides and a pack mule, and he carried it through, undeterred either by the desertion of both his guides or by the death of the mule. The cost of the complete survey was $900,000, and Mr. Jim Hill is said to have remarked with enthusiasm that the railroad got a dollar's worth for every one of them. At any rate, the road as it now runs is without doubt one of the finest pieces of mountain engineering in the world.

Indians and Tuberculosis.

It is true that 60 per cent of the deaths among the Sioux and Yankton Indians now are from tuberculosis, but it is also true that fifty years ago tuberculosis was unknown among the Indians, and has fastened upon them only since the coming of the white man to Dakota.

A TRULY IDEAL WIFE

HER HUSBAND'S BEST HELPER

Vigorous Health Is the Great Source of Power to Inspire and Encourage—All Women Should Seek It.

One of the most noted, successful and richest men of this century, in a recent article, has said, "Whatever I am and whatever success I have attained in this world I owe all to my wife. From the day I first knew her she has been an inspiration, and the greatest helpmate of my life."

Mrs. Bessie Ainsley

To be such a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, to inspire him to make the most of himself, should be a woman's constant study.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging, that she gets easily tired, dark shadows appear under her eyes, she has backache, headaches, bearing-down pains, nervousness, irregularities or the blues, she should start at once to build up her system by a tonic with specific powers, such as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Following we publish by request a letter from a young wife:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"Ever since my child was born I have suffered, as I hope few women ever have, with inflammation, female weakness, bearing-down pains, backache and wretched headaches. It affected my stomach so I could not enjoy my meals, and half my time was spent in bed.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman, and I feel so grateful that I am glad to write and tell you of my marvelous recovery. It brought me health, new life and vitality."—Mrs. Bessie Ainsley, 611 South 10th Street, Tacoma, Wash.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Ainsley it will do for every sick and ailing woman.

If you have symptoms you don't understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free and always helpful.

GREAT BRITAIN'S NEW PREMIER.

SOFT-GROUND HORSESHOE.

Quite a demand has recently arisen for soft-ground horseshoes—that is, broad, flat shoes which, owing to their large area, will prevent the feet of horses from sinking unduly into the ground. A simple shoe of this type has recently been invented, which is so designed that it can be easily reversed. The advantage of this design will be particularly felt in wintertime, as the shoe is prevented from balling up with snow. As the reversible shoe is smooth at one side, it will be found advantageous for use on horses when mowing lawns. It consists of a plate with a flange projection from one face along the periphery and formed with slots to admit the calks of a horseshoe. Ribs on the plate prevent the calks from sliding back and forth on the plate. At each side a T-slot is formed to admit the head of a clamping strap. The two straps are bolted together over the hoof of the horse, as shown. One of the straps is formed of two members which are adjustably connected by means of a pin. This permits of adapting the shoe to different sizes of hoofs.—Scientific American.

NEW INCUBATOR IDEA.

A Chicago man, at the expense of considerable complication, proposes to build incubators, and he has patented his idea, so that the eggs are in continuous rotation during the period of incubation. To accomplish this he provides within the warmed chamber a wheel, with peripheral pockets, each large enough to carry an egg. The latter are held in position by inclosing bands. As the wheels are balanced, it takes but comparatively little power to impart a speedy rotary motion to the wheel, so that the germ, to quote the inventor, "is brought successively in contact with all parts of the nourishing material of the egg."—Philadelphia Record.

Someone Had Foozled.

Augustus Thomas, the playwright, invented a fine plan whereby he keeps his six-year-old son from shocking his mamma by repeating swear-words. For every new word that the little chap whispers to him privately Mr. Thomas gives him a quarter, on condition that he shall never repeat it again. He had great faith in the prophylactic power of the system until one day last week, when he was chatting with a dozen guests before dinner.

Little Gus, who had been out walking near the golf-links with his nurse, burst into the drawing-room, his blue eyes dancing with enthusiasm, his fair curls flying, his pink cheeks extended in a triumphant smile.

"Oh, papa, papa!" he cried; "I've just heard a new one that's worth a dollar!"—Saturday Evening Post.

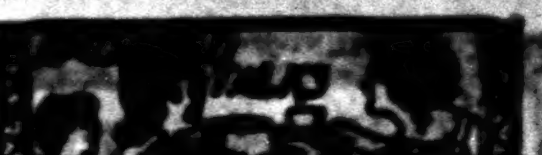
I glad- wledge that now, for the first years, I enjoy perfect health, t I owe it all to Postum." given by Postum Co., Battle Mich.

e's a reason. Read the little "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. um Food Coffee contains no of any description whatsoever.



TO REMOVE PUTTY.

To remove old putty and paint, make a paste with soft soap and a solution of caustic soda, or with slaked lime and pearlash. Lay it on with a piece of rag or a brush, and leave it for several hours, when it will be found that the paint or putty may be easily removed.

TO ECONOMIZE IN EGGS.

Eggs at this season are a luxury, and should not be used too recklessly. For settling the coffee egg shells are quite as efficacious as the egg itself. Wash all eggs before breaking, then save the shells to crush and mix into the coffee. Many cooks think they have to use eggs in a rice pudding, but a delicate and palatable pudding may be made without any.

TWO USEFUL HINTS.

Cracks in a cooking stove can be satisfactorily filled by a paste made of six parts common wood ashes to one part of table salts, mixed with cold water. Properly mixed it will prove lasting and will take blacking.

To clean plaster of Paris ornaments, cover them with a thick coating of starch and allow it to become perfectly dry. Then it may be brushed off and the dirt with it.—Washington Star.

WASHING BLANKETS.

A housewife whose blankets always retain their softness without shrinking gives the secret. Make the suds in a tub with any good white soap, having the water hot. Dissolve in it a tablespoonful of borax. Run threads around soiled spots on the blanket so that they may be found after they are wet. Rinse the blankets up and down vigorously, rubbing only the marked spots. Never rub soap directly on them. Prepare another hot suds with borax and put the blankets in it. Rinse up and down for several minutes, then rinse in clear hot water, softened with borax. Rinse in as many hot waters as necessary, then run blankets through a wringer.—Housekeeper.

THE BATHROOM SPONGE.

Brushes and sponges that have been used in the bathroom and kitchen require cleaning to prevent them from having a musty, disagreeable smell. Wash them in a strong Pearline suds, rinse in clear water and put them up to dry. A rack made of wire, which allows the air to circulate through it, should be used to keep sponges in after they have been used, and they will dry quickly.

One can stain a kitchen floor walnut color with asphaltum in liquid form, thinned with turpentine. Apply with a large brush. Use it sparingly and scrub it in well. Two light coats are better than one heavy one. When drp apply a coat of linseed oil, boiling hot. It improves the looks of the floor and lessens the work of keeping it clean at least one-half.—Christian Work and Evangelist.

That last suggestion requires a word of caution. Boiling linseed oil is almost as dangerous as gunpowder. If it takes fire the only thing to do is smother it with an old blanket or carpet, which should be provided beforehand. Water wont put out oil.

RECIPES.

Roast Plover on Toast—Clean and truss neatly. Cover the breast with fat bacon, and roast in a hot oven twelve minutes. Set on slices of toast. Add a glass of white wine and a little rich, concentrated broth to the drippings, and strain this over the birds. Garnish the lower end with watercress and quartered lemon. Serve with chiccory salad, on small cold plates.

Bigarade Sauce—Cook the trimmings of the duck (giblets, etc) (the carcass of a cooked duck may be added to advantage) in a pint of broth with part of a "soup bag." Stain and skim off the fat, and put in a saucepan with the juice of two sour oranges, a tablespoonful of sugar, a dash of red pepper, and a cup of Spanish sauce. Let simmer slowly, removing the fat as it rises, until all has been removed and the sauce is of good consistency, then add the rind of two oranges, cut in fine shreds, and it is ready to serve.—Boston Cooking School Magazine.

Hominy Waffles—Add one-half pint cooked hominy to a batter made of two cupfuls flour, one teaspoonful baking powder, one and one-fourth cupfuls milk, one tablespoonful melted butter, one-half teaspoonful salt, three eggs beaten separately; run through a coarse sieve and bake in hot, greased waffle iron.

Cream Cheese Salad—Form the cheese into balls about the size of a large nut and press nut meats on two sides of them, or, if preferred, the nuts may be chopped and mixed with the cheese; also some chopped olives will be very nice mixed through the cheese; arrange on lettuce leaves and use a very little dressing.

Codfish A La Mode—Mix well then beat until light one cupful codfish, shedded and freshened, or cold boiled fish, two cupfuls hot mashed potatoes, one pint of milk, two beaten eggs, one tablespoonful butter and salt and pepper to taste; turn into a buttered ramekin and bake twenty-five minutes in a steady oven.

DOCTOR CURED OF ECZEMA.

Maryland Physician Cures Himself—Dr. Fisher Says: "Cuticura Remedies Possess True Merit."

"My face was afflicted with eczema in the year 1897. I used the Cuticura Remedies and was entirely cured. I am a practicing physician, and very often prescribe Cuticura Resolvent and Cuticura Soap in cases of eczema, and they have cured where other formulas have failed. I am not in the habit of endorsing patent medicines, but when I find remedies possessing true merit, such as the Cuticura Remedies do, I am broad-minded enough to proclaim their virtues to the world. I have been practicing medicine for sixteen years, and must say I find your Remedies A No. 1. You are at liberty to publish this letter. G. M. Fisher, M. D., Big Pool, Md., May 24, 1905."

Dr. Melvin M. Page, Page Optical Co., Erie, Pa., writes: "Taking too many iced drinks in New York in 1895 sent me home with a terrible attack of kidney trouble. I had acute congestion, sharp pain in the back, headaches and attacks of dizziness. My eyes gave out, and with the languor and sleeplessness of the disease upon me I wasted from 194 to 122 pounds. At the time I started using Doan's Kidney Pills an abscess was forming on my right kidney. The trouble was quickly checked, however, and the treatment cured me, so that I have been well since 1896 and weigh 188 pounds."

Marriageable Girls.

It is very difficult to say what laws regulate proposals—why some girls attract attention only, while others attract "attentions." There are pretty and popular women to whom nobody proposes; there are plainer ones with whom every second man finds himself contemplating marriage.

BOX OF WAFERS FREE—NO DRUGS —CURES BY ABSORPTION.

Cures Belching of Gas—Bad Breath and Bad Stomach—Short Breath—Bloating—Sour Eructations—Irregular Heart, Etc.

Take a Mull's Wafer any time of the day or night, and note the immediate good effect on your stomach. It absorbs the gas, disinfects the stomach, kills the poison germs and cures the disease. Catarrh of the head and throat, unwholesome food and overeating make bad stomachs. Scarcely any stomach is entirely free from taint of some kind. Mull's Anti-Belch Wafers will make your stomach healthy by absorbing foul gases which arise from the undigested food and by re-enforcing the lining of the stomach, enabling it to thoroughly mix the food with the gastric juices. This cures stomach trouble, promotes digestion, sweetens the breath, stops belching and fermentation. Heart action becomes strong and regular through this process.

Discard drugs, as you know from experience they do not cure stomach trouble. Try a common-sense (Nature's) method that does cure. A soothing, healing sensation results instantly.

We know Mull's Anti-Belch Wafers will do this, and we want you to know it. This offer may not appear again.

Cock Fighting in Manila.

Chicken fighting is a universal passion among the Filipinos, and some fights are pulled off in each cock pit of the cock pits will seat 2,000 spectators. The great day for cock fighting is Sunday. The fighting begins immediately after early mass and continues all day. A great number of every Sunday, as a fight will last only a few minutes. The roosters are fitted with murderous steel gaffs, and when one of the combatants gets in a good stroke that contest is over; one of the roosters is dead. Then two fresh roosters are placed in the pit and this continues all day. Spectators pay a small admission charge and remain as long as they choose. The Americans tried to break up cock fighting, but the natives wouldn't stand for it, and there was so much indignation that it is now tolerated. I drove through one section of the poorer quarter at about 5:30 p. m., when the men were at home, and it seemed to me that in front of every house I saw a man or boy fondling a game rooster.

IN MEMORIAM.

"Oh death where is thy sting.
Oh grave thy victory."

On Jan. 29th, the death angel visited the home of Mr and Mrs. John Chambers and took away their little daughter, Birdie. The sympathy of the people are with the bereaved father and mother, brothers and sisters. We know that we cannot speak any consoling words that will make their grief any lighter or fill the vacancy of the little one, but we would ask the grief-stricken parents and brothers and sister to remember that God is a just and a wise God and does all things for the best, only strive to meet the loved one who has gone on to await your coming. Do not despair, for you have something to live for which will make you nobler, for you will strive to follow your sweet one into the realms of glory, where will be no more suffering. What is your loss is its gain; it has left this world of sin and sorrow and gone to dwell where there is sunshine and pleasure evermore. It has missed the snares of this world and gained a home in paradise where there is no stumbling blocks or pitfalls to endanger her path. So do not weep for her, but try to reconcile your minds to God's will and remember it is God's way, His will be done.

SCHOOL GIRL.

Startling But True.

People the world over were horrified on learning of the burning of a Chicago theater in which nearly six hundred people lost their lives, yet more than five times this number or over 3,000 died from pneumonia in Chicago during the same year, with scarcely a passing notice. Every one of these cases of pneumonia resulted from a cold and could have been prevented by the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A great many who had every reason to fear pneumonia have warded it off by the prompt use of this remedy. The following is an instance of this sort: "Too much cannot be said in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and especially for colds and influenza. I know that it cured my daughter, Laura, of a severe cold, and I believe saved her life when she was threatened with pneumonia." W. D. WILCOX, Logan, New York. Sold by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

THE GREAT GENUINE TONIC
URACURA
BLOOD ALTERATIVE LIVER REGULATOR KIDNEY AND BLADDER CURE
PRICE 50¢

WE WANT TO COVER THE COUNTRY WITH URACURA

Fifty-two per cent of the people in the United States have Liver, Kidney or Bladder disease in one form or another. We want every sufferer in this broad land to know about URACURA and to be brought back to life and health through it's use. We can't find words strong enough to express our faith in URACURA or to convey the earnestness of our desire for the afflicted to enter onto a new and hopeful existence by taking this great medicine.

If we could only sit down in person before you and explain what URACURA is—if we could introduce you to the thousands who have been saved to their friends by this remedy—if you could just hear from their lips the words of praise they bestow on it you too would be as confident and sure as we are.

We know that with URACURA we have solved the problem of Liver, Kidney and Bladder health and we want our message of hope to go forth and be read from ocean to ocean.

Do you suffer with Backache, high-colored urine, shortness of breath, swelling of hands and feet, puffs under the eyes, loss of appetite, fever, sleeplessness, vertigo, constipation, sallow complexion, coated tongue, depression, headache, nervousness? Then you have in a more or less acute form Liver, Kidney or Bladder trouble—you can't go back of the symptoms—but if you would be doubly sure, apply

The unfailing test. Take several doses of URACURA—if you find then that the urine is of a very dark or reddish color with a strong odor of the medicine you can know that your kidneys or bladder are affected. But hope—the very thing that indicates the trouble is also a sign that the medicine has commenced it's good work. After two are three days you will notice that the urine is clear, you will feel less pain about the kidneys and your backache will leave. The nervousness will disappear, your complexion will improve and in every way you will feel stronger and better.

URACURA is a Nervine Tonic, Blood Alterative, Liver Regulator and Kidney and Bladder Cure. It restores strength, renews vitality, purifies the blood, relieves biliousness and constipation and produces a healthy appetite and sound digestion. A purely vegetable compound or concentrated extract prepared from those roots and herbs that years of experience have proved to be the only sure remedies for these troubles known to science.

Plant City, Fla., Feb. 8, 1906

Editor Banner—My old friend and brother, Monroe Merchant, of Maplesville has just left here, having visited his son-in-law, G. W. Langston, of this place. Bro. Langston came here last fall for his health, but many come too late, I hope it is not true in his case. Bro. Merchant only spent a few days and seemed to like the country, and he urged me to write a letter to the Banner occasionally, said quite a number of the people expressed a desire to hear from me. I have nothing of interest to write. My health has not been good this fall and a few weeks ago I was quite sick, had two physicians with me, and they seemed to think my case rather gloomy, but thank God I am now on rising ground and hope that I will soon be myself again. My physicians said that my nervous system was run down and also I had kidney trouble. So they said I must stop preaching and all other work until I got well, and you may rest assured that it was a sad duty for me to leave off my church work, for as well as a duty, my church work was a help to me in driving away the lonely hours. But it is no use to have a doctor and not take his medicine, and so I took it, and resigned my churches, and I intend to spend some months seeing some of our country, hoping in a few months to resume work.

Enough on that line. I must say that I was glad to see my old friend Merchant, and when any of you are away from home you will learn how joyful it is to meet a friend. Indeed I would be glad to see any one from dear old Alabama, and as we near the other shore we think and care less for the little differences that we may have had in this life, the truth is there are but few people that do not have as many good traits as they have bad, and if we would look for the good we can very often find more good deeds than bad, so I think that the Apostle's idea was the best when he said, "Let us lay aside every weight and the sin that so easily besets us and let us run the race that is set before us." That is the race that is set before us is the thing and may God help us all to look before us, and not backwards, for no man ever gained anything by living in the past. Onward and upward is the road to success, to forgiveness and love, and with best wishes for the Banner and the people of Chilton, I am now, as ever, your friend,

Maplesville, Feb. 11, 1906

Editor Banner—As I am just from Plant City, Fla., I will try to tell something about what I think of the country. I think it is a good place for the poor farmer, I believe I can make more money down there on three or four acres than I can make here on all I can cultivate. It is a healthy country and has the most beautiful little farms I ever saw. It looks like spring time down there, peach trees in bloom, gardens green with vegetables. I saw tomatoes getting ripe on the vines, saw corn with four to six blades, green and growing, brought a sweet potato home with me that weighed seven pounds, plant was set out that it grew from in July. A farmer told me he sold over $400 worth off one acre in egg plant and over doubled that in strawberries. The orange orchards are beautiful, good many on trees yet. The land is black and gray, oranges grow mostly on gray sandy land. Plant City is a beautiful town with good and clever people. Land is at a good price down there and will still go higher. I cannot give prices correctly, it depends upon quality and location. They make two crops in one year—early and late crops. They were just about done planting Irish potatoes; they plant corn between potatoe rows, it will make 25 to 40 bushels per acre, they say. Plow the corn one time, plant velvet beans to fatten hogs, horses, cows. Well, I guess I had better close and say nothing of the lakes and rivers I crossed and the beautiful little towns I saw. Winter Park, in the orange grove country, I must say, is the prettiest town I ever saw.

J. M. MERCHANT.

STRAYED

from Billingsley, about Dec. 20, one yellow cow, with some white, 7 years old, bobtailed (may now have a calf). One heifer yearling, 2 years old, dun colored with some white, bobtailed, unmarked. IN MEMORIAM.

Died at his residence, on the 3d inst., near Providence church, at 10:30 p.m., Mr. Joseph Varden, after a brief illness, in the 45th year of his age. In his death the community and State has lost a useful and exemplary citizen, and his church a faithful and zealous member. He was a devoted and affectionate husband and father, and a firm and fast friend. The stronghold that he had on his neighbors and kindred was markedly attested, in that they came from far and near to his bedside and kept anxious vigil over him, doing all in their power, ministering to his every need. The watchful care of physicians, exercising their utmost resources, together with the gentle nursing of his family, relatives and friends all proved unavailing. Appeals to the Great Physician only served to call him "up higher," his time had come. He had no dread of death, and only longed to be spared to his family; he felt that he was prepared to meet his maker in peace. When the final hour came 'twas "like one who draws the drapery of his couch about him, and lies down to pleasant dreams." His stricken family has the tenderest sympathy of all acquaintances and relatives. May the Great Father keep and sustain them evermore is the prayer of A FRIEND.

THE COTTON SITUATION

In New Orleans Dependent Almost Entirely on Spot Market—No Acreage Reduction in Louisiana.

New Orleans, La.—The situation in the speculative cotton market has again developed liquidation, but there have been evidences that on 11-cent basis the talent has been inclined to come in again. The market reflects but little of special interest outside of this latter fact, although it may be mentioned that the increase in the visible and a marked decrease in spinners 'takings are depressing features which operators did not expect in the face of the activity shown in Liverpool and on the continent. These two factors acted in the nature of a wet blanket, and the weight was made the most of by the local bears, whose efforts were well supplemented from your end. The break was sharp, but after the bulk of the weaker-kneed had been shaken out, heavy, buying from your end, induced, it was said, by Mr. Price coming in on the long side, gave a flip to the situation which quite overcame the early decline.

The report of the census bureau had little weight with either side, although, in the main, the showing may be said to have been bearish. The market has worked into a position where some marked reaction can be expected, but the situation generally hinges almost entirely on the spot market. In the meantime, however, there is considerable uneasines displayed, and factors of little weight normally are looked to with interest.

From reports received from various parts of this state there is little likelihood of there being any reduction in acreage. The past year has been so disastrous from a planter's point of view and with the added fact of the eastward spread of the boll weevil the question naturally arises whether it would be good policy to fall into line with other states where conditions have not been so unfavorable last year. The sale of fertilizers is said to be on a heavy scale, and while part may be for the requirements of truck farmers, reports agree that cotton planters are coming in largely for supplies.

VICEROY RESPONSIBLE.

Is Determined to Create Friction With United States.

Hong Kong.—A dispatch received here from Canton says that the anti-foreign sentiment there is due to the attitude of the viceroy, who appears to be determined to create friction with the United States. The viceroy up to the present has taken no action in connection with the representations of the consular body regarding the recent attacks on foreigners.

A leaflet has been widely circulated in the city of Canton urging the people to co-operate with a view to the expulsion of the viceroy.

FLORIDA LIMITED WRECKED.

Engine and Three Cars Are Turned Over—Sleepers Remain on Track.

Nashville, Tenn.—The Illinois Central railroad's Chicago and Florida Limited, leaving here for Chicago, was wrecked at Chapmansboro, thirty-four miles west of here.

Conductor S. A. Cherry, Engineer Charles McGee and eight passengers were injured.

FIREMEN INJURED.

More Than $250,000 Damage Results From Fire in New York.

New York.—More than a quarter of a million dollars' worth of property was destroyed and several firemen were injured, one of them seriously, by a fire in the six-story stone and foundry building at 836-838 Broadway. The upper floors of the building were completely burned out, the floors and roof falling in, while the lower portion of the structure was flooded.

Enters on Sixth Week.

Savannah, Ga.—The trial of Greene and Gaynor has entered upon its sixth week. The most recently expressed opions of counsel for the government, as well as the defense, indicate that it will continue at least five weeks longer.

Greater progress has been made during the last three weeks than seemed likely during the earlier stages of the trial.

Maj. Cassius E. Gillette resumed the stand, and the presentation of his evidence consumed practically the entire week.

Birmingham, Ala.—The main structure of the Southside Baptist church, at Avenue F and Twentieth street, was practically destroyed by fire Sunday night. The blaze was discovered at 10:30 o'clock. The loss is between $45,000 and $50,000, and the insurance is between $20,000 and $25,000.

SON OF POSTMASTER

Is Accused of Robbing the Mails at Alto, Ala.

Huntsville, Ala.—Absalom Dolberry, son of the postmaster at Alto, in Jackson county, Alabama, was arrested and brought to Huntsville on a charge of robbing the mails. He was bound over to the federal grand jury after a hearing before Commissioner Greenleaf.

Dolberry was employed in the post-office at Alto, and several registered letters passing through that office have been tampered with recently. Decoy letters were sent through the office by Inspectors Kline and Lewis, and Dolberry was caught with them on his person.

Heavy Suit for Damages.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—Heavy suits have been filed in the circuit court of Colbert county against the Sheffield Company growing out of the fatal accident which befell Mrs. W. J. Mead, who was recently run down by an electric car in Sheffield and killed. Mrs. Mead was driving in a buggy with her two children, when the horse became frightened and ran across the track in front of the moving car, which ground out her life, her children miraculously escaping. The suits were brought by Dr. C. T. Morris, father of the unfortunate woman, for $50,000 damages and one for $25,000 by Charlotte Morris, mother of Mrs. Mead, through her next friend, Dr. C. T. Morris. The latter is known in the suit as the administrator of the estate of Mrs. Mead.

Fire in Cullman.

Cullman, Ala.—The New York Store, belonging to the Mountain City Mercantile Company, was burned at 2 o'clock Saturday morning. The building and contents were entirely consumed. The store was the largest and handsomest in Cullman, being built of pressed brick and plate glass. The loss on the building was $30,000, with $9,000 insurance. Loss on stock, $60,000, with $15,000 insurance. The fire originated, it is thought, from defective wiring. Gus Koppman, the principal stockholder, says that the store will be immediately rebuilt and opened for business by early spring. The law offices of Hon. S. J. Griffin were in the building, and his valuable library and furniture was destroyed. Mr. Griffin's insurance policy had lapsed a few weeks ago.

McGucken Was Acquitted.

Florence, Ala.—The trial of Thomas McGucken, the former Florentine, at Tampa, Fla., who was charged with the murder of Charles Poter, has resulted in his acquittal, as his friends here confidently expected it would. McGucken was a well-known contractor, and soon after establishing himself in Tampa became in volved in a labor dispute with one of the local unions. He was set upon by overwhelming odds and escaped by shooting his way to liberty. The jury reached a verdict after a very few minutes' deliberation.

Captain Mastin a Candidate.

Montgomery, Ala.—Capt. Peter B Mastin announces himself a candidate for the legislature from Montgomery county. With Mr. Mastin in the race there are now eight candidates for the lower house. Captain Mastin is a well-known and prosperous planter, and he has spent his entire life in this county. In public affairs he has manifested interest. He is a Confederate veteran, and he fought throughout the four years of the civil war, being in many of the great battles of the conflict. He is an ardent member of the Montgomery County Cotton Growers' Association.

G. W. Chambers Dead.

Talladega, Ala.—George W. Chambers was stricken with paralysis at his family breakfast table and died Friday night. Mr. Chambers had probably been Talladega's most valuable citizen as a developer of her resources. He went to Birmingham, England, and interested capital which built the Talladega furnace. He was the developer of Talladega's great water power electric plant, and was the president of the Talladega Electric Power Company, which operated the plant. He was the largest land owner in Talladega county, owning valuable mineral property in this and Clay counties. He was also owner of Chamber's Opera House and several business and dwelling houses in the city.

Huntsville, Ala.—The Huntsville Herald Publishing Company is preparing for the establishment of a new afternoon daily paper in this city.

Number and Value of Farm Animals.

Washington, D. C.—The crop estimating board of the bureau of statistics of the department of agriculture has issued a statement of the number and value of farm animals in the United States on January 1 of the present year.

Boy Throws Bomb.

Warsaw.—A bomb thrown by a boy in Slogda street fatally wounded four gendarmes. The boy escaped.

FOUL PLAY CHARGED.

Body Found in a Pond and a Woman Is Under Arrest as the Perpetrator.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—The dead body of a white infant, with a wound on its head, was found in a pond between this city and Sheffield Friday morning. A coroner's inquest was held, and the verdict was that the child had met death by foul means.

A white woman named Mrs. Mattie Lawson was arrested and committed to jail in this city to await a hearing next week. The evidence before the coroner's jury was that Mrs. Lawson, a widow, and another woman had occupied a cabin near the pond until a short time ago, when they removed to Florence. Mrs. Lawson was said to have been in a delicate condition when she moved into the house. The finding of the child connected Mrs. Lawson with its death, and her arrest followed the inquest. The woman's husband was killed two years ago in Sheffield, and she had not remarried.

Stallings Acquitted.

Greenville, Ala.—The jury in the case of Jack Stallings brought in a verdict of not guilty. Stallings was accused of the murder of Radford Buckhaults, which occurred nearly two years ago. At the time Stallings seriously wounded in the fight which resulted in the death of Buckhaults. The trouble between Stallings and Buckhaults was about the marriage of the latter to Stallings' sister. There was considerable conflict in the testimony, and it was one of the hardest fought legal battles ever held in this county. The sister of the defendant, who was the wife of the deceased, testified against her brother. Both sides were ably represented by prominent attorneys, and the court room was filled when the speaking began. It was at first thought when the jury had been out all night that a mistrial would be the result, but the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty after mature deliberation.

Summer Theatre for Tri-Cities.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—General Manager McClary, of the Sheffield Company, has received plans for a beautiful summer theatre to be erected without delay at the Tri-Cities Park, near Sheffield, Florence and Tuscumbia. The plans show a most modern building, with a large seating capacity and stage room ample to accommodate the largest attractions, and work will be pushed in order to have the theatre ready for the forthcoming season. The new theatre is now in the circuit with Nashville, Chattanooga, Birmingham and Memphis. Y. C. Allen will have the management of the theatre.

Blackburn Gets Place.

Tuscumbia, Ala.—James S. Blackburn, of Allsboro, succeeds to the vacancy on the board of county commissioners of Colbert county from the Southwest district, caused by the death of Commissioner Charles B. Woods ten days ago. The appointment was made Saturday by the governor, and gives general satisfaction. There were three applicants for the vacancy, the appointee, Lee Minon and W. M. Twitty. The appointee serves out the unexpired term of the deceased commissioner, which does not expire until November, 1908. He will take the oath of office next Monday and sit with the board in regular session next week.

Killed on Highway.

Huntsville, Ala.—Ike Williamson was instantly killed and Jim Williamson fatally shot by Jim Bates a few miles north of Fayetteville, Tenn. The shooting occurred on the highway, and was the outcome of a feud of long standing. All parties are prominently connected.

To Build Electric Line.

New Decatur, Ala.—C. H. Austin and associates have been granted a franchise by the two Decaturs for building an electric street car line to Austinville, three miles out. The company proposes to commence work on the line as soon as the weather will permit. Austinville is a growing suburb of nearly 1,000 people, and the line will be a paying one from the start.

Commits Double Tragedy.

Philadelphia, Pa.—In a jealous rage Frank Populace, aged 29, shot and instantly killed Mrs. Jablausky, aged 35 years, with whom he boarded. Running to the street he was pursued by a crowd, and after a chase of two blocks he turned the weapon upon himself, dying almost instantly.

Opelika, Ala.—Maj. Joseph H. Harris, of Oak Bowery, has announced that he will not be a candidate for agricultural commissioner, although he has been urged by friends all over the state to enter the race.

Florence, Ala.—At a meeting of the Lauderdale county democratic executive committee the date of the primary was fixed for August 27. The details for holding the primary election will be arranged at a meeting July 2.

TO OUST NORTH

President Taylor, of National Association, Will Demand an Investigation.

CENSUS BUREAU IS INACCURATE.

Red-Hot Interview by Chief of Ginners After His Examination of Director North's Office.

Atlanta, Ga.—Just as soon as J. A. Taylor, president of the National Ginners' Association, completes the investigation he has started into the management of the government census bureau by Director North, which will be within a short time, he intends to demand either from congress or from the president a thorough investigation and cleaning out of the bureau and the resignation of the director.

Mr. Taylor returned to Atlanta Saturday from Washington, where he went some time ago to investigate the discrepancy between the ginners' report and the government report of January 16, and to demand the publication of a certain report on unginned cotton which Director North has failed to give to the public.

While in Washington he satisfied himself of the correctness of the report of the ginners' association over that of the government, finding where the error was, and compelled the census bureau director to give out the report he had suppressed, a report which was favorable to the south, and resulted in the increased price of cotton.

"When I went to Washington to attend to these two matters—that is, to look into the government report of January 16 and to secure the publication of the report of unginned cotton—I saw Director North, and he promised me all the assistance in his power. When I started an investigation, however, and began to uncover evidences of crookedness, he did everything in his power to hinder me and prevent my getting the real facts in the case.

"I wanted to see the cotton reports from the different counties. If Mr. North had given me his aid I would have seen all the reports. As it was I was only able to see eight of them.

"Mr. North made the positive statement that the reports on unginned cotton had never been tabulated. His statement was untrue, for I discovered evidences showing plainly that the reports had been tabulated, then rubbed out, and an effort made to deceive me and prevent my getting the real facts.

"I did discover evidence in one case of sufficient importance to report, and I expect to secure other and more important evidence, such as will warrant an investigation and a change in the department, and such I will ask either of the president or of congress.

"I found that the reports on cotton from the south pass through six hands. How in the name of the world is it possible to keep six people quiet and to prevent a leak? I am sure I could not."

"ASIA FOR ASIATICS"

Is the Cry Rousing China to Open Revolt.

San Francisco, Cal.—"Asia for Asiatics." This says William V. Carmichael, a Shanghai merchant, just arrived here, is the cry that has been taken up in China, and has spread like wildfire from province to province, kindling everywhere the slumbering hatred of the Mongolians against all foreigners. The spirit of revolt is rife in the land, young China is rising, and in his opinion trouble is bound to come.

The growing sentiment against the foreign element in China, according to Carmichael, will result n open hostilities unless they take a hand and show that they are prepared with armed force to suppress the first signs of an outbreak. He says that the only way to gain the respect of Chinese is to inspire them with a wholesome fear of foreigners. He adds that the few regiments stationed at Manila will be entirely inadequate to cope with the trouble in case it comes.

"It is impossible," he says, "to deal with the Chinese with diplomacy. The only thing to do is to seize their territory as Germany did in 1899 and thus bring them to their senses."

Wealthy Man Convicted.

New York.—Benjamin E. Valentine, a wealthy Brooklyn lawyer, was convicted by a jury in Mineola, L. I., of uttering a forged deed conveying property from his wife to his mother. The property is located in Cedar Hurst, L. I., and in California.

G. R. Esslinger Dead.

Huntsville, Ala.—G. R. Esslinger, a popular young planter of the Whitesburg district, died Friday of typhoid pneumonia at the age of 33 years. His widow and four children survive him.

New Decatur, Ala.—New Decatur is soon to have an election on the issuance of bonds to the etent of from $100,000 to $150,000 for the purpose of building streets, additional school buildings, etc.

WRECK AT GREENSBORO.

Engineers of Both Machines Met Death in the Crash That Followed.

Greensboro, N. C.—At an early hour Saturday morning train No. 34, running north, ran into an open switch in the new Southern railway yard just north of Pomona and crashed into a switch engine, both locomotives being thrown from the track.

The engineer of the passenger train Owen Norville, was hurled under one of the engines and was almost instantly killed by scalding. His home is in Lynchburg, Va.

The engineer of the switch engine named Pennington, was also killed, and both engines are total wrecks.

It was said that none of the passengers were killed, though all were badly shaken up, and J. P. Wilkie, of Columbia, S. C., among others, had his lip badly cut by flying glass.

No. 34 was running at a high rate of speed. It was late and was making up time. Just south of where the collision took place there is a curve, and it is impossible for an engineer to see very far ahead until he enters the yard.

It is reported that the firemen and two or three passengers were killed. It is said that there are some bodies under the overturned cars.

Done to Death.

Selmer, Tenn.—The killing of Latimer Gann, reported from here Wednesday, has revealed a most cruel and diabolical tragedy.

The deceased was 18 years of age, and was going home from Selmer very much intoxicated. On the way he fell in with Lum Bias and John Pace. They lured the boy to an old outhouse near the home of his father, and after making him lie down on his overcoat, which they removed from him, Bias took from the boy's pocket a pistol and fired one shot into his prostrate vctim, death resulting instantly.

Pace confessed and both parties were committed to jail without bail. The presence of the sheriff and a crowd of determined men averted a lynching.

The deceased had had a slight misunderstanding with Bias, which is given as the sole cause for the killing.

Boycott Growing Worse.

Washington, D. C.—President Roosevelt had a talk with Rev. Lyman F. Peet, who for eighteen years has been at the head of the American College at Foochow, China. He was presented to the president by Senator Brandigee, of Connecticut, who was his classmate at Yale.

The president and Mr. Peet discussed conditions in China at some length. Foochow College has an attendance of 230 men of the higher class of Chinese, and is a successful institution.

Mr. Peet, who has made a close study of conditions in China, told the president that the boycott of American products, in his opinion, was getting worse. It has been the cause of several ugly riots and crimes. Mr Peet said that the Chinese officials show a desire to abate te boycott and to insure peace, but in many instances they secretly encourage the boycott.

One Day's Notice.

Hackensack, N. J.—Jerry Rossa, an Italian, was hanged here Saturday for the murder of another Italian, which was committed two years ago. Rossa was recently reprieved and no date set for the execution of the death sentence until Friday, when Governor Stokes directed that he should pay the penalty the next day. The gallows was then hurried to the jail on a sleigh and workmen were busy until late at night putting it into position. Deputies and witnesses had to be notified by telegraph in order that they might be here in time for the execution. Rossa was not informed until Friday evening that he was to die Saturday.

Mob Destroys Mission.

Pekin.—A dispatch from Amoy confirms the report of the destruction of the English Presbyterian and Roman Catholic missions at Chang Pu, thirty miles from Amoy, by a mob described as having been composed of Boxers. The damage amounts to $50,000. The American missions were uninjured. Details are lacking.

The sentiment in the neighborhood of Chang Pu is hostile to foreigners, and it is considered strange that the American missions were not molested, as the boycott of American goods is strong there.

Transport Meade Sails.

San Francisco, Cal.—The United States army transport Meade, which was delayed in her departure on the first of the month by a fatal fire that broke out in her hold, sailed Saturday for Honolulu, Guam and Manila, carrying more than 100 passengers besides the Second Infantry and the Eighth and Thirteenth field batteries.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Smallpox has broken out in the family of Mr. John Sumner, who lives three miles south of town. One day last week a young white man came to Mr. Sumner's house from Marshall county, and Mr. Sumner gave him employment. In a day or two he developed the smallpox, and Mr. Sumner and two of his children contracted the disease from him. A number of people have been exposed. The cases, however, are of a very mild form.

States Warships for Real Service

ot in Condition

By Rear Admiral Coghlan.

W E are greatly in need of a merchant marine, but we are more in need of battleships. We have only eighteen ships of fighting calibre that are strictly modern and two of that bunch are now out of order, so that instead of forty we count only sixteen today.

England has eleven ironclads alone. In her second class she has ships of first class fighting material, but we do not place any first class ships in our second class. Our vessels are good to look at, and they will give as good an account as possible when ere are a lot of them that have done service in the past that are now merely police duty, and they seem to be regarded as good enough to fly g. Many of our ships are old timers, and yet they are carried on our fighting ships. It would cost a fortune to make the Olympia, Dewey's p in Manila Bay, a fighting vessel.

e war in the East has taught us one lesson, and that is that it has us that the battleship is the only vessel to carry on a war or to decide at a critical issue. We must build more battleships if we are to hold .

e have twenty-seven battleships now in course of construction and by e will employ 65,000 men in our navy, where now we employ only 36,- d thus far we are going along strong lines. But our navy will never England's, for we are not building enough, nor building fast enough h up to her.

llowing the fads of various persons, we find among our twenty-seven g ships some millions of dollars wasted on four monitors. In the harbor la I have seen one of them rolling twenty times a minute trying to hit ing with a 12-inch gun—much as I have seen a woman trying to hit with a stone.

ree submarine ships came to the Navy Yard last Spring for repairs. n only knows when they will get away. As soon as you repair the a craft the other end needs rebuilding. The insides have been wholly , and the only thing I can see to do with them is to build new hulls.

1908 we shall rank on paper as the second naval power of the world, we strike from the list such ships as the sainted Oregon, now really a rate battleship, from the first line, we will rank among the sea powers world only sixth, possibly fifth, but that will be the best rate that we reach.

e must continue to build ships, and in passing let me say that the Gov- t-built ship is as good, if not better, than any. The Connecticut, which building in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, will distance its mates which are built in private yards. But the real test will come later on when the f repairs is known.

ter all, there is only one kind of ship to build, and that is the speedy hip of the line. All others above the water are no earthly good. The d cruiser is beautiful to look at, with its graceful lines and its buoyancy water.

e recent visitors from England showed this, as they lay at the head of e in the North River. In war they may be good for something such as g in the Carribbean.

e have a few for such purposes as a Santo Domingo difficulty and in countries where we need to send our navy. But for actual work, and for results in war, we must depend upon the battleship of the line.

O NCE I make up my mind, nothing on earth can change it."

The speaker was a young woman with a jaw like a steal trap. She was evidently very proud of her strength of mind and considered it a great virture.

"Dear me," thought I, "you are very good looking, but what a dreadful person to live with."

Some people seem to think it a sign of weakness to change mind.

the contrary, it is a sign of weakness to adhere obstinately to one's pinion when all evidence shows one to be in the wrong.

ture of Football.

Dr. Luther Halsey Gulick, President of the merican Physical Education Association.

N OTHING more hopeful has happened to sport for years than the present uproar over amateur athletics. It means that the public conscience is becoming more sensitive to honesty in athletics. It does not mean that the present situation is either better or worse than it has been in previous decades. The truth is that there has always been a considerable percentage of men in athletics who were willing to violate both the rules and the spirit game for purposes of personal advantage.

tercollegiate football is neither better nor worse than it was a genera- o. Players would occasionally kick each other then. There is a great ore football now than there was then; the audiences are much larger; ncial returns are larger; hence the evils are more glaring, but I do not hat they are worse.

is great protest against evil in athletics I take to be the most hopeful r the future. Public opinion is coming to demand honesty not only in ce and politics, but even in athletic sport.

ntrol is a necessity to freedom. This paradox is well illustrated in e of college athletics. The games have developed spontaneously and een uncontrolled. The result is that a great mass of students are out etics. Those who need most to play on athletic fields are ordered off d by the director, because they do not have the type of physique or which makes them available as intercollegiate material. The case is at of a city school, which has a fair sized playground that in the old country schools would easily accommodate fifty pupils. But now we to these grounds 500 children, desiring them to have the same old fash- lay. They can't do it.

soon as skill begins to have a financial advantage to the player it rap- velops a type of sport and a degree of excellence before which the aver- n has no opportunity. If a man can earn his living playing football be but a very few years before it becomes restricted to the comparatively perts who make it their first business. This is unqualifiedly an evil.

new spirit is coming into athletics. It is the spirit of honesty, which pelled by public opinion.

ombat the Ignorant Upper Classes Who Presume to Govern You

By John Burns, Member of Parliament.

I URGE you to remember that luxury, idleness, vulgar misuse of wealth, frivolity, gambling and cynical indifference are growing amongst the ignorant upper classes who presume to govern you. These tendencies, if developed, mean devolving upon the working classes greater power, efficency, courage, and character. These governing virtues are incompatible with drink, drunkenness or the disorders and incapacity that spring from them.

ppeal to you, the best, because you are the freest, and in many respects, iest, working class in the world, to renounce drink, because it prevents alking quickly, boldly and firmly the straight but narrow path that in- s, cl s and nations must tread if they wish to reach the goal of social happiness, communal culture and national greatness. exp es of workship, the street, the asylum, the jail, have given ptional opportunities of seeing the ravages of alcohol. My participa- many of the greatest labor movements of the present generation has me to witness how drinking dissipates the social force, industrial en- d political strength of the people.

For the Younger Children....

THE CHESTNUT BUR.

The wind cried aloud to the chestnut bur,
"Open, come open to me!"
And he blew with his might,
Till the bur shook with fright,
But never a bit opened she.

Then the sun smiled down on the little green bur,
"Please open," he coaxed, "to me!"
And he shone so warm
That the bur in alarm
Hid under the leaves of the tree.

Jack Frost came hurrying down the hill.
"Ho, ho, ha, ha!" laughed he,
And the bur laughed back
Till her brown sides cracked,
And out fell the chestnuts three.

Christine H. Hamilton, in Youth's Companion.

A GOOD DEED.

A correspondent to the Jacksonville Times-Union writes that he saw a very pretty scene a day or two ago during one of the heavy afternoon rains. A little kitten, the pet of some children probably, with a blue ribbon around its neck, soft gray fur, and dainty white feet, had wandered out into the street, and feared to cross the gutter where a swift stream whirled and dashed along. It was mewing piteously, but no one paid any attention to it. In this busy world the moaning of a human being excites but little attention, how much less, then, the crying of a forlorn kitten. Then there came along a great Newfoundland dog, with bright intelligent eyes and glossy coat. Attracted by the little kitten's distress, he gazed at it a moment, then glanced quietly about him. The nobler animal, man, was going by unheeding, so this dog walked out into the street, picked up the kitten in his mouth, and carried it gently to the sidewalk. There he placed it on a dry spot, licked it kindly once or twice, wagged his bushy tail, and went down the street. It was a little thing, but it struck me that that dog had something higher than intelligence.

FRANKLIN'S ELECTRIC DINNER.

Franklin took the universal applause that followed as quietly and modestly as he had put forth his suggestions, writes Joseph H. Choate, in The Critic. It was all fun to him from the beginning. Dr. Priestley says that at the close of the first summer of his experiments, when it grew too hot to continue them, the philosopher had a party on the banks of the Schuylkill, at which spirits were first fired by a spark sent from side to side through the river, without any other conductor than the water, a turkey was killed for their dinner by the electrical shock, and roasted by the electric jack, before a fire kindled by the electrified bottle, when the health of all the famous electricians in England, Holland, France and Germany was drunk in electrified bumpers, under a discharge of guns from the electrical battery.

Honors and distinction now crowded upon him; the Royal Society, as if to make quick amends for its previous neglect, by a unanimous vote made him a member, exempting him from the payment of all dues, and the next year with every circumstance of distinction awarded him the Copley medal, and Yale and Harvard conferred their honorary degrees upon him.

THE MUSICALE.

When mama asked who would keep house while she went to see Aunt Maria, three voices called out "I!" all at once—Polly's, Benny's and Bob's.

"Who'll amuse Betty?" asked mama. There was a pause. Betty was the baby, and babies were sometimes sometimes hard to please.

"I'll answer the telephone," said Benny, as if he had not heard mama.

"I'll mind the door-bell," said Bob.

"I'll take care of Betty, mama," said Polly.

"We'll help," said Benny and Bob together.

"Well, you must be very careful and not let her hurt herself; but I am sure I can trust you. I'll come back as soon as I can. Good-by!"

How very, exciting and important it was to be left at home to keep the baby and the house without any grown-up people to tell them how and when to do things, and the children were very proud and happy. Even Baby Betty seemed to feel that something very unusual was going on.

Benny took down the messages that came for papa on the telephone with a very businesslike air, and Bob took the vegetables from the green-grocer's boy when he came, and answered the door; but there were not many messages, and nobody rang the door-bell except the man who mended broken umbrellas, and after a while the house began to seem a little lonely.

Polly played "William-come-Trippleton was a fisherman" with Betty, and picking nosegays out of the flowers in the carpet for a long time, but Baby Betty always wanted a new game. Of course she was the dearest, sweetest, cunningist baby in the whole world, but—well—babies are unreasonable, and mother did stay.

Suddenly a bright thought came to Polly. "Benny and Bob, come here!" she called. "I'm going to give a musicale. I'll sing and you can play and Bob can make the pedals go, so it'll sound loud, and it'll be Betty's benefit! Bob, you play with Betty while I dress up and bring the audience. Benny, put the chairs in a row of preserved seats."

Polly liked to use nice, big words, and she turned red when Benny laughed very loud and said, "You mean reserved seats."

"Very well," said Polly, stiffly, "but it's most the same," and then she went up-stairs. When she came down she had mama's longest housekeeping apron tied on so that it made a long train in the back, and in her hair a trailing plume that used to be on one of mama's old hats, and in her arms a dozen dolls.

"Here's the au-di-ence!" she said, breathlessly. She seated the dolls in the chair quite primly, all facing the piano.

"Now let's begin the concert."

Benny sat down on the piano-stool and pounded the keys with quite a professional bang, and Polly stood up and made a little bow, and sang:

"Captain Bing
Was a pirate king.
He sailed the broad seas o-ver," while Bob worked the pedals very fast.

Really, it was quite a concert. The dog sat in a chair and howled loudly. Baby Betty said, "Goo, goo, goo!" and Benny said that was an encore, and meant Polly must sing another song, and then they all sang:

"Did you ever see a rabbit climb a tree?"

and all the time the audience was so staid and proper as an audience should be, and sat very still and gazed earnestly at the singers.

Baby Betty shrieked with delight, and came creeping over to where the polite "audience" sat, and nobody knows what would have happened to the pink silk dolly if in the midst of it all the door had not suddenly opened and mama walked in, laughing.

"Here is something Aunt Maria sent my little housekeepers," she said, emptying out a paper bag of sugar-coated cookies.

"Hurrah!" cried Benny and Bob. "Hurrah for Polly and Betty, and the concert and Aunt Maria!"

And everybody agreed that "Betty's benefit" had been in every way a tremendous success.—P. C. Bouve, in the Youth's Companion.

SAVING THE FAMILY.

Bobby had two grandmothers. One grandmother lived far away from him, and sent him presents—a striped worsted ball, a "Mother Goose's Melodies," a cotton-flannel pig, a calico cat, a rag doll and a pair of reins; and the other grandmother lived with Bobby, and had to play ball, read "Mother Goose," squeal for the cotton-flannel pig, "miau" and "scat" for the calico cat, make dresses for the rag doll, and drive Bobby all over the house, crying, "Get up, horsey!"

Of all the presents Bobby liked the reins best. Theye were red reins, hung with tiny jinglers.

When grandma had callers, and so could not play "horsey," Bobby used to loop the reins over a chair-back, and sitting on a cricket, drive round the country until the callers were gone.

Somebody else in the family liked the red reins with jinglers. That was Pussy Gray, the pretty Maltese kitten. She used to chase round after grandma and the prancing horse, and whenever the team stopped she would come frisking up, lift a little fore paw, and set the bright bells ringing.

One day grandma had several callers, and the last one was the minister, and he took Bobby up on one knee and Pussy Gray on the other. The reins were left over the chair-back.

"Those are my new reins," said Bobby. 'My grandma that lives away off sent them to me. Do you know my grandma that lives away off?"

He slipped off the minister's knee, ran over to the table, and got an album. He laid this on the minister's knee, and turned the pages till he came to the photograph of a lady with white hair. "There," he said, "that's my grandma that lives away off. This is the whole family. Everybody's in it—grandma and papa and me and everybody."

The minister looked at all the photographs, and Bobby, standing at his side, told the name of each. This took a long time, so it was late when the minister said good-by.

Then grandma, Bobby and Pussy Gray went to supper. After supper grandma put Bobby right to bed; and the chair horse remained tied to the table all night.

In the middle of the night grandma woke up and heard a jingling of bells—like sleigh-bells; and not being really awake, she fancied that somebody was coming to give her a sleigh-ride. Then she woke up a little more, and knew that it must be Pussey Gray playing with the jinglers on the red reins.

"I forgot to put her down cellar," thought grandma. "I must go now, or she may get into mischief. Why, it is raining, and I left the parlor window open a little way! Dear me, I must hurry!"

When grandma reached the parlor she found the rain beating in at the open window; and she was just in time to save the album, which had been left in an easy chair by the window, from a wetting.

In the morning she told Bobby about it. "In another moment," she said, "the whole family would have been flooded. We may thank Pussy Gray for it, because if she had not been playing horsey I should not have waked up. Pussy Gray saved the whole family from the flood." And grandma laughed.

"We must thank my horsey, too," said Bobby, "'cause he was standing still to be ringed. I tied him there. My horsey helped save the whole family, grandma."—Elizabeth Hill, in the Youth's Companion.

M'CLELLAN DEAD

Chief Justice of Supreme Court of Alabama Suddenly Expires.

END CAME ON BOARD A TRAIN

Accompanied by His Nephew Famous Jurist Was on His Way to Texas When Death Occurred.

New Orleans, La.—As the Louisville and Nashville train entered New Orleans early Saturday Chief Justice Thomas N. McClellan, of the Alabama supreme court, succumbed suddenly to an attack of heart disease. The chief justice left his home in Athens, Ala. Friday, accompanied by his nephew, Thomas C. McClellan, for San Antonio because of failing health.

The body was removed to an undertaking parlor, where it was prepared for shipment and sent to Athens, arrangements being made by Mr. McClellan and Judge Shelby, of the United States court of Alabama, who was a close friend of Justice McClellan. The deceased jurist was about 53 years of age. He had been on the bench since 1889, and for the past nine years had held the office of chief justice. He was unmarried.

Thomas Nelson McClellan would have been 53 years of age if he had lived until the 23d day of this month, having been born in Limestone county, Alabama, February 23, 1853. His parents were Thomas J. and Martha Fleming McClellan, coming by his mother from the well-known Alabama family of the Moores. He was Scotch-Irish paternally and English on the other, and the family came to Alabama from Virginia. His ancestors on both sides of the house were revolutionary fighters and heroes. His father, a whig in politics, was a member of the constitutional convention in Alabama in 1861 and 1865 and a member of the legislature in 1862, and died at his home in Limestone county in 1887.

Thomas N. McClellan began his career in the service of his state in 1880, when he came to the state senate. Before that time he was register in chancery of his own county for two years. He became attorney-general in 1884, serving as such until 1889, when he was appointed by Gov. Thomas Seay to the supreme court bench, the legislature having provided for an additional member of that body. He served as associate justice until 1898, when he was elected chief justice, and re-elected in 1903. He was educated at Oak Hill College, Tennessee, and took his law degree at the Cumberland University, at Lebanon, Tenn. He was never married and was an uncompromising democrat in politics.

Life Insurance Swindlers.

Victor, Col.—J. J. McEachern, whose death was reported on January 22, and life insurance policies paid, was arrested at the home of his sister here by City Marshal Naylor after a fight, in which McEachern was wounded by a bullet. McEachern was reported to have been killed by the accidental discharge of giant powder, but investigation by fraternal societies in which he was insured disclosed the fact that the body of Robert Speed, who was killed two days previously in a mine, had been unearthed, taken to the tunnel in which McEachern was working and blown to pieces with giant powder. The authorities were informed that McEachern was the victim of the discharge, and an old line life insurance company paid a policy on his life.

A deeper investigation by fraternal societies resulted in finding McEachern alive and his arrest followed. Jack Crowley, who worked with McEachern, was also placed in jail. The treatment of the body of Robert Speed greatly incensed his friends and lynching was threatened. In order to better protect McEachern he was removed to to the county jail at Cripple Creek and a heavy guard placed around the prison.

Cup for Americans.

London.—The blue jackets of the British second cruiser squadron will shortly present the American Atlantic fleet with a handsome silver cup as a souvenir of the formers recent visit to the United States. It bears an inscription recalling with "grateful remembrance the many kindnesses, tokens of good fellowship and wonderful entertainments given to their British cousins by their comrades across the sea."

Train Hit Street Car.

Chicago, Ill.—Two persons were killed and twelve others injured when a Pennsylvania passenger train struck a crowded street car at One Hundred and Sixth street, South Chicago. The street car was wrecked and the engine and first coach of the passenger train left the tracks. The train was a theatre train bound for East Chicago, Ind., leaving Chicago at 11:34. It was traveling at the rate of twenty miles an hour when the collision occurred.

"NOTHING DOING"

In Bessemer on Sunday—Lid Was Put on Tight and Sealed.

Bessemer, Ala.—Sunday has come and gone, and with it passes into history a day of absolute quietude so far as the mercantile interests of the place were concerned. To say that the place was shut tight would be mildly describing it. It was absolutely covered and hermetically sealed with the blanket of the police committee, and it is said that several smotherations was the result. The place was not dead, though, by any means, and Chief of Police Jones can testify that so far as he and his men were concerned it was very much alive. Not that a paltry fourteen arrests cut much ice, but in the absence of any one else on which to lay the blame the usual frequenters of downtown resorts on Sunday took special delight in worrying the police officers, and the day was a strenuous one for that body of men.

The police were vigilant all day and fourteen arrests were made. The livery stables were allowed to do business as usual, but the dairymen were all put under bond.

Will Kennedy, the undertaker, was also put under bond, and every one who looked like they only wished they could do business were watched by the officers, and if their doors were seen open and people inside they were immediately arrested.

The fight commenced on the saloon men and has ended in closing the entire town, and many conservative men have expressed the opinion that the drugs stores should be allowed to sell soda water, cigars, etc., and the fruit stands to sell their goods, which are perishable.

It is believed that the city council will moderate their action at the next meeting and issue special privileges along those lines.

LYNCHING AT GADSDEN.

Twenty-five Masked Men Storm Jail and Swing Bunk Richardson to River Bridge.

Gadsden, Ala.—Bunk Richardson, one of the four negroes charged with the murder of Mrs. Sarah Jane Smith, a white woman, in this city on the night of July last, was forcibly taken from the county jail at an early hour Sunday morning and hanged by a mob of twenty-five masked and heavily armed men.

The execution took place on the Louisville and Nashville railroad bridge across the Coosa river, three blocks distant from the jail.

Sheriff Chandler and the night jailer were the only officials in the prison at the time. They were surprised and easily overpowered. Resistance seemed out of the question, and there was absolutely no chance to call for help.

The governor will use every power of his office to bring to justice those who took part in the lynching of Bunk Richardson at Gadsden. This statement was made by Private Secretary J. Kirk Jackson.

Maj. John W. Thomas Dead.

Nashville, Tenn.—Maj. John W. Thomas, president of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway, ried at his home here Monday morning, aged 76 years. Major Thomas was one of the best known railroad men in this country. He was a native of this city, and entered the railroad service in November, 1858. From November, 1858, to January, 1863, he was agent of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railway at Murfreesboro, Tenn., and from January, 1863, to July, 1865, was in charge of the rolling stock of the same road. From July, 1865, to September, 1868, he was auditor and paymaster, and from September, 1868, to September, 1872, superintendent of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad. From September, 1882, to September, 1884, Major Thomas was general manager, and from September, 1884, to January 1, 1899, president and general manager of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad, since which time he has been president.

Heart failure was the direct cause of Major Thomas' death. He leaves a widow and one son, John W. Thomas, Jr., general manager of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad.

The remains of Major Thomas were interred at Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Walking Arsenal.

Chicago, Ill.—An Italian said by the police to be an agent of an Italian secret society was arrested after a hard fight with detectives in the yards of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad. A bottle of nitro-glycerine, a bomb six inches long, a double stiletto a foot long and six vials containing colored liquids of unknown composition were taken from the man before he was locked up. Three companions of the Italian escaped capture.

Talladega, Ala.—Miss Annabell Rollins, a young lady in the family of the Presbyterian Orphans' Home, aged 17 years, was fatally burned and died Saturday night. She was standing by a red hot stove in the dining room, when her skirt ignited from the heat. She ran into the laundry, and the speed of her running only fanned the flames. Attracted by the children Superintendent Foster finally reached her and threw an overcoat over her, but too late to save her.

At the instance of the Clanton bar a petition to the Governor is being circulated for the appointment of Judge John R. Tyson to the vacant chief justiceship.

In the event that the Chief Justice is appointed from the associate justices, there will be a vacancy in that august body to be filled, and friends of Col. W. A. Collier, of Clanton, think it would be a graceful act on the part of the Governor to appoint that gentleman to the vacancy. He is a thorough lawyer, well known all over the State, and would creditably fill the office.

Tuesday next is the school election, and every qualified voter we hope will go to the polls and cast a vote in favor of the tax. This is one time when political differences should not count; there is no disputing the fact that the schools need the money, and children of Democratic or Republican parents will equally share in its benefits. Vote for the school law.

The proffered resignation of Hon. Tipton Mullins, as chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee, does not come as a surprise, it being well known that for a long time he has been desirous of retiring from active political life and devoting his whole time and energies to the practice of his profession. All the same, the Democrats of the county regret his decision.

In the death of Chief Justice Thomas N. McClellan, the State has lost one of the ablest judges that ever sat upon the bench in Alabama. He was a profound lawyer, and an honor to the bench and bar of the commonwealth. His opinions delivered during the long years he held office as a member of the Supreme Court, rank with the ablest delivered from that great tribunal, and were quoted approvingly by the courts of many other states. In social life he was a charming companion. The death of Judge McClellan is universally mourned throughout the State. Peace to his ashes!

It Has Official Sanction.

Three years ago the President of the United States gave his endorsement to national aid in high way improvement, and declared in a public speech that it was help the people had a right to demand of the general government. That was in 1903. Since then the patriotism, intelligence, progressive spirit and business sense of the country has quickened in response, and from one end of the land to the other the good roads campfires have been lighted on hillside and in valley. The actual loss and inconvenience to the country through the lack of decent means of communication between town and country, town and town in the interior, between the homes of the people and the markets, between the homes and church houses and school houses, is so immense that it cannot longer be borne, and the people are becoming aroused as they have not been on any subject since the close of the civil war. Every thinking person realizes that governmental aid and supervision in road construction is an absolute national necessity. Every thinking person knows that State systems will continue to fall short of adequate remedy for the great trouble of bad roads, as State systems have failed for seventy-five years past except in two or three of the wealthier States. Some good road work has been done in a few States, notably New York, a State of great cities, where the city property is taxed with other property, and money is abundant for the purpose. But there are few States able to do what New York can do for highways, and nearly all of the forty-five States of the Union realize their helplessness in this respect. It does seem as if there should be no hesitation about the enactment of the Brownlow-Latimer good roads bill. It provides for only reasonable assistance in getting the work under way, and certainly if the government can spend money for road building in Porto Rico and the Phillippines, as it has been liberaly doing, the Representatives of the people ought not to deny relief to the States at home. The plan proposed is neither extravagant nor burdensome. It is a plain, practical business proposition which appeals strongly for hearing in the 59th Congress, and the demand for this legislation is growing stronger all the time. It has, too, the sanction of eminent officials of the government, and if the people continue their demand on Congress the Brownlow-Latimer bill will soon become a law. Hon. W. P. Brownlow will send copies of the bill and other official literature to any person addressing a request to him at Washington.

FERTILIZERS.

Because acid phosphate is a fertilizer when mixed with nitrogen (ammonia) and potash it is sometimes used by itself. I have seen it used for cotton in old ground and it would have taken a close observer to have told that it did any good. From the observation we have this: If we supply one element that is needed and withold others that are needed just as much, we get poor results. As a rule, a fertilizer for cotton should have 8 parts available phosphoric acid, 1.65 parts nitrogen and 2 parts potash. This is not just the proportion that is needed on all soils. Some soils have more potash than other soils. In that case, of course, the fertilizer would require less potash. Sometimes we find a soil that has a sufficient amount of potash and nitrogen that is available for plant food, but is lacking in acid phosphate. In that case it would be a waste of money to buy a fertilizer with the elements proportioned as just named. We have such a soil as this in a new ground where the vegetable matter has accumulated on the surface for a number of years. A new ground will yield as good crop from a liberal application of acid phosphate as it would if fertilized with guano. And the cost of the phosphate would be less than one-half that of the guano. I think what is true of new grounds is true of bottom land where the sediment has washed in from surrounding hills.

I would say again we should vary our fertilizers with our crops. We should not use the same fertilizer for corn that we use for cotton. I notice that the experiment stations give as a balance for corn 8 parts available phosphoric acid, 1.65 parts nitrogen and 5 parts potash.

In conclusion I would say that an experiment with our soils would be interesting and profitable. There are perhaps twenty or more different kinds of soils in this county and for that reason no rule for the use of fertilizer can be laid down that will exactly fit them all.

To make these experiments we would need one sack each of acid phosphate, cotton seed meal and kainit. We would want to lay off as many plats of ground as we made experiments, each about ⅛ of an acre in size. The different plats can lie one after another taking up 4 or 5 rows across the field. If we will take 3⅜ lbs. 16 per cent acid phosphate, 14¾ lbs. cotton seed meal and 7 lbs. kainit the mixture will give us a fertilizer containing an equal amount of available phosphoric acid, nitrogen and potash—1 lb. of each. And so we can take these figures as a unit and proportion our fertilizer as we wish.

SEED TIME

The experienced farmer has learned that some grains require far different soil than others; some crops need different handling than others. He knows that a great deal depends upon right planting at the right time, and that the soil must be kept enriched. No use of complaining in summer about a mistake made in the spring. Decide before the seed is planted.

The best time to remedy wasting conditions in the human body is before the evil is too deep rooted. At the first evidence of loss of flesh

TIPTON MULLINS RESIGNS

Clanton, Ala., Feb. 14, 1906
To the Democrats of Chilton County:

The multiplicity of my public and private duties makes it necessary that I lay some of them down. For several years I have been a member of political, educational and other committees. In addition to this I have served the Democratic party of Chilton county as chairman for a long time and am now anxious to be a private in the ranks and to give more of my time to my chosen profession. At the next meeting of our County Committee I shall hand to them my resignation as chairman and also as a member of the Committee from Beat Four. Having reached this conclusion I thought it should be made public before the campaign opens.

It is hardly necessary to say that as a private citizen the Democratic party can command me in so far as my time will permit.

Tipton Mullins.

Clanton, Ala., Feb. 14, 1905
To the People of the Town of Clanton:

The demands upon my time are such that I must be relieved of some of them. Besides, public office is a thing I do not desire. To those who participated in our recent town election I wish to say, with malice towards none and good will toward all, I have decided not to qualify as mayor of Clanton. As a private citizen I shall be ready to do what I can for the good of the town and the fulfillment of its obligations.

I hope those who voted for me will not feel that their wishes have been lightly considered for such is not the case. Their support in the face of the fact that I refused to be a candidate compels my lasting gratitude to each and every one of them.

REV. GEORGE W. RULAND

Restored to Health by Vinol and Strongly Endorses It.

Prominent men from all parts of the country are indorsing Vinol, and strong testimonial letters from four ministers of the gospel and several physicians have been received within a week. Such unsolicited testimony as this is the best proof of merit any medicine can have.

The Rev. George W. Ruland of Keene N. H, writes: "I have used your cod liver oil preparation, Vinol, as a tonic, and I do not believe there is any other medicine that can equal it. It built me up and strengthened me when run down and overworked. Vinol has done for me more than was claimed for it."

"We honestly believe there is no other remedy or cod liver oil preparation known to medicine that has the healing, strengthening power which Vinol has, and if it fails to create strength and health for run-down, debilitated people, old people, weak, sickly women and children, nursing mothers, and after a severe sickness, or if it fails to cure a hacking cough, chronic cold, throat or bronchial trouble, or to make those who are too thin fat, rosy and healthy, we will return every cent paid us for it.

Is there a sick, ailing or aged person in Clanton who can afford to ignore this generous offer?" Upchurch Drug co.

At the court house, Monday, Mr. J. F. Devaughn and Miss Minnie Williams were united in matrimony, Judge Reynolds performing the ceremony. Best wishes to the happy couple.

Mr. A. C. Headley of Clanton, route 3, gave us a pleasant call Tuesday.

They never gripe or sicken, but cleanse or strengthen the stomach, liver and bowels. This is the universal verdict of the many thousands who use DeWitt's Little Early Risers. These famous little pills relieve headache, constipation, billiousness, jaundice. torpid liver, sallow complexion. etc. Try Little Early Risers. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

Why Not?

If you will call upon us we will do our very best to please you in both measure and money--that is our aim; try us, and we won't miss fire.

Bigger Yields

A given number of acres fertilized with Farmers' Bone produce a greater yield of cotton, than the same acreage with ordinary fertilizer. Farmers' Bone does more than that. It makes it possible to reduce the acreage and increase the yield. Try it this year. The man who uses has twenty-one years of fertilizer experience back of him. Over 13,000 carloads of Royster fertilizers were used on the crops of 1905. This volume of business stamps Farmers' Bone the best.

Tests of Varieties of Cotton in 1905

Among 32 varieties of cotton included in tests made on large plots at Auburn, Ala., in 1905, the largest yield of lint was 531.2 pounds per acre. In yield of lint and in total value of seed and lint. Toole stood first in the list and Cook's Improved second. Both in yield of lint and in combined value of seed and lint Cleveland occupied third place and Bancroft's Herlong fourth. In order of total value of seed and lint the rank of the remaining varieties was as follows (5) Christopher; (6) Schley; (7) Bowden; (8) Pulnot; (9) Layton; (10) Russell; (11) Strickland; (12) Willet's Red Leaf; (13) Crossland; (14) Hawkins; (15) Alex. Allen; (16) Culpepper; (17) Haggaman; (18) Peterkin; (19) Texas Bur; (20) Southern Wonder; (21) Blue Ribbon; (22) Cameron; (23) Truitt; (24) Woodfin's Prolific; (25) Jackson's Limbless; (26) King No 1; (27) Shine; (28) No. 148, U. S. Dept. Agr.; (29) Berry's Big Boll; (30) Welborn's Pet (mixed seed); (31) Rogers; and (32) Dickson. Dickson was ruined by boll rot.

A uniform price of 70 cents per hundred pounds for seed and 11¼ cents per pound for lint (the market price when this cotton was ginned) is assumed for all varieties. The staple of Blue Ribbon is longer than that of other varieties and in the largest cotton markets this variety and other long staples would command a premium.

In addition to the 32 varieties on large plots, 52 other varieties were grown in 1905 on plots too small to permit an accurate determination of the yields. The limited amount of uniform land made it necessary to exclude these varieties from the quantitative test reported above. Instead, these 52 varieties were grown for the purpose of making descriptions and photographs

It will take several months to prepare for publication the descriptions and illustrations of varieties grown on a small scale in 1905 and in other recent years. Parties who furnished small amounts of seed are requested to have patience to await this publication and not to write for reports by letter as the conduct of their varieties. From the nature of the case adequate reports cannot be made by letter and the time devoted to answering such inquiries merely postpones to that extent the preparation of the complete printed report of our studies of varieties of cotton.

ED. CRUMBO, ex-Mayor of New Albany, Ind., writes from 51: E. Oak street:

"My endorsement of Peruna is based on its merits.

"If a man is sick he looks anxiously for something which will cure him, and Peruna will do the work.

"I know that it will cure catarrh of the head or stomach, indigestion, headache and any weary or sick feeling.

"It is bound to help anyone, if used according to directions.

"I also know dozens of men who speak in the highest terms of Peruna and have yet to hear of any one being disappointed in it."

Mr. Crumbo, in a later letter, dated Aug. 25, 1904, says:

"My health is good, at present, but if I should have to take any more medicine I will fall back on Peruna."

Home Grown Tea.

"This year 12,000 pounds of choice tea will be shipped from what is, at present, the only tea farm in the western hemisphere," says Freeman Tilden in his article, "Great Chance for Tea Growers," in the February Technical World Magazine. "This farm is at Summerville, S. C. In the face of difficulties that at times seemed insurmountable, but on the other hand with the kindly assistance of the United States government, the Summerville tea farm has grown to a point where it can offer serious competition with the best grades of tea shipped from China, India, Formosa or Java. But, above all, it has been demonstrated that, barring the question of labor, the finest tea can be successfully grown at home, and there is nothing that gladdens the heart of an American more than the discovery that he can enter into competition in a field hitherto denied him."

Rich Bachelor Girls.

Not a few bachelor girls of New York support expensive establishments for their own use. Miss May Van Alen, for instance, has three private homes which cost her $60,000 a year, and Miss Evlcyn Van Wart is said to pay $50,000 for a similar whim, having a fine house in New York city and two others in Europe. Miss Margaret Astor Chanier pays $30,000 a year for the support of her bachelor house in West Seventy-third street, New York. Miss Faith Moore and Miss Olive Trowbridge disburse nearly a like amount. Helen Gould has private establishments which represent an outlay of about $50,000 a year.

World's Oldest Industry.

"There are in the Holy Land but few industries, and these of the most primitive kind," says W. G. Fitz-Gerald in his article, "Diving for Salt in the Dead Sea," in the February Technical World Magazine. "The awful desolation of the Dead Sea, however, which lies nearly 1,300 feet below the level of the Mediterranean, is broken here and there by the salt divers, whose work is probably as ancient as the human race itself. From remotest antiquity the salt of the Dead Sea has been collected and brought to the Jerusalem market, where it is used for curing hides and for domestic purposes.

"Dead Sea water contains over 25 per cent of solid substances, of which 7 per cent is chloride or sodium, or common salt. It is chloride of magnesium which gives the water its horribly bitter taste, while the chloride of calcium makes it feel smooth and oily to the touch, so that after the very curious sensation of a bath in the Dead Sea the skin retains an oily sensation.

"The Dead Sea contains no living creature; sea fish put into its waters speedily die. Not a single boat navigates its strange waters, nor is there any sign of life save the isolated parties of salt divers, who scrape and slowly amass their precious glistening heaps of crystal near the mouth of the Jordan.

"When a sufficient cargo is made ready a long string of camels crosses the desert, and the salt is loaded up into panniers or 'shwerries,' and taken into Jerusalem, where it finds a ready market."

Last year Great Britain coined $53,735,893 gold and $3,036,200 silver.

31 Boxes of Gold

300 Boxes of Greenbacks

For the most words made up from these letters

Y - I - O - Grape-Nuts

331 people will earn these prizes.

Around the fireside or about the well-lighted family reading table during the winter evenings the children and grown-ups can play with their wits and see how many words can be made.

20 people making the greatest number of words will each receive a little box containing a $10.00 gold piece.

10 people will each win one box containing a $5.00 gold piece.

300 people will each win a box containing $1.00 in paper money and one person who makes the highest number of words over all contestants will receive a box containing $100.00 in gold.

It is really a most fascinating bit of fun to take up the list evening after evening and see how many words can be added.

A few rules are necessary for absolute fair play.

Any word authorized by Webster's dictionary will be counted, but no name of person. Both the singular and plural can be used, as for instance "grape" and "grapes."

The letters in "Y-I-O-Grape-Nuts" may be repeated in the same word.

Geographical names authorized by Webster will be counted.

Arrange the words in alphabetical classes, all those begining with A together and those beginning with E to come under E, etc.

When you are writing down the words leave some spaces in the A, E, and other columns to fill in later as new words come to you, for they will spring into mind every evening.

It is almost certain that some contestants will tie with others. In such cases a prize identical in value and character with that offered in that class shall be awarded to each. Each one will be requested to send with the list of words a plainly written letter describing the advantages of Grape-Nuts, but the contestant is not required to purchase a pkg. These letters are not to contain poetry, or fancy flourishes, but simple, truthful statements of fact. For illustration: A person may have experienced some incipient or chronic ails traceable to unwise selection of food that failed to give the body and brain the energy, health and power desired. Seeking better conditions a change in food is made and Grape-Nuts and cream used in place of the former diet. Suppose one quits the meat, fried potatoes, starchy, sticky messes of half-cooked oats or wheat and cuts out the coffee. Try, say, for breakfast a bit of fruit, a dish of Grape-Nuts and cream, two soft-boiled eggs, a slice of hard toast and a cup of Postum Food Coffee. Some amateur says: "A man would faint away on that," but my dear friend we will put dollars to your pennies that the noon hour will find a man on our breakfast huskier and with a stronger heart-beat and clearer working brain than he ever had on the old diet.

Suppose, if you have never really made a move for absolutely clean health that pushes you along each day with a spring in your step and a reserve vigor in muscle and brain that makes the doing of things a pleasure, you join the army of "plain old common sense" and start in now. Then after you have been 2 or 3 weeks on the Grape-Nuts training you write a statement of how you used to be and how you are now. The simple facts will interest others and surprise yourself. We never publish names except on permission, but we often tell the facts in the newspapers and when requested give the names by private letter.

There is plenty of time to get personal experience with Grape-Nuts and write a sensible, truthful letter to be sent in the list of words, as the contest does not close until April 30th, 1906. So start in as soon as you like to building words, and start in using Grape-Nuts. Cut this statement out and keep the letters Y-I-O-Grape-Nuts before you and when you write your letter you will have some reason to write on the subject "Why I Owe Grape-Nuts."

Remember 331 persons will win prizes, which will be awarded in an exact and just manner as soon as the list can be counted after April 30th, 1906. Every contestant will be sent a printed list of names and addresses of winners on application in order to have proof that the prizes are sent as agreed. The company is well known all over the world for absolute fidelity to its agreements and every single one of the 331 winners may depend on receiving the prize won.

Many persons might feel it useless to contest, but when one remembers the great number of prizes —(331)—the curiosity of seeing how many words can really be made up evening after evening and the good, natural fun and education in the competition, it seems worth the trial; there is no cost, nothing to lose and a fine opportunity to win one of the many boxes of gold or greenbacks.

We make the prediction that some who win a prize of gold or greenbacks, will also win back health and strength worth more to them than a wagon full of money prizes.

There are no preliminaries, cut out this statement and go at it, and send in the list and letter before April 30th, 1906, to Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., Battle Creek, Mich., and let your name and address be plainly written.

THE PULPIT.

A BRILLIANT SUNDAY SERMON BY BISHOP BURGESS.

Subject: Church Music.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Bishop Burgess preached Sunday morning in the Church of the Redeemer. The occasion was the dedication of the beautiful memorial organ, a gift to the church. The bishop spoke on "Church Music." The text was from Psalm xciv:9: "He that planted the ear, shall He not hear? He that formed the eye, shall He not see?" Bishop Burgess said during his sermon:

This organ, which we dedicate today, to the glory of God, has been placed here in memory of one who was a faithful and devoted worshiper in this church, George Parker. There is a peculiar appropriateness in the gift, for church music appealed to him with an especial power. To make this part of our worship worthy of our church's traditions, to make its ritual, when ritual of some kind was necessary, seemly and historic, he was willing to sacrifice his time, his money, his strength. It has seemed to me that it would not be out of place for me to speak to you to-day of church music and to trace its history so that we may be better able to estimate the value of what must always be an adjunct to the service, the hand-maid, not the mistress, of worship.

The Bible never seeks to prove the existence of God. The prophets, poets, philosophers, historians of the Old Testament, as well as the Apostles and Evangelists of the new, everywhere assume the Being and Personality of God. They do not argue for this position. They simply claim it as their right. Only the fool, and he only under his breath, can deny the existence of God. But if any argument is hinted at, it is rather this argument from design, which is to-day, after all, the advance of modern science, considered the most cogent of them all and which is struck off at white heat, as it were, in this glowing sentence of the Psalmist, "He that planted the ear, shall He not hear? He that formed the eye, shall He not see?" The writer may not have known, perhaps, as much of human anatomy and of the physiology of the brain as Professor James, he may not have been as cognizant of the delicate structure of the eye and ear as one of our modern specialists, but the marvels and the beauty were before his mind in all their power when he wrote those words. It is an argument which the fool alone can set aside, that such things do not come by chance and that in the Supreme Being something corresponding to hearing and seeing exists, that the music which delights the ear of man is known to God, and the glow of the sunset, the sweet unfathomable beauty of the world, of the stars and of the flowers have their existence primarily for God. The horrified philosopher may call out "anthropomorphism," but for my part I do not fear that as much as the impersonality of pantheism or materialism. If it is true, as Professor Sholer says, that the naturalist has a right to conclude that the universe is under the control of power in ways like unto the mind of man then surely we have a right to believe that all our art, our music, our architecture, our paintings and sculpture are heard or seen by God and are pleasing or unpleasing to Him according as they are or are not founded upon the principles of truth. Let us not argue about this. Let us assume it now as we speak of church music.

We can watch their ways with our microscope, but we dare not assert that they do not hear commands and live in a world of the source of which we know nothing. So with the universe. We can plow the heavens with the telescope, but we know not that what we call the music of the spheres has no existence and that it is only a poet's fancy which asserts that the heavens, the stars and the planets accompany the sons of God in their praise of the Father in Heaven.

In all civilized nations I believe music has always had some connection with religion. The Greeks had no doubt carried it, as they did every art they touched, to a high grade of excellence. In Plato we find music is a constant source of illustration. In those days, as in these, they had the mere musician, who prided himself on his ear and lost the poetry and the meaning of the art. "The musicians," one of the characters says bitterly, "put their ears in the place of their minds." "Yes," replied Glaucon, "I like to see them laying their ears alongside of their neighbors' faces, some saying, 'That's a new note,' others declaring that the two notes are the same." But for Plato music had a deeper significance and in one single sentence he brings out its connection with morals. "Simplicity in music," he says, "was the parent of temperance in the soul," a truth which we need to remember to-day as never before.

But to the Hebrews the art was sacred. Miriam with her timbals and her dances accompanied her song of victory. The majestic rhythm of the Psalms were blended, no doubt, with an equally majestic music. When the people were carried away into captivity their conquerors wanted to hear them sing their beautiful national airs. But the young voices refused to answer. "How can we sing the Lord's songs in a strange land?" Browning has dramatized the scene, but the people must have been naturally musical when the shepherd lad could come with his harp and drive away the worst melancholy from the heart of the troubled monarch.

I doubt not that our Lord loved the music of the Temple and that one happy moment in Holy Week was when the children of the Temple, presumably the boys who sang this daily service, cried out in homage to their prophet, Hosanna to the Son of David!

The history of early church service is obscure, but at the beginning of the seventh century Gregory the Great, the Bishop of Rome, created a new era and probably a reform in the art by introducing what was known as the Gregorian tones or modes. I have not technical knowledge enough to assert whether this was original with him or whether he revived an older method, but certain it is that the Gregorian style, if I may use such a term, has become the model of all the best and strongest ecclesiastical music, whether Roman or Anglican.

But during the Middle Ages corruption had set in of so serious a nature that we find the Scottish Puritans and the Popes of Rome alike condemning music. The Puritans abolished all musical instruments from their churches and adopted the natural tone of voice for the services and prayers and the plainest of psalm tunes, which, however, had all the grandeur of Gregorian chants. But it is not as well known that the Council of Trent censured for centuries the prevalent style of church music with extraordinary severity and was on the eve of forbidding any kind of music in the church, when it was saved from this extreme action almost by a miracle.

Now why, in such different quarters, do we find such violent and virulent antagonism to church music? Let us first answer that question, and then see what it was that softened that antagonism. The reason why music was condemned was because it had become a traitor in the camp. During the Middle Ages the troubadours had invented many beautiful melodies, some of them soft and pathetic, some warlike and some gay. This kind of music has developed along with the sacred, and the church composers and precentors have adopted the secular tunes and incorporated them into the masses so that the people even sang the profane words instead of those of the Latin liturgy. It is as if to-day we should have the airs of "Annie Laurie" or "Way Down on the Suwanee River" used as a theme for the communion office or played on the organ at the time of partaking of the Bread and Wine of the Body and Blood of our Lord. This abuse of music became a scandal in the chancel. Apparently choirs and organists had not learned that obedience to the clergy while on trust has now been acquired, and the only way which seemed possible to stop the profanity was to silence the voice of organ and choir alike. You may rest assured that while there is some obscurity as to the real state of affairs, yet the desecration must have been very great when Scotch Puritans and Roman prelates united in their condemnation of the art.

What saved it, then? In the Protestant world it was Luther. His love of music was intense. He used to play on the flute, and said that the devil fled from its sound when he played. He wrote some of the stateliest and noblest of the German hymns. And if he did not compose the music as well, he certainly superintended its composition. This best of hymn music is really founded on the old method of plain song which Gregory the Great advocated.

In these revelations which are going on all the time now in the social, the financial and political world, we find that the standard of ethics is practically that of men who have no faith in the hearing and seeing God. It is the morality for the world. Sin is not sin unless it is found out. Provided the scandal is kept out of sight it is of no consequence. Large sums will be paid to the most disreputable papers under the guise of subscriptions to keep names out of the scurrilous sheets. Accounts are tampered with and entries changed or omitted, so that no one may learn the facts. And all is done because in the eyes of such men the only shame is the shame of the police courts and the cropped hair and striped garments of the prisons. But if the rapid machinery of modern life would stop long enough for men to think, maybe they would hear the psalmist's question ringing in their ears, "He that planted the ear, shall He not hear? He that made the eye, shall He not see?"

Morality and music are thus seen to have the same ideal. And the church which will teach the truth of Christ in this world of sin, will have her organs tuned with the heavenly, and her music will not be made to please the ear of man, but to delight the ear of God. No more sublime language exists than the passage in the communion office, "Therefore, with angels and archangels and with all the company of heaven we laud and magnify Thy glorious name." The church that speaks these words is speaking only unto God, and the music which must accord with such thought and language must be the music of a mind and heart which belong unto the Lord God Almighty.

Songs in the Night.

God • • giveth songs in the night. Any man can sing in the day. When the cup is full, man draws inspiration from it. When wealth rolls in abundance around him, any man can praise the God who gives a plenteous harvest, or sends home a loaded argosy.

It is easy to sing when we can read notes by daylight; but he is skilful who sings when there is not a ray of light to read by—who sings from his heart. No man can make a song in the night of himself; he may attempt it, but he will find that a song in the night must be divinely inspired. • • No, it is not in man's power to sing when all is adverse, unless an altar-coal shall touch his lip. • • • Then, since our Maker gives "songs in the night," let us wait upon Him for the music.

O Thou Chief Mus'cian, let us not remain songless because affliction is upon us, but tune Thou our lips to the melody of thanksgiving.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Modern Miracles.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has been experimenting for some years in an effort to produce an orange which will grow in northern climates, and has recently met with success. Tangelo is the name of the new orange. How was it produced? By plant marriage. The wiry, tough, sour little orange of Japan was married to the luscious Florida orange. This is only one of the many miracles wrought to-day by scientists. Surely, it is feasible to think of a miracle wrought in the spiritual realm by the union of God and man. Every day spiritual miracles are being performed, man becomes a new creature as he becomes united through faith to his Saviour.

First evangelize the young men, and then make them an evangelising force, for if these nations are going to be evangelized it is going to be by the sons and daughters of the soil. See that this present generation does not perish from the earth without the young men knowing that Jesus Christ died and rose again, and that He is a living Christ.—John R. Mott.

IS THERE LIFE ON THE MOON?

THERE was a time in the history of the earth when it had no satellite, when it was not the globe we know it now, but a great liquid planet incrusted by a shell some thirty-five miles in thickness. That time is separated from us by an interval which cannot be accurately determined, but which must be measured by millions of years at least. In those early days of its planetary career, the earth spun on its axis with a constantly increasing swiftness that reduced the day to a few hours. When the period of revolution had finally dwindled to a bare three hours, a catastrophe occurred, one of the most fearful in all celestial history. Such was the enormity of the centrifugal force of the earth, that five thousand million cubic miles of its mass were hurled off into space. In that cataclysm our moon was born.

Strange as its origin may be, the moon has still other peculiarities to offer. It is the largest of all planetary satellites, so large indeed that to the inhabitants of a neighboring world it must appear with the earth as a marvelously beautiful double planet.

Because it is smaller in mass than the earth, the attraction of gravitation on the moon is considerably less than it is on the earth. If it were possible for one of us to journey to the moon and live there we should find ourselves able to accomplish six times as much as we can on the earth. We could lift weights six times as heavy, run six times as fast, work six times as hard—all because the moon attracts bodies with but one-sixth the force of the earth. We could leap over barns with ease, and run a mile at express train speed.

Despite the chasm of 253,000 miles that separates us from the moon, we know more of the physical characteristics of the single pallid face which it ever turns toward us than we do of the Arctic regions, or of the heart of Africa. We have studied, mapped and photographed the great dark plains which were once thought to be seas and were accordingly miscalled "maria;" the lofty mountain ranges that sometimes tower 20,000 feet above the seas, and the vast, annular craters that pit the moon's aged features.

Although it once formed part of the earth, the moon is different from our globe in many respects. Charred by by fires long since dead, honeycombed like a giant ball of slag, scarred by terrific volcano upheavals, its telescopic aspect is anything but cheerful. Craters are not uncommon features of the earth, but on the moon their number and size are truly asotnishing. At the lunar south pole these dead volcanoes are so closely packed together that to Galileo (the first man who ever saw the moon through a telescope) they seemed like the eyes of a peacock's tail. So large, indeed, are many of these craters that a man standing within one of them would be unable to see the surrounding ramparts, because they would lie below his horizon. A diameter of ten, twenty or even sixty miles is not infrequently met with in a lunar crater.

Are these craters all dead? Most astronomers believe so, but Professor W. H. Pickering, of Harvard University, has recorded a number of observations that seem to point to the activity of a few of them at least. He relies chiefly on the fluctuations in size which have been observed in a comparatively small crater called Linne. On an old map one observer records Linne as a crater of moderate size. A century later it is described as a small, round, brilliant spot. When modern instruments of precision were invented the crater was measured repeatedly, with decidedly surprising results. Once its diameter was four miles; then it grew to six miles, and now it has shrunk to three-quarters of a mile. If this volcano is extinct, how comes it that it changes its size so strangely? Still another proof of activity is found by Professor Pickering in the eccentricities of a gigantic crater called Plato, and in dense clouds of white vapor which have appeared before his eyes, rising from a tortuous cleft known as Schroeter's Valley. So minute have been Professor Pickering's observations that their accuracy can not be seriously called into question.

Granting that a few of the moon's craters are active, it follows that they must discharge someting into space. That something, judged by our earthly volcanoes, must be water and carbonic acid gas. Because the pressure on the moon's surface is exceedingly low, and because the temperature during the long, cold lunar night is probably not far from 460 deg. F. below zero, water can not possibly exist in the fluid state. Ice and snow are the only forms water can assume.

Is there any evidence of snow and ice? Almost every crater is lined with white. The lofty peaks of mountain ranges are hooded in white. At the South Pole the white glare is almost blinding. What is this white sheen? Merely the natural color of the moon's wrinkled face, according to most astronomers—snow and ice, forming where it should form, according to Professor Pickering. The disappearance and reappearance of these white spots are admirably explained by this theory; for snow and ice would vaporize in the long lunar day—equal to fifteen of our days, and congeal again in white crystals as the sun sets.

It has been said that an earthly volcano vomits carbonic acid. Conceding that a lunar crater ejects water in the form of a vapor and carbonic acid gas, is there any reason why life, in its lowest forms at least, may not exist on the moon? Professor Pickering believes that he has discovered traces of vegetation. There are variable spots on the moon, spots that darken after sunrise and gradually disappear toward sunset. They are not shadows, for they are most pronounced when the sun is high in the heavens. They appear quickly at the equator, and encroach on the higher latitudes after a few days have elapsed. They are never seen in the polar regions. It is in these variable spots that Professor Pickering has discovered what he considers to be vegetation. Whether he is right or wrong this much is certain: He has explained with admirable simplicity a phenomenon that has long puzzled astronomers. To offset the objections that the temperature of the moon is too low to support organic life it may be answered that certain lichens thrive in our own Arctic regions, where the temperature rarely rises above the melting point of ice. Moreover, many bacteria resist the most intense cold that we can produce. It may be objected that in a single day vegetation can not grow appreciably, but on the moon a day is equal to fifteen of our days, and may well be likened to a miniature season.

The advances which have recently been made in selenography by Professor Pickering show that although the moon is not a riotously luxuriant abode it is anything but the lifeless orb commonly supposed. It may be desolate and cold, but it is not altogether dead. —Scientific American.

PHOSPHORUS IN APPLE.

Specially Adapted to Renewing the Nervous System of the Brain.

Apples are said to contain more phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable, and it is claimed that this makes them specially adapted to renewing the nervous matter of the brain and spinal cord. Perhaps, for the same reason rudely understood, the old Scandinavian traditions represent the apple as the food of the gods, who, when they felt themselves growing feeble and infirm, resorted to this fruit for renewing their powers of mind and body.

As far back as the tenth century medical authorities became enthusiastic in their writings over remarkable curative properties of different fruits. In more modern times this has been revived, and nearly every one has heard of the "grape cure," the apple, peach or strawberry cure. One writer is said to have recommended in special cases eating twenty pounds of strawberries a day. The same writer also cites cases in which maniacs have gained their reason by the exclusive use of cherries. These instances savor of the ridiculous, but there is no doubt that the so-called "grape cure" for indigestion and other evils has resulted in great good to persons trying it. The fruit should be of good quality; if it is not and the grapes are sour and watery, the patient may be harmed rather than benefited.—Vick's Magazine.

Lunacy in London.

London has 26,739 persons on its lists of lunatics. Of these, 24,282 are supported by the rates. The County Council is at its wits' end trying to devise accommodations for the rapidly increasing numbers of the city's insane. January 1, 1904, England and Wales, with about 32,000,000 inhabitants, had 117,199 insane persons—an increase of 3234 over 1903. The ratio of the insane to every 10,000 of the population went up from 34.14 to 34.71 in twelve months. This almost incredible and dangerous increase is far beyond the recorded increase in the kingdom's population. Indeed, the decade 1894-1904 shows that the number of the insane was as one to 327 in 1894 and as one to 288 in 1904. At this rate of increase the end of England's supremacy in many lines is in sight. Luckily before it is too late legislation may devise methods of meeting the matter and securing a remedy.

Up to date all efforts at a successful explanation have been unavailing. The expense of fitting up quarters for these people has forced London and other places to a serious consideration and investigation of the whole problem and all points connected therewith.—London Daily Mail.

A Government Without Taxes.

Nestled between the dark blue waters of the Mediterranean and the towering peaks of the Alps on the Southern coast of France, lies the unique and small principality of Monaco. Although not covering six square miles of territory, it possesses the strangest and most original government in the world; a government which is rich and modern in every detail, yet a government where taxes are unknown, a government which is visited annually by 500,000 representatives of every walk of life, yet a government absolutely devoid of any form of industry. Such is the principality of Monaco.

Although the picturesque old town of Monaco is the seat of government, the luxuriant palaces of Monte Carlo, that lie but across the bay, furnish the revenue with which the civil government, law courts, army, public works, police, and an annual income to the prince are paid.—Era Magazine.

His Hour of Triumph.

"I'd like that tooth, please," said the small boy, after the dentist had extracted the small torment.

"Certainly, my little man; but why do you want it?" queried the dentist, handing it over.

"Well, sir," responded the gratified boy, "I'm going to take it home, and I'm going to stuff it full of sugar. Then I'm going to put it on a plate, and" (with a trumphant grin) "watch it ache."—New York World.

BABY COVERED WITH SORES.

Would Scratch and Tear the Flesh Unless Hands Were Tied—"Would Have Died But For Cuticura."

"My little son, when about a year and a half old, began to have sores come out on his face. I had a physician treat him, but the sores grew worse. Then they began to come on his arms, then on other parts of his body, and then one came on his chest, worse than the others. Then I called another physician. Still he grew worse. At the end of about a year and a half of suffering he grew so bad I had to tie his hands in cloths at night to keep him from scratching the sores and tearing the flesh. He got to be a mere skeleton, and was hardly able to walk. My aunt advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I sent to the drug store and got a cake of the Soap and a box of the Ointment, and at the end of about two months the sores were all well. He has never had any sores of any kind since. He is now strong and healthy, and I can sincerely say that only for your most wonderful remedies my precious child would have died from those terrible sores. Mrs. Egbert Sheldon, R. F. D. The Royal Italian Children.

Many mothers in this country who flatter themselves that they are bringing up their children to be strong and healthy would shrink in horror from attempting the rules prescribed for the royal children of Italy by their mother, Queen Helena. And yet there are few healthier little ones anywhere than are the two little Princesses Yolanda and Mafalda, and the little crown prince, their brother, who is now more than a year old.

Their beautiful mother is bringing them up as she herself was reared no matter what the weather may be and upon awakening are given a plunge into water which, though not actually cold, is scarcely to be called lukewarm. They are dressed in flannel, but they go barefoot, even though the royal palace is only heated by sunlight, and in Italy the weather can be pretty severe in winter. But they tramp about the grounds hatless on cold days and keep warm by all sorts of joyous games, in which the oldest, Princess Yolanda, is the ringleader.

A TRAINED NURSE

After Years of Experience, Advises Women in Regard to Their Health.

Mrs. Martha Pohlman of 55 Chester Avenue, Newark, N. J., who is a graduate Nurse from the Blockley Training School, at Philadelphia, and for six years Chief Clinic Nurse at the Philadelphia Hospital, writes the letter printed below. She has the advantage of personal experience, besides her professional education, and what she has to say may be absolutely relied upon.

Many other women are afflicted as she was. They can regain health in the same way. It is prudent to heed such advice from such a source.

Mrs. Pohlman writes:

"I am firmly persuaded, after eight years of experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that it is the safest and best medicine for any suffering woman to use."

"Immediately after my marriage I found that my health began to fail me. I became weak and pale, with severe bearing-down pains, fearful backaches and frequent dizzy spells. The doctors prescribed for me, yet I did not improve. I would bloat after eating, and frequently become nauseated. I had pains down through my limbs so I could hardly walk. It was as bad a case of female trouble as I have ever known. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, however, cured me within four months. Since that time I have had occasion to recommend it to a number of patients suffering from all forms of female difficulties, and I find that while it is considered unprofessional to recommend a patent medicine, I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for I have found that it cures female ills, where all other medicine fails. It is a grand medicine for sick women."

Money cannot buy such testimony as this—merit alone can produce such results, and the ablest specialists now agree that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most universally successful remedy for all female diseases known to medicine.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful periods, weakness, displacement or ulceration of the female organs, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation, backache, bloating (or flatulence), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles.

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement.

The needless suffering of women from diseases peculiar to their sex is terrible to see. The money which they pay to doctors who do not help them is an enormous waste. The pain is cured and the money is saved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

It is well for women who are ill to write Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. The present Mrs. Pinkham is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, her assistant for many years before her decease, and for twenty-five years since her advice has been freely given to sick women. In her great experience, which covers many years, she has probably had to deal with dozens of cases just like yours. Her advice is strictly confidential.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY
REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature."—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

A BIG DEAL

President Harvie Jordan, of the Southern Cotton Association, announces that a deal had been closed with E. R. Thomas and others of New York, whereby a syndicate, composed of those capitalists, would buy 500,000 bales of middling cotton at 13 cents.

Mr Jordan is now sending out the contract forms to holders of cotton. He announces, and this is specified in the contract, that the direct sale of cotton for 13 cents does not effect those who are holding for 15 cents. They are given the privilege of holding back as many bales as they please for this price.

The contract also includes cotton made in August and September. It is estimated that there are now 1,250,000 bales unsold, and judging by the rate of consumption by the mills, they will require 7,900,000 bales for their needs between now and October 1st.

The South's Industrial Advance.

If from Mount Mitchell—the highest peak east of the Rocky mountains—a bird's-eye view of the South could be had, there would be seen a mighty, resistless, onward movement of a people who, having struggled amid the darkness of the wilderness with no pillar of fire to guide them, strengthened in body and mind by the hard but victorous fight, have at last come in sight of the Promised Land. No longer moving westward as heretofore, the tide of population would be seen to be turning southward. The hardened veterans of the South's struggle for industrial independence are seen to be drawing heavy re-enforcements from this incoming tide. Capital, the greatest coward of earth, joins the procession, and the South, beggar no longer, invites the world's surplus money seeking the most profitable field on earth for investment,—invites it not with a beggar's plea, but with the right to say: We are independent, we can stand alone, we have accumulated enough of money and experience to assure a great and steady advance; but so vast is the field, so sure are the returns, that we bid the world a welcome.—American Monthly Review of Reviews for February.

A man who once had rough, horny hands made them soft and smooth with Witch Hazel Salve, but he used the genuine—that bearing the name of "E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago." Verbena.

Capt. B. K. Ponder, who is now a citizen of Verbena, was in the city to day and in his happy way put the rosy tint upon the picture of his quiet home at Verbena, where the limpid waters of Chestnut creek welters around the little village on its way to the Coosa river.

Captain Ponder is delighted with the country life and the people up there. He says that the soil is well adapted to all kinds of fruit, especially strawberries, plums and peaches. Mr. Lester, an agent of the L. & N. railroad, made a talk to the farmers of Verbena last week and aroused a good deal of enthusiasm among the people by telling of the marvelous profits made in planting beans, strawberries, tomatoes, etc., and by raising in quantities sufficient to ship in car load lots, stating that the clear profits sometimes ran as high as $400 per acre on these crops.

Captain Ponder thinks that Horace Hood has a sure walkover for the office of state auditor, judging from the way the people talk up and down the L. & N. and in Chilton county.

Startling But True.

People the world over were horrified on learning of the burning of a Chicago theater in which nearly six hundred people lost their lives, yet more than five times this number or over 3,000 died from pneumonia in Chicago during the same year, with scarcely a passing notice. Every one of these cases of pneumonia resulted from a cold and could have been prevented by the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A great many who had every reason to fear pneumonia have warded it off by the prompt use of this remedy. The following is an instance of this sort: "Too much cannot be said in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and especially for colds and influenza. I know that it cured my daughter, Laura, of a severe cold, and I believe saved her life when she was threatened with pneumonia." W. D. WILCOX, Logan, New York. Sold by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Verbena.

THE DEATH OF MRS. JOHN CLISBY.

Her many friends have heard with deep regret of the death of Mrs. Emily Hughes Clisby, who for twenty-five years was a resident of Verbena. She was born in Montgomery county and lived there for some years after her marriage to Captain John Clisby, coming to Verbena among the first of the company of Montgomery people who built country homes here. Since the death of her husband she spent the winters in Birmingham and Montgomery, returning here for the summer months.

Mrs. Clisby was eighty four years old—living to see her nine children develop into earnest, useful, influential men and women. Always was she faithful to her home and church and she will be greatly missed in the Methodist church here, having helped to organize and build it and continuing one of its most devoted members.

Those who were present during the revival service last autumn, shortly before she went to Birmingham, will always remember Mrs. Clisby's beautiful prayers. Her voice shaken with deep feeling, her spirit strong with faith and love, the frail little woman prayed with such tender confidence that it seemed as if already she beheld her Father's face. We, who have known her during the years of her life in Verbena, have memories manifold of her charity, her faithfulness to duty, the sincerity of her friendship, her cheery talk encircled with quaint humor, her tactful sympathy so readily attracting young people, her love for flowers and her success in their culture which made her rose garden noted, her liberality to the church, and her true Christian spirit that rounded out the beautiful years of this good woman's life.

Sudden Death of Mr J. J. Thompson

Saturday evening about four o'clock the dead body of Mr. J. J. Thompson was found in the road about three miles east of Clanton, not a great way from his home. It is supposed that the mule threw him, and as he was suffering from heart trouble the sudden shock caused his death.

Mr. Thompson had been a resident of this neighborhood for nearly twenty years, removing here from Coosa county. He was a man of strong convictions and great courage, faithful to his friends, ever ready to help in the time of need. He was about sixty years of age.

The funeral took place at Mountain Springs Sunday, in the presence of a large number of his neighbors. A widow and several grown children survive him. May God be with them in their hour of grief.

Death of Mrs. Massey.

Mrs. Amanda Massey, wife of Mr. Alfred Massey, died at her home in the Littlejohn settlement, last Friday. A good woman, a devoted wife and mother, she will be greatly missed by her family and friends.

FOR HONEST WORK BY THE SOUTH.

By Wm. G. Cochrane, Vice-Pres. and Genl. Agent Tombigbee Valley Railroad Co.

(Written for the Manufacturers' Record.)

I have been thinking a good deal lately about the general condition of things, and have felt tempted to try and express my thoughts in writing. The principal thoughts that worry me most are two:

1. I am thinking of how to keep the country places and farming interest up even with the growth of the larger cities. It seems to me that the manufacturing and mercantile interests are growing too fast in proportion to the producing or farming classes. Our country needs more tillers of the soil now. It is time for some of our young people to realize that all substantial wealth is dependent upon the products of the earth, mainly the farm. In the South there is a monopoly of cotton. No section in the entire world has a more commanding position as to producing wealth than the Cotton States of the South. It was this that has enabled the Southern man to withstand all the drain upon his part of the country since the war. The cotton crop has been the foundation upon which we have builded. No matter how politics oppressed us, and no matter how the great capitalists planned against us, they have always been compelled to send their money South after our cotton. It has taken forty years, but today the banks of the South are full of cotton money; in fact, the cotton crop of the South is worth more per annum than any other single production, not excepting gold and silver and copper-mining output, and the blessing of it is that it permeates the entire population. Every family has a "mine" of wealth in its cotton field, and it gets its share of the vast sum of money that comes after the bales of cotton. The small farmer who raises one to five bales of cotton feels pride in having produced his own income without having to serve as a hireling to the richer man or corporation. It is like the blood in our body—it goes into every extremity of the body of people, or body politic, as me say. My idea is to call a halt upon the leaving of the farms for the cities. The cities are getting top-heavy, and need no more recruits at present. I could write more on this, but simply wish to outline my thoughts.

2. I think the time has come when all branches of business and politics should stop and consider which is to rule them in their action. Shall good honest work be done? Should our locomotives, our looms, our plows and wagons and nails and shoes be made worth the price intrinsically, or shall the makers slight the work and make it appear good and sell the same as if it were good, thereby wronging the innocent purchaser? Shall a man in official position act from a high sense of true manhood, or shall he let money or influential friends lead him to act contrary to his oath and his conscientious convictions of right? I mean to say that manhood, and not money, must be the test. The issue must be made before the entire country as to every department; the cheat must be treated with contempt; truth and honesty must be held at a premium. At present the reward is mostly for the bad work. This is all wrong and the reward should be for the just man. Manufacturers should be rewarded according to the quality of their goods. The people sooner or later learn who are reliable and who are not, and I think a little suggestion is well at times to keep our manufacturers up to the mark.

I have just written these pages to ask you what you thing of them or something in line with my thoughts. Our country is growing and rushing into all kinds of business. It is actually boiling over with activity. Men are pressed to find laborers to do one-half the work that is to be done. The South needs good laboring men and women badly. No man can make a mistake by coming into Alabama, Mississippi or Louisiana at this time. Along this line of getting more populaton I have a thought, too, and it is that the best way to get a good permanent class of people to live here is to try and bring young children and place them with good Southern families and let them grow up as one of the family. They will thus learn to love the country and will marry and settle in the country. The cities are crowded with many orphan girls and boys. If these could be distributed in the South and grow up they would soon add greatly to the labor on farms and be a blessing to themselves as well as to the country.

THE ROOSEVELT-LONGWORTH WEDDING IN THE WHITE HOUSE

Washington, D. C.—Before perhaps the most conspicuously august assembly that ever graced the famous East Room in the Executive Mansion, Miss Alice Lee Roosevelt, eldest daughter of the President, was united in marriage to Nicholas Longworth, Congressman from Ohio. It was the first White House wedding in nearly twenty years, and, according to the usual reckoning, the tenth in number.

All the form and ceremony of state entertainments were observed at the wedding. An early arrival did not particularly guarantee one a more favorable place, as the location of the President's family and relatives, the members of Mr. Longworth's family, the Vice-President and Mrs. Fairbanks, the members of the Cabinet and of the Supreme Court and other classes of guests had been marked out in each case.

These were the announced arrangements:

"No one will be admitted without the proper entrance card. In no circumstances will this rule be departed from.

"Carriages will approach from the north to the east entrance of the White House, opposite the Treasury. Pedestrians will follow the same route. After discharging passengers carriages will be parked around the ellipse in the White lot.

"The gates will not be open until the hour of 11.15 a. m. Two carriages will drive under the porte-cochere at the same time. Coachmen will be provided with numbered checks, which must be preserved by them in order to regain admittance to the grounds. Guests will be provided with tickets of the same numbers as their carriages. These they should carefully preserve in order to call their carriages, which will depart from the same entrance.

"After leaving cloaks in the cloakroom, guests are requested to fall in line and pass up the main staircase.

"Carriages for the southwest gate will approach by Seventeenth street. Guests holding special cards for this gate will enter the White House by the door under the south portico."

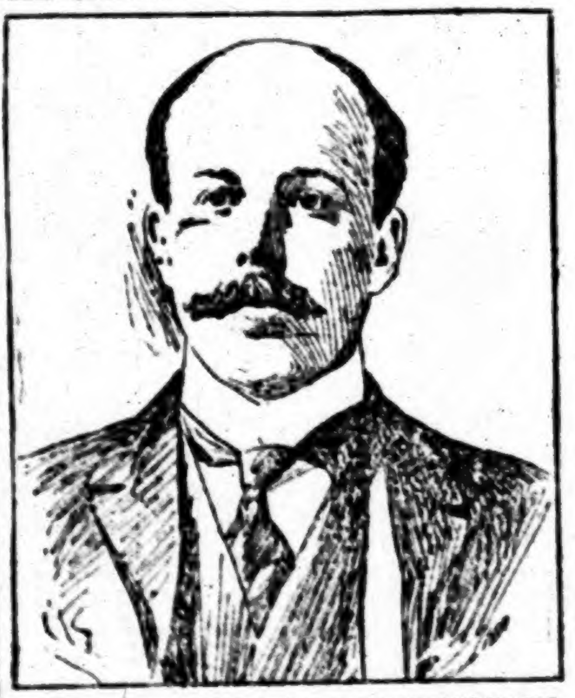
Between 900 and 1000 guests were at the wedding, and those in charge of the arrangements were delighted that everybody had a chance to see the nuptial knot tied, even those in the rear ranks, for the bridal couple and the officiating clergyman, the Right Rev. Henry Y. Satterlee, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, stood upon a dais.

It does not fall to the lot of any princess to be married under more auspicious circumstances.

The platform on which the couple stood while the ceremony was performed and before which passed the procession of guests who greeted Mrs. Nicholas Longworth for the first time formed a semi-circle. It was eight feet long and three and a half feet wide at the middle and about eighteen inches high. About the entire platform were circular steps leading up. From the middle the bridal party proceeded to the priedieu upon which they knelt during a part of the ceremony performed by Bishop Satterlee.

About the platform golden posts had been placed and garlands of flowers and white satin ribbon were arranged from post to post, leaving a gateway through which the bridal party passed.

The platform was built directly in front of a large window on the east side of the East Room, which faces the entrance to the main corridor so that as many persons as possible might obtain an advantageous view of the ceremony. A dark red carpet covered the platform, and the heavy golden brocade portieres which hang in the wide window back of the platform were used as a background for the flowers and palms which were banked about the improvised chancel.



HON. NICHOLAS LONGWORTH.

No pictures adorn the walls of this beautiful room, the large painted portraits having been removed some time ago by the Roosevelts, and nothing but palms, cut flowers and potted plants broke the gold of the decorations.

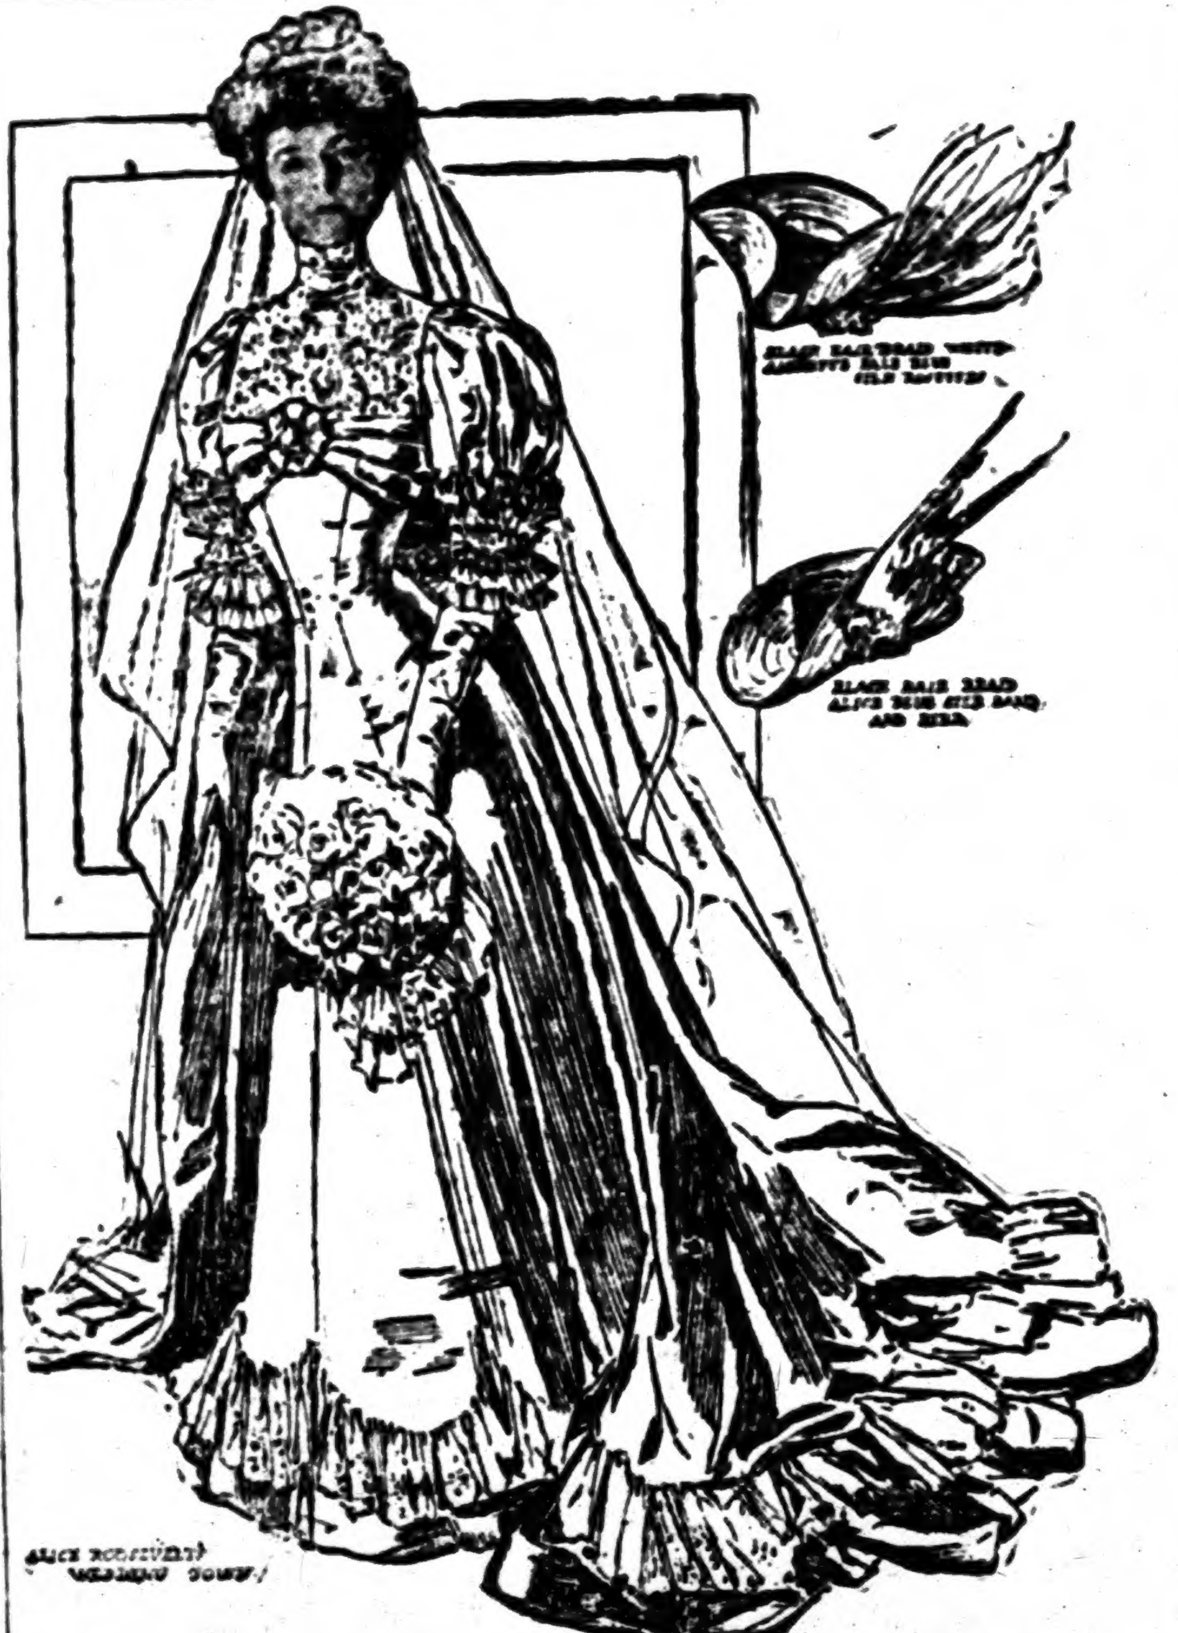
The wedding ceremony as well as the breakfast and reception were over by 4 o'clock, at which hour the bride and bridegroom left the White House for the Pennsylvania Railroad station, where they boarded a private car for the start of their honeymoon.

The completion of the ceremony, since the service was not performed in a church, was announced by the pealing of the bells of several of the churches here, and telegraphic dispatches from New Haven and other points say that the same compliment was paid the young couple in many parts of the country.

The bride, of course, has received much beautiful jewelry among her wedding gifts, but those that she prizes the most are from her husband. He has presented her with several pieces of jewelry of elegant design. He has also given three ring to his fiancee — the engagement ring three pigeon-blood rubies surrounded by diamonds and a solitaire sapphire set in Etruscan gold.

Mrs. Nicholas Longworth will have two homes. One will be in Cincinnati's Rookwood, the beautiful home of the bridegroom's mother. It derives its name from the number of rooks that make their home in the ancient trees about the place. It is the home, too, of the beautiful china originated by Mrs. Bellamy Storer, wife of Ambassador Storer, who is a member of the Longworth family.

The other is the Washington home. This is the Jones house, in Eighteenth street. It was built by the late John Davies Jones, of Cincinnati. It is extremely bright and attractive, standing on the corner of Eighteenth and I streets, N. W. There is an English basement, with a square hall and an office suite. Upstairs are the drawing-rooms and a dining-room with a capacity for twenty-four at dinner. There are plenty of living rooms on the upper stories, all with bright, sunny outlooks.



This is the exact description of the wedding gown in detail: It is a severely plain Princess dress, high neck and sleeves with court train. The gown itself is of plain white satin. The handsome court train, however, starting from the edge of the narrow yoke of lace, is heavily embroidered in silver marguerites. This is the special work that was done in the silk mills of Paterson, N. J.

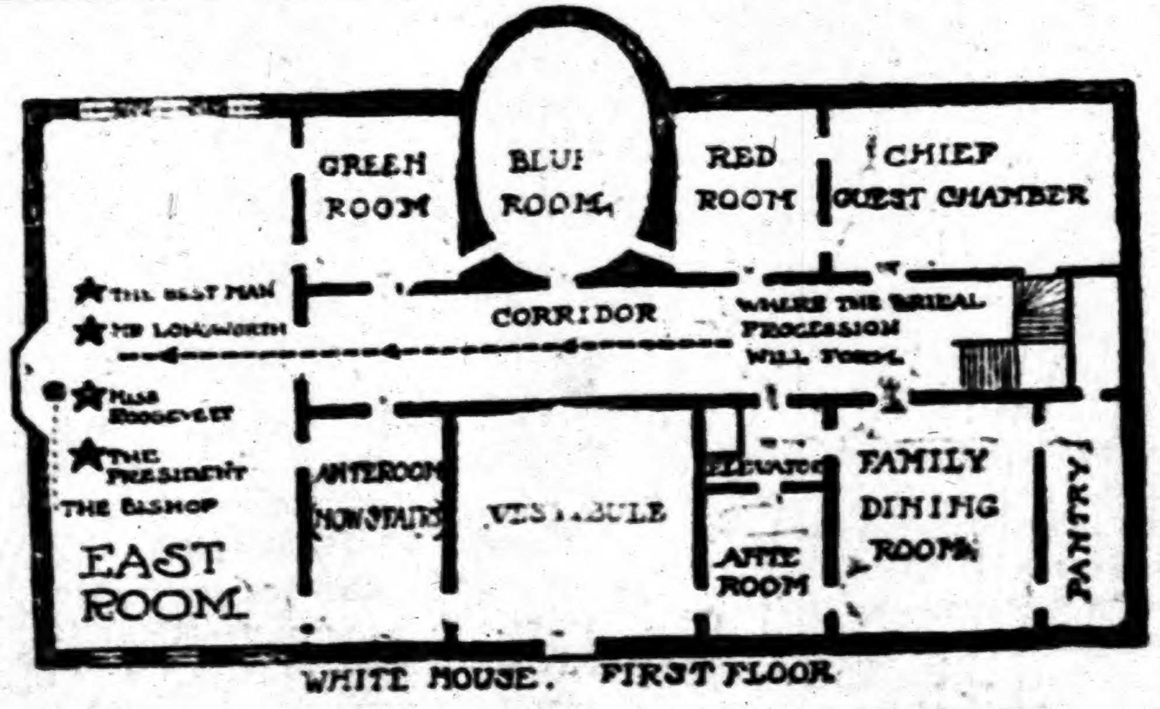
The yoke of the gown is made from real lace worn by Miss Roosevelt's mother on her own wedding dress. From this yoke falls a deep flounce of the same lace.

The wedding veil was purchased in New York. This was topped with a wreath of orange blossoms.

If Saturday's wedding were not remarkable for anything else, it is for the splendid display of orchids used in the decoration of the White House. Flowers played a prominent part generally in the wedding.

It became known on the day of the wedding that after the ceremony Congressman Longworth and his bride will go directly for the little rural Virginia home, Plain Dealing, where President and Mrs. Roosevelt spent some time last year; next they will journey to Georgia and visit the old Bulloch home, where Miss Roosevelt's grandmother was born, and then they will go to Florida and be entertained at the magnificent home of Henry M. Flagler, the Standard Oil millionaire.

Years ago, back in the seventies, in fact, Miss Nellie Grant, daughter of the President, became Mrs. Sartoris in the famous East Room of the White House. Mrs. Sartoris has arrived in Washington to spend a few weeks and on Saturday, as a guest of the Roosevelts, she witnessed in the same room where she became a bride the ceremony which made Miss Roosevelt Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.



THE ROUTE OF THE BRIDAL MARCH

SUICIDE OF BANK DIRECTOR.

William Degrafft Fearing Trouble in Bank Investigation Hangs Himself.

Mansfield, Ill.—The excitement over the financial affairs of the First National Bank of this town culminated in the suicide of William Degrafft, one of its directors and a retired wealthy farmer. He hanged himself.

About four months ago it became known that James C. Langley, cashier of that institution, had been speculating with the funds of the bank in bucket shops. Investigation followed which resulted in a showing that Langley was short $68,900.

Langley in settlement of the shortage turned over to W. D. Fairbanks, the President of the bank, who is a brother of the Vice-President, all the property he possessed, which consisted of a house and lot in Mansfield worth $2000. The father of Langley also turned over to the same person all the real estate he possessed, being eighty acres of land, worth $25,000, reserving, however, in this a life estate for himself.

The Grand Jury, which convened at Monticello, February 5, has had the affairs of the bank under investigation for the last few days.

William Degrafft was before that body and testified in relation to Langley's speculations. After he left the Grand Jury he thought he had made mistakes in his testimony, being under the impression that he had testified that Fairbanks was short $68,000, whereas as a matter of fact he had not so testified. Fear that this would cause trouble evidently unbalanced his mind so that on reaching home he went out to the barn and hanged himself.

FORCE USED.

Hungarian Delegates Refuse to Hear the Emperor's Rescript.

SOLDIERS CLEAR THE FLOOR.

Captain Mounts President's Tribune and Reads the Order While Crowd Jeers.

Budapest.—The Hungarian parliament was dissolved Monday morning with the use of force. The floor and corridors of the building were cleared by the police. There was no resistance and no disorder. The members of the coalition party declared that the dissolution was unconstitutional and illegal, and that they will hold a meeting Wednesday in the parliament building unless prevented by troops, in which case the meeting will be held elsewhere.

The session opened at 10 o'clock sharp. The vice president read letters from General Nyiri, the royal commissioner, and Herr Justh, president of the lower house, and declared that the royal rescript dissolving parliament forwarded by General Nyiri was unconstitutional and illegal and energetically protested against it. The vice president proposed that the house ignore the rescript and return it to the emperor-king. The house unanimously accepted the proposal with prolonged cheers. Thereafter the minutes of the meeting were adopted, the deputies were notified to reassemble on Wednesday, and then the house adjourned.

The royal rescript dissolving parliament was left lying unopened on the president's desk and the members left the house singing the Kossuth hymn. The floor was almost cleared when a captain of the Hungarian militia, at the head of five soldiers with fixed bayonets and a large number of policemen who had previously entered by a side door, entered the house. The captain and the soldiers mounted the president's tribune and the policemen occupied the floor.

The captain then opened and read the rescript amid constant interruptions from the galleries and some of the deputies who returned to the floor, and all present united in singing the Kossuth hymn, with the result that not a word of the rescript could be heard. The police escorted several of the noisy members from the floor and then slowly cleared the galleries and corridors. A large crowd of cheering deputies escorted Francis Kossuth, Count Albert Apponie and other leaders from the house, which was surrounded by five squadrons of cavalry, one regiment of infantry, a battalion of militia and a thousand policemen.

J., where he had been taken three weeks ago in the hope that the change might benefit his health, which suffered a break down two months ago. The news of the death was not given out by the family until some time after the end. Then Mr. McCall's son, John C. McCall, briefly announced:

"The end has come. My father has passed away."

Mr. McCall had been unconscious since about 1 o'clock Sunday morning, except possibly for one brief minute Sunday afternoon, when his eyes opened and looked into the face of his wife, who was bending over him. The governor is intensely interested in getting something done in this matter and he will not only pay these rewards but more if there are more convicted, and do whatever else he can to aid in the investigation. He will also furnish a special solicitor to try the cases if any are indicted.

Birmingham.—The talk over various applicants for the position of supreme court justice, vacated by the death of Chief Justice McClellan last week, has also given rise to discussion over the fact that there will be three justices to be chosen during the latter part of the year, including a a chief justice, as the man who is appointed to fill the present vacancy will only hold office until fall.

The terms of Justice Tyson and Dowdell are also to expire next fall, they having drawn the short terms when the present court was organized. The places will not be filled by election, as has previously been customary, but by the state convention.

One of the first applicants for the supreme bench, although he has as yet made no formal announcement, is Judge William H. Simpson, at present chancellor of the northern division of Alabama. Chancellor Simpson is said to have a very strong support in the northern part of the state, and is also strong in Birmingham, Montgomery and Tuscaloosa. Chancellor Simpson has served his home county with distinguished success for years. Washington.—The Post says:

There is no danger, whatever, of an uprising in China against foreigners," said Sir Chentung Liang Chang, the Chinese minister. "It is true, of couse that there is political agitation in Chna, but it's object is to create such excitement as to cause international complications with the view of crippling if not wholly destroying the present dynasty. My government is amply prepared to meet any emergency. If, as a result of the agitation now going on a worthy foreigner is harmed, the emperor's soldiers will pounce upon the communtiy that harbors the miscreants and lay it to waste should they be unable to find every one of the scoundrels responsible directly or indoirectly for the trouble.

"The slaughter of the Crinese by the emperor's soldiers will be more horrible than that of the Yuan's soldiers six years ago if the miscreants now at work to involve China in trouble do not desist."

"Is it a fact that Germany or Germans are mainly responsible for a large part of the threatening trouble with China at present?

"The Germans are aggressive," he replied. "Since the dawn of your civilization the Germans have been the disturbers of the peace and repose of other people and nations within what is now the Christian domain. They seem always discontented with what they have. Their energy appears to demand the whole world in which they bustle. I don't say that they are responsible in any sense for what is going on behind the scenes in China. I merely tell you that I have heard that stated n well informed and responsible quarters.

"The granting of consessions to foreigners has been a too fruitful source of trouble to be continued. And so we shall attend to our own affairs in the future and we hope the outside world—the Christian world—will permit us to do this.

New York.—The following cablegram from China has been received by the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions.

"Missionaries not in peril; everything is encouraging."

This message came from the mission station at Shanghai, and was a reply to a cabled inquiry made by the board yesterday.

London.—The church missionary society's secretary at Fu Chow, China, replying to an inquiry regarding the alarming reports of unrest in China, cabled Saturday morning that there was no cause for anxiety.

LONDON NOT WORRIED

Feels That Japan Can be Depended On to Keep Things Straight

London.—No news has reached the missionary societies in London of the report of disturbances at Nanking, and therefore it is considered that even if an attack had been made, nothing serious can have happened. There are some American students, at Nanking. Since the mission opened there thirty years ago, there never has been any trouble with the natives.

The London newspapers do not pay much attention to the Chinese question. The Morning Post thinks the advise and influence of Japan or China will suffice to prevent any serious outbreak, and that in any case Japan's army in Manchuri could be sent soon to restore order should real trouble arise.

China stocks fell heavily on the London exchange.

In an interview with the Hong Kong correspondent of the Tribune, a high Chinese official affirmed the existence of a dangerous anti-foreign feeling, especially in the region between the Yangste river and Hong Kong and predicted that an outbreak would occur sooner or later. This official suggested a concentrated action by the powers to enforce reforms on the Chinese government, which is in his opinion was the only lasting remedy.

Fight on Oil Octopus.

Murfreesboro, Tenn.—This place will soon have a competitor in the oil business of the Standard Oil Company. The Christy & Huggins Company will represent the Gulf Oil Company, which will get permission to erect tanks and make deliveries of oil to the residents of the city and in the surrounding country, running their oil wagons to all surrounding points. This place is a liberal user of coal oil and competition at this time is most welcome.

WILL HAVE RACE MEET

Anti-Race Track Measure is Declared Unconstitutional

The supreme court of Tennessee Saturday morning decided that the Rice-Ligon anti-race track bill, which prohibits betting on race tracks in this state and which was passed at the recent session of the state legislature is uncostitutional. The case came before the supreme court in the form of the state vs. Hayes. Hayes was indicted on the charge of violating the bill mentioned. The indictment against Hayes was quashed upon motion before Judge Hart, he holding the act to be unconstitutional, and the state appealed to the supreme court in order to test the constitutionality of the act. The grounds upon which the contentions of the defense in this case were based was in substance that the title of the act did not embrace the different offense specified in the body of the act. Affirmed. The same disposition was made of the case against William Gerst.

The decision of the supreme court insures a race meeting here at Cumber land park next spring.

BIG ELEVATOR IS BURNED

One Million Bushels of Grain Destroyed and the Loss Will Reach $1,000,000

Duluth, Minn.—The wooden working house of the Duluth grain elevator plant of F. H. Peavy & Co., of Minneapolis was burned to the ground Saturday night with it's contents, consisting of about 1,000,000 bushels of grain, principally wheat. The loss on the grain and house is estimated at one million dollars and is fully covered by insurance.

The elevator was known as the "V. P., and it is the receiving and shipping house of the great Peavy concern's storage house with a capacity of four million bushels. Fortunately there was no wind blowing toward other improved districts on the harbor front or the loss would have bee tremendous.

BATTLE WITH BANDITS

Two Are Killed By Robbers On the Chihuahua Pacific Railroad

El Paso, Tex.—At a point on the Chihuahua Pacific railroad some miles from Thomas, Mexico, William Smith and seven Mexicans, who were on their way to the Dolores mine with considerable sum of money, were attacked Saturday by four robbers and a bloody fight was fought, says a Herald special from Chihuahua.

Two men of Smith's party were killed and Smith was mortally wounded. The robbers made good their escape. The Americans have been arrested on suspicion and a posse is now scouring the country for some trace of the bandits.

Fires on French

Oran, Algeria.—The Echo D'Oran sayes that the French steamer Zenith left Oran Wednesday evening, going to Marchica. On her arrival at that port she debarked five persons who visited Delbief, the chief of the pretender's staff. Towards noon, perceiving the Moroccan gunboat, Turkey, which had been anchored in the bay of Melilla, leaving port, and coming in his direction the captain of the Zenith went on board his steamer, hoisted the white flag and gave orders with the object of entering into conversation with her commander. The Turkey thereupon fired a loaded shell without hitting the Zenith which put on full steam for the Zarafine islands, the Turkey pursuing. The pretenders shore batteries bombarded the Turkey but without touching her as she was out of range. The Zenith having a good lead and being out of reach the Zarafiines was brought up by a blank shot from the French cruiser La Lande,, and immediately stopped. The Zenith, the La Lande and Turkey arrived at the Zarafines when full explanations were furnished by the Zenith which was ordered by the commander of the La Lande to return to Oran, where she arrived this evening.

The passengers of the Zenith who were left at Marchica will be brought to Oran by the La Lande.

Must Serve Ten Years

Kroxville, Tenn.—Judge Joseph W. Sneed overruled a motion for a new trial in the case of Albert E. Edge, fcrmer day jailer and deputy sheriff under sentence of ten years on the charge of having indirectly caused the death of Lilah Johnson aged fourteen, employed in his family. Edge was convicted of being the author of her ruin, it being further charged that the girl was the victim of a criminal operation from which the blood poison resulted, causing her death. On the stand in his trial Edge swore his innocence, saying he had taken the blame to shield his son.

Philadelphia.—Active steps have been taken by the government authorities to break up naturalization frauds. Major Griffin, in charge of the United States secret service, was dispatched to Wilmington, Del., to confer with the United States district attorney, John P. Nields, with a view to obtaining evidence in that city. Chief Griffin said today that swindlers have obtained in cases within the knowledge of the authorities an aggregate of [illegible].

WEDDING

Of Nicholas Longworth and Alice Lee Roosevelt Most Brilliant Affair.

NOTABLE GUESTS PRESENT

At Ceremony in Historic East Room of White House—Assemblage as Brilliant as Any Ever Gathered There.

Washington.—With a plain circlet of virgin gold, in the historic east room of the white house, at thirteen minutes after 12 o'clock Saturday, Alice Roosevelt, the American president's eldest daughter, and Nicholas Longworth, the representative in congress from the first district of Ohio, were united in marriage

The ceremony—one of the most impressive ever performed in the executive mansion—was according to the liturgy of the Protestant Episcopal church, of which the bride is a member. It was solemnized by the devotional beauty of a cathedral service.

No ceremony of a similar kind ever was witnessed by a more distinguished assemblage. There were present as guests not only the most eminent representatives of the American government, but the personal commissioners of the Kings and potentates of the powers of the civilized world, constituting an assemblage not only one of the largest, but the most distinguished that ever was gathered at one time in the white house.

A halo of a hundred years of romantic white house history hung over the bridal couple. Miss Roosevelt was the twelfth bride, according to accepted authorities, to plight her troth within its classic walls and the identical spot where she today joined hands with the husband of her choice, "for better or for worse," is hallowed in the memory of another white house bride, Nellie Grant, who, thirty-two years ago, on the same spot, became the wife of an Englishman, Algernon C. F. Sartoris. Mrs. Sartoris was today one of the witnesses of Miss Roosevelt's wedding.

While the bride herself and the president and Mrs. Roosevelt had desired that the ceremony of the marriage should be quiet and simple as possible, it was found impracticable to limit the function, as was intended at first, to the immediate relatives of the bride and bridegroom. It became necessary to include among the guests invited certain official classes and personal friends of Miss Roosevelt and Mr. Longworth and, in all, the people bidden to the ceremony numbered a thousand.

Not since the incoming of the administration of President Roosevelt have the white house apartments been so exquisitely graced with flowers as they were Saturday. While no space necessary for guests was taken up with floral decorations, every room in the lower part of the executive mansion was brilliant with flowers and decorative plants. The decorations were planned and executed by Geo. H. Brown, of the government botanical gardens, who studied with the eye of an artist the color scheme of the rooms of the white house and developed his ideas of floral decorations in consonance with the coloring of the various apartments.

Fight For Blood

Philadelphia.—Two students at the University of Pennsylvania whose homes are in Paris, fought a dued on Franklin field with half inch point foils to settle a dispute which occurred in the class rom.

The principals were George Emile T. Belarami and Clataire Boudy, both of Paris. The two men are members of the senior class of the university dental schol.

The meeting was witnessed by thirty-five students. Pierre Jean Rousset, another French student, acted as referee.

The bout lasted for fifteen minutes. Towards the end of the affair Boudy, who did most of the damage and who was the only one to bring blood, slashed Beltrami's sword forearm, inflicting a gash about four inches long. The referee, however, awarded the bout to Beltrami inasmuch as he had made the first three touches upon his opponents body.

Chief Gerald is Dead

Montgomery.—Adoiph S. Gerald, chief of police of Montgomery died Saturday night.

Captain Gerald had been chief of police for about a quarter of a century and was well known throughout the country.

Excited Over Shooting Affray

Guin, Ala.—Guin was thrown into considerable excitement over the shooting of John Kennedy by R. G. Wright. It seems the shooting was the result of putting Frank Evans, who, it is alleged, was drunk into the calaboose. Wright was assisting Marshal Akers in getting Evans into the lockup, when Kennedy is said to have interfered, striking Wright over the eye, which led up to the shooting. It is not now known how seriously Kennedy is hurt.

THE BANNER.

Published Weekly at Clanton, Chilton County, Ala.

THE school election is over, and there is unquestionably a desire on the part of the people of Chilton county for the betterment of school conditions. The voters have determined that they are willing to pay additional taxation for school purposes, but of course they expect their money to be expended in a rational and business like manner.

Unfortunately, the election itself does not show any probability of this. As a matter of fact and of law the election itself is invalid and of no account, and the tax payers of the county have been put to an unnecesary expense, mainly on account of the county officers employing an incompetent third party to attend to the printing of the ballots. Why they should have done this is open to explanation. The printing of the ballots was given by the Probate Judge to a man who is not a printer, and who simply transferred the order (on commission) to a printing firm in Birmingham or some other place, and the consequence is the voters of Chilton were required to vote for a tax of "Ten mills on each DOLLAR'S worth of taxable property," instead, as the law provides, of a tax of "Ten mills on each ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS worth of taxable property," or in other words ten times more than the law provides. This of course was unconstitutional, and the election is invalid. It is possible that the court of County Commissioners, acting under the old local law, may levy the tax, but if so, why should the taxpayers have been put to unnecessary expense? If the election was according to law, well and good; if not, the County Treasurer has no right to honor the certificates of the Inspectors, Clerks and Returning Officers.

In Beat One, the "mistake" was noticed, and in consequence the voters voted almost to a man against the proposed tax, when it is well known that they were in favor of voting for the school law.

It is much to be regretted that the county has been put in this state of uncertainty. It is good Democratic law that the voice of the majority is to be accepted, but when through incompetent service, that voice cannot be legally ascertained the responsibility must be placed upon those who bring about the uncertain situation. Under any circumstances the old cry of a "Dirty Democratic trick" wont hold good in this case.

GOVERNOR Jelks, on last Tuesday appointed Hon. S. D. Weakley of the Birmingham bar, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Alabama, to succeed the late Chief Justice McClellan. The appointment was somewhat a surprise as a large majority of the counties in the State had endorsed the Hon. John R. Tyson, who is now and has been for several years one of the Justices of the Supreme Court, for this appointment Justice Tyson was also endorsed by most of the Circuit Judges and Chancellors of the State, and in addition to this he has made a very strong record both as Circuit and Supreme Court Judge. In making this appointment Gov. Jelks stood by his friend and campaign manager, Mr. Weakley, who is no doubt a good man and lawyer, but there is an old idea in the State that the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court should be, in addition to possessing all other qualifications, a man seasoned by experience as a judge, both on the Circuit and Supreme bench. The Supreme Court is over and above all other departments of the government in that it must say what the law is and all others must obey, and the friends of Judge Tyson say, that with his record and following, it goes without saying that he will win hands down if he enters the race to succeed Mr. Weakley in the fall campaign, and they are sure he will enter.

A National Necessity.

The progress of the age demands that the highways of the United States shall now after a sleep of nearly one hundred years receive the attention of the national government. The bills introduced in Congress by Mr. Brownlow, of the House, and Mr. Latimer, of the Senate, may not yet be perfect in detail, but they are practically what is needed—they point the way to the greatest possible good to the American people, and are essentially right, wise and patriotic in provision. It is as true as proofs of Holy Writ that no country can prosper under the menace of bad roads, and it is just as true that no other civilized country is so beset in this respect as our own. The bills now pending in Congress are fraught with the greatest interest to the American people, and if this same American people, convinced, as must be so, that their material salvation almost depends upon this legislation, will get at Senators and Representatives with personal letters and petitions, these bills will become law during the present Congress. The intelligence of Congress is not asleep; it is not dead. It is watching the people at home all the time. The people at home make the laws of the land, and Congress always is ready when the people demand. The liberation of Cuba was not provided for as a Congressional emenation. It was the voice of thunder from the people of the United States, detonating indignation and clamoring for justice and righteousness. The question of highways in the United States is another momentus one, appealing, though not in the same sense, for national help. The country is in distress because of bad roads. The States alone cannot supply the remedy. The government can extend its aid, and the happy change will soon be made. We draw no parallel between freedom in Cuba and bad roads here at home, further than to say that while the American government lifted the Spanish yoke from the Queen of the Antilles, and set a long oppressed people free, we here in the United States are still bound hand and foot to conditions as galling as anything this side of human slavery can be. The American people ought to be set free from bad roads. It can only be done by national aid. The Brownlow-Latimer bills point the way. We hope every reader of this paper will write to Hon. W. P. Brownlow and get a copy of the bill.

The Valentine party given at the lovely home of Mr and Mrs. C. W Plants on the evening of which the good Saint and Cupid begins was certainly an ejoyable evening of mirth. The entire house was beautifully decorated with smilax and ferns dotted throughout with hearts, under the supervision of the liberal and artistic hands of Mrs R. C Hanlin. Mrs. Plant was assisted in entertaining by Miss Florence Adair, who received the guest at the door, assisted by little Miss Mattie Lee Plant who represented Cupid (as her little brother grew timid and refused to serve) she was beautifully dressed in a crepe paper costume spangled with gilt hearts, which made her look more like a little fairy than cupid There were several unique features of the entertainment, but the most interesting was the crowning of the "Queen of Hearts" which Tom Crumpton Jr did very gracefully The supper room was a color scheme of green and red The following is the menu:

Oysters, (on half shell) crackers, pickles, fried oysters, ices in heart shape cakes, and coffee Comic Valentines were given as souvenirs of the evening

"This don't suit me" was the war cry, but we believe that cupid was the principal soldier in that battle, therefore all wounded feelings were bandaged up Mr and Mrs Plant certainly did themselves proud on this entertainment, and in behalf of those who had the pleasure of partaking of their genuine hospitality congratulate them on their success

Consumption

¶ There is no specific for consumption. Fresh air, exercise, nourishing food and Scott's Emulsion will come pretty near curing it, if there is anything to build on. Millions of people throughout the world are living and in good health on one lung.

¶ From time immemorial the doctors prescribed cod liver oil for consumption. Of course the patient could not take it in its old form, hence it did very little good. They can take and tolerate it for a long time. There is no oil, not excepting butter, so easily digested and absorbed by the system as cod liver oil in the form of Scott's Emulsion, and that is the reason it is so helpful in consumption where its use must be continuous.

¶ We will send you a sample free.

¶ Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

MADAME BERTHA KALICH IS WINNING FAME IN ENGLISH-SPEAKING PARTS.

Unfamiliar With English Language Six Years Ago, She Has Now Mastered Our Speech—One of a Race to Produce Famous Players.

With so much interest focused on happenings in Russia, it would be strange indeed if we did not receive a taste of Russian drama. The leading critics of the country are now centering their attention upon the Russian play "Monna Vanna" the title role of which is being essayed by Madame Bertha Kalich, a Polish actress who won fame in the Yiddish theatres on the Bowery in New York City.

Madame Kalich may not be considered a beautiful woman but through the naturalness of her acting she touches every spark of humanity that glows in the human breast. Six years ago she did not know a word of English, yet her mastery at the present time of one of the most difficult of all speaking tongues, is remarkable. Not only does she speak English well but she is familiar with five other languages—German, Polish, Russian, French and Yiddish. For years she has been acting at the Russian and Hebrew theatres of New York City. Her first appearance in an English speaking play was a year or so ago when she played the same part in "Fedora." Her earlier performances were disappointing but at the end of a fortnight she made a profound impression upon her audience.

MADAME BERTHA KALICH

So far this is the story of Monna Vanna for the American people are not accustomed to the mannerisms and acting of the Russian plays.

Madame Bertha Kalich is tall and of the brunette type usual to the Hebrew, with eyes that while most expressive, can hardly be said to be winning. She cannot be classed as beautiful, but her art has a mimicry which is sure to bring fame to her. Critics lay great faith in her possibilities as an actress. They believe that after thorough schooling on the American stage, the requirements of which are far different from those of the Russian, she will become famous, for she comes of a race which has achieved wonders. And when we encounter marked talent in the Hebrew race no one living can predict how many rungs of the ladder of fame may be traversed successfully. The greatest actors, not only of the present age but of the past, have been and are Jews. Of the women we have from Rachel to Bernhardt, and the men range from Dawison to Edwin Booth, while passing reflections may be given to the ability of David Garrick, Mrs. Siddons and a host of others in whose veins were some drops of Oriental blood.

Bertha Kalich's appearance in Chicago was greeted with an outburst of enthusiasm which continued throughout the many weeks of her performance there. Such a well-known critic as W. H. Hubbard of the Chicago Tribune in reviewing "Monna Vanna" and its leading actress, said, "Madame Kalich is enrolled in the list of great artists. She is now an actress of peculiar and uncommonly attractive qualities and gives every promise of becoming in a few seasons one of the most notable women on the American stage. Watching her during the week has brought conviction that she is the possessor of remarkable talents and that these talents are susceptible of a developing and shaping which can but place her high in the esteem of a large class of the best theatre-goers and add another great artist to the small list of really gifted players that our stage can boast. She has the power indispensable to any artist who is to endure and whose work is to be of any wide reaching influence—the power to attract the public."

TRAPPERS' PROSPEROUS TIMES.

Furs Worth More Now Than For Past Thirty Years.

The many trappers operating along the northern boarder will reap a rich harvest the present winter, meaning many comforts, even luxuries, in the log cabins of scores of sturdy settlers in the wilds of the northern country, who are mainly dependent upon their traps during the cold months for a livelihood.

The settlers and professionals in the country directly tributary to the Great Lakes look to mink, marten and otter to make their trapping operations profitable, and the pelts of these little animals at present command a higher price than at any time during the past thirty years, while there has been a decided slump in the prices paid for furs from the black, blue and silver fox which bring only $50 each now, where a year or two ago they were as high as $300 apiece.

Last winter $4.50 was considered a good price for a mink pelt, and it wasn't more than a season or two back that $2.50 was the highest paid for a single pelt of this kind. Now a choice raw mink fur will bring $11, and a marten pelt from $18 to $20, where $6 or $7 was paid last winter. An otter skin is worth $22 just as it comes from the trapper's hands, which is away above any price paid for more than thirty years. Quite a few fisher are caught through northern Minnesota and these are worth from $8 to $10. Beaver are very scarce in this state. They are worth from $7 to $9 each.

The higher prices paid for furs will also prove a boon to the Minnesota Indians, or such of them at least as have any business ability. A good many of the Indians trap during the winter, but the trouble with the majority of them is that they do not know the value of their catch and are likely to sell a $22 otter pelt for $4 or $5, and a $11 mink pelt for a dollar, or perhaps a pint of whiskey. The white man is well aware of this fact, and some agents make it their business during the winter to do nothing but buy furs of the Indians, selling them later at a handsome margin of profit.

These agents usually travel from reservation to reservation by dog team or snow shoes.

Even the little weasel, scores of which daily leave their tiny tracks in the snow on the outskirts of the towns are worth $1 each for their pelts. They were valueless three years ago, and two years ago were worth 10 cents each. For a time last winter the pelts brought 50 cents each. The weasel also belongs to the homologue of the American sable together with the marten, mink, fisher and otter. The American sable really is the marten, according to some authorities. It is commonly called the pine marten, and at first glance the only distinguishing feature between it and the mink is a spot of beautiful orange color on its throat, just under the chin.

A grizzly bear skin is worth $40, if in the best condition, but of course grizzly bears are unknown in the Lake Region. Many black bears are trapped and shot, however, by settlers, Indians and trappers.

Woman's Sweet Will.

On a pillar erected in Canterbury, appears the following:

"Where is the man who has the power and skill
To stem the torrent of a woman's will;
For if she will, she will, and you may depend on't.
And if she won't she won't, and that's the end on't."

Evolution of Woman.

When Eve brought woe to all mankind
Old Adam called her wo-man.
But when she wooed with love so kind,
He then pronounced her woo-man.
But now with folly and with pride,
Their husbands' pockets trimming,
The ladies are so full of whims
The people call them whim-men.

UNCLE SAM'S SECOND NAVY

GOVERNMENT MAINTAINS A TRAINING SCHOOL FOR REVENUE OFFICERS.

Plenty of Work and Study—Lack of Social Events a Feature of This Governmental School.—Daily Regime of the Cadets.

Uncle Sam has one governmental school which, while little known, is well worthy to rank with West Point and Annapolis in the thoroughness of the mental and physical training which it gives its graduates. This unheralded educational institution is located at Arundel Cove on Chesapeake Bay, about six miles from the city of Baltimore, and its purpose is to prepare for their profession the cadets or future commissioned officers of the United States Revenue Cutter Service.

It is only within a few years that the general public has been awakening to a realization of the opportunities and advantages open to an officer in Uncle Sam's "police force of the sea," in consequence of which there has been of late a marked increase in the applications for admission to the cadet school. Any young man not less than 18 nor more than 25 years of age and not less than 5 feet 3 inches in height is, if unmarried, eligible to appointment as a cadet, but no person should delude themselves with the idea that it is easy to get into the cadet corps, for the entrance examinations are quite as severe as those at either West Point or Annapolis.

However, all the examinations for the selection of cadets are strictly competitive. Political and social influences are entirely eliminated and this is unquestionably the most democratic school under the government. The cadet spends three years at the training school, each summer being devoted to a practice cruise on a bark-rigged vessel during which the young men get a taste of all kinds of sea duties and incidentally store up good health for the academic year, which extends from October to May.

The pay of a cadet is $500 a year and a ration of 30 cents a day, out of which allowance he is required to purchase uniforms and textbooks and meet his mess expenses. The sum of $10 per month is also withheld from the pay of each cadet in order that upon graduation he can purchase the uniform and outfit of a commissioned officer. When the cadet graduates he receives a commission as a third lieutenant in the Revenue Cutter Service at a salary of $1,400 per year. Three promotions will bring him to the rank of captain with $2,500 salary per year and an increase of ten per cent. for each five years' service.

A Strenuous Life.

The cadets at the training school on Chesapeake Bay lead a strenuous existence. They "turn out" at 6:30 o'clock in the morning and after half an hour allowed for dressing, report for drill which continues for forty-five minutes ere the call for breakfast is given. From 9 until 12.30 o'clock there are periods of study and recitation, then half an hour for recreation before dinner, which is served from one to two o'clock. In the afternoon there is more study and recitation with forty-five minutes' drill. Half an hour before supper and one hour after supper are allowed for amusement and then from 7 to 9 comes another study period. An hour of "skylarking" closes the day and the cadets turn in at 10 o'clock.

During the three year interim the future Revenue Cutter officers acquire a wide range of book learning including mathematics, English, history, law, hygiene, seamanship, engineering, astronomy, chemistry, civil government, etc. Incidentally muscle building is looked after by means of the "setting up" and other athletic drills.

While the officers in charge of the training school for Revenue Cutter cadets fully realize that all work and no play makes for dullness, no such prominence is given to social features as is the case at the academies at Annapolis and West Point. The Revenue Cutter cadets are at liberty on Saturday afternoons and these half holidays are usually devoted to "hops," but aside from these functions and such merry-making as can be crowded into the two weeks' vacation in the autumn or the vacation of one week in the spring, the young men apply themselves pretty closely to their studies.

BALDWIN'S NEW AIRSHIP.

Believed by Experts to Surpass any Flying Machine Yet Constructed.

Captain Thomas Baldwin believes he has found a way to navigate the air with fair success. Captain Baldwin, be it known, is America's foremost aeronaut, having been engaged in the profession of sailing to the clouds longer and more continuously than any other citizen of the republic. He began ballooning in the ordinary way nearly a quarter of a century ago. Then he invented the modern type of parachute and in his inventing and experimenting, went from one thing to another until he hit upon the dirigible balloon type of airship.

In the past half decade Captain Baldwin, who makes his home in Los Angeles, California, has built five different sky craft, all on this general pattern, but each different in many respects from its predecessor. He hopes to improve on even the new airship which has recently been completed, but the fact remains that this latest flying machine is so far superior to everything that has gone before it that it is well worthy of notice.

In the new airship the gas bag or balloon which lifts it has a capacity of 16,000 cubic feet of gas or nearly twice as much as the bag of the one which Captain Baldwin exhibited at the St. Louis Exposition. It is made of Japan silk, oiled inside and out. From this bag there is suspended by means of a net of cotton seine twine a framework which contains the propelling and steering apparatus of the airship and which is known as the "keel." In Captain Baldwin's earlier inventions this was built of steel tubing and each frame cost $700, but in the new airship the keel is of Oregon spruce, the lightest and strongest wood in existence.

A Powerful Little Engine.

The engine which furnishes power for driving the baloon is located about midway on the keel. It consists of a gasoline motor very similar to those in use on motor-cycles. The motor weighs about 75 pounds, is capable of 3,000 revolutions per minute, and able to develop 7½ horsepower, but it is seldom if ever that so much energy is required even when the aerial flyer is facing a heavy wind.

Attached to the keel at the forward end of the airship is the propeller, which is eleven feet in diameter and has two 18 inch blades of painted canvas. These blades whirl around at the rate of two hundred times per minute, but it will be observed that this propeller is at the forward end of the ship instead of at the stern, where it might naturally be looked for, and this gives the keynote to one of Captain Baldwin's most important inventions, namely, the scheme of having the rapidly revolving propeller pull the ship through the air instead of pushing it as a ship is pushed through the water.

Nearly fifty feet from the propeller, at the other end of the keel is the rudder by which the steering is accomplished. This rudder is about six by eight feet in size and consists of canvas stretched upon a wooden frame. Attached to the framework of the keel is also a tank which is capable of holding two gallons of gasoline. The navigator of the new Baldwin airship has nothing in the way of a platform on which to stand, but must balance himself on the skeleton framework of the keel, bracing himself by means of the net which suspends the keel from the gas bag.

Baldwin's new airship cost him more than $1,800 and by reason of the gas required to inflate it as well as other expenses, each ascension costs in the neighborhood of $250. The hydrogen gas which is employed to lift the balloon and to maintain it in a position where the propeller can do its work is manufactured by combining iron filings or borings, sulphuric acid and water on the basis of one part acid and one part iron to four parts water. This gas is generated in a big tank and is led through a rubber hose to the balloon.

THE NATION'S FORESTS.

BRILLIANT ADDRESS AT ANNUAL CONVENTION AMERICAN FORESTRY ASSOCIATION.

Secretary Wilson Sounds Warning Note on Forest Destruction—Million Acres Should Be Tree-planted—Everett Hale in Vigorous Speech.

Secretary Wilson has more than once manifested a deep interest in the question of American Forestry. Mr. Wilson has, in fact, for some years been elected and re-elected President of the American Forestry Association, a powerful organization, composed of public-spirited men throughout the country, which has probably done more than any other one influence to awaken national interest in the enormous destruction of the forests and the necessity for their business-like management and preservation, even to the reforestation of denuded areas and the planting of trees upon barren prairie lands.

That the movement in the United States is coming to be considered an important one is to some extent evidenced by the increased recognition of the subject by Congress, which is also due largely to Secretary Wilson's enthusiasm. When Mr. Wilson was appointed Secretary of Agriculture by President McKinley, his forestry division consisted of one forester, an assistant forester and five clerks and with an annual appropriation from Congress for forestry of $30,000. Since then forestry division has been advanced into a separate bureau of the Department of Agriculture, employing over 500 men and having an annual appropriation from Congress of upwards of one-half a million dollars. Fully a million acres of forest lands in the eastern part of the United States have been turned over to the Bureau of Forestry for management on a practical and scientific basis which will enable the cutting of the forest for lumber and at the same time insuring succeeding "crops" of timber, while over 100,000,000 of the acres of goverment Forest reserves in the west have also been turned over to the Bureau of Forestry for administration. It is probable that at least another 50,000,000 acres of public timber land will be placed in federal reserves.

REV. EDWARD EVERETT HALE.

Secretary Wilson in his opening address at the recent annual meeting of the American Forestry Association in Washington, uttered a clear note of warning against the whole-sale reduction of the woodland area in the country.

"No nation on earth is as successful in the work of destroying its forests as the United States," he declared. "The indiscriminate mutilation of the forests must be stopped; the matter has become one of national interest which can not much longer be ignored by the people or by our legislators."

After advocating the broadest kind of protective forest policy, he touched on the subject of reforesting certain sections. He thought that every day should be an arbor day, that every year should mark a notable advance in the effort to recover lost ground.

Plant A Million Acres.

"We should plant," he said, "not 10,000 acres nor stop at 100,000 acres, but should plant 1,000,000 acres in trees, and this would be, viewed from several points, the very best investment which the United States ever made. It would be a paying, money investment to the government, and it would be a tremendous help to our agriculture. The price of merchantable timber is increasing with great rapidity, while every one knows the very beneficial effect that has resulted from the planting of wind-breaks in the prairie states."

Another address before the Association by the venerable Edward Everett Hale, now the Chaplain of the United States Senate, constituted a clean-cut statement of the great necessity of prompt action to protect the forests. Dr. Hale is around eighty years of age; he remembers when the saw and the ax had scarce touched the giant monarchs in Ohio Valley, when the forests of northern Michigan and Minnesota were unbroken wildernesses, and when those of the far northwest, in that marvelous country "where rolls the Oregon," were a terra incognita. He has seen whole states denuded of their valuable timber and burned over by devastating fires due to reckless and wasteful methods, he has seen the axman and the millman move westward swiftly and surely mowing down everything in his course until there is practically no section he has left uninvaded.

At the present rate of timber cutting in the United States, 40 years from to-day there will be not an acre left of merchantable timber.

Common Sense Forestry.

"What are we going to do?" asked Dr. Hale in his deep voice. "We must use both common sense and sentiment in dealing with the forest question. It is a very great question. The individuals interested in American forestry, even though they be millionaires or multi-millionaires, can not accomplish anything definite and lasting unless the states and the general government can be awakened to the necessity of giving the cause large and substantial assistance which it merits. Common sense, in forestry, means that the forestry question should be put upon a business basis. In order to make a large, immediate profit forests are destroyed; they should be cut with some reference to the future; in other words they should be cropped. All the governments of Europe rely largely upon their forest lands for revenue. A similar condition should and could be brought about in this country."

THE SUNSHINE SOCIETY.

An Organization Which Brings Good Cheer Into Darkened Hearts.

Among the many societies organized by the generous men and women of to-day for the welfare and happiness of others none has quite so interesting a history and unique a character as the International Sunshine Society.

It is so broad in its scope that it embraces all the charities, yet is in itself no sense a charity, but an interchange of kindly greeting and the passing on of good cheer, material or otherwise. Sunshiners do not labor under any rules, but there is always the personal touch of sympathy which means so much to the unfortunate man or woman to whom fate has seemed unkind.

A more appropriate name could not have been found for the society, the members of which pledge themselves to bring sunshine into the lives of others; to do something each day to lighten someone's burden; to speak the cheerful word that may bring new hope, new life and energy; to take notice of the lonely; to do the little acts of kindness, thoughtfulness and generosity that manifest the human, sympathetic interest in one's fellow creatures.

Opportunities for doing a kindness are often lost for lack of thought; the members of the Sunshine Society strive to cultivate the habit of sympathy that will give them a keener grasp and a deeper understanding of the lives of those around them.

The Society is unique in that there are no salaries paid. The president-general, every minor officer and member gives his or her services. Even the necessary clerical work is freely donated. The personal sacrifices that every officer and member makes to carry on the work cannot be estimated.

Its Origin and Growth.

The Society was incorporated under the laws of New York in 1900 and today there are 400,000 enrolled members.

The Society is the outgrowth of a thought expressed by Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden in the office of the New York Recorder several years ago during the holiday season. Mrs. Alden was the recipient of a number of cards from her co-workers on the paper as well as outside friends. After enjoying the cards, she protested that she would have been better pleased if the donors had not written their names on them. This statement horrified her audience and with one accord every one exclaimed:

"What! You wouldn't give our presents away, would you?"

"Why not?" was the answer. "What do you do with yours?"

A laughing investigation soon developed the fact that the waste basket was the ultimate destination of most of the cards received.

"Let me give you the history of one pretty ten-cent card that came to me a year ago," said Mrs. Alden. "It had an exquisite poem on it, and I enjoyed it so much that I thought at once of an old uncle who would appreciate it and forwarded it to him. He, as I thought, did enjoy it, and so much so that he immediately recalled an old friend to whom it would appeal with special force. So he copied the poem and sent the card on. This recipient found the card so helpful that she, too, felt called upon to pass it on and before the seven days' holiday was over the card had carried its Christmas message to six different persons. Of course this is exceptional, but is still an example of the infinite possibilities of a gift accepted in the true spirit and then passed on, giving each one the double delight of receiving and giving."

The cards which had afforded the little sermon were spread out and were found to possess many possibilities of happiness, which the markings spoiled for passing on.

Inspired with this idea of sending out remembrances that might be multiplied four-fold a new set of cards was given to Mrs. Alden by the Recorder's staff and these cards were at once sent out. The thanks received for them were so pretty that an item was made of them in the New York Recorder. This caused further correspondence and resulted in a club for the exchange of friendly greetings. The name of "Chat" was at first chosen for the column, but in time the membership grew so large that the motto "Good Cheer" was adopted and in 1896 the name of the society was changed to the "Sunshine" Society, and its active members were to include all who were desirous of brightening life by word, thought or deed.

The growth of the Society has been almost phenomenal. From the parent society branches have sprung up until every State in the Union is represented with regularly enrolled presidents and organizers.

When a State has ten branches, each one consisting of at least ten members, it becomes entitled to a State president. Besides the thousands of members in the United States, there are flourishing branches in England, Japan, India, France and Germany.

The Society Motto.

The competition to furnish the Society's motto ran for three months and among the many thousands of verses received the following poem sent in by Mrs. W. H. Chase of Brooklyn was selected:

PRESIDENT-GENERAL ALDEN.

Good Cheer.

Have you had a kindness shown?
Pass it on.
'Twas not given for you alone—
Pass it on.
Let it travel down the years,
Let it wipe another's tears,
Till in heaven the deed appears—
Pass it on.

At the time the verse was selected no one knew the author and it was not for several years after the Society had adopted the motto that the writer was discovered to be Rev. Henry Burton, D. D., of Lytham, England. Mr. Burton wrote the poem twenty-five years ago and had almost forgotten it until the Sunshine Society brought it into prominence. Mr. Burton is rector of the Lytham Episcopal Church and has become so interested in the Society that now everybody in his church and Sunday school has become a Sunshiner.

Mr. Burton's parishioners are building a beautiful new church and Sunshiners the world over are planning to raise funds for a handsome memorial window bearing the poem which has inspired so many to acts of kindness and thoughtfulness.

The Dues.

One of the unique features of the Society is the payment of membership fees which consists merely of some kind act which will bring "sunshine" to some one. It may be only an exchange of books, pictures or flowers, or it may bring more material benefit. In one State a well known woman has paid her dues by educating some boy as long as she lives instead of placing a costly monument over her son's grave. In nearly every State in the Union the Society owns a wheel chair given in memory of some dear one. These are passed around to crippled and helpless ones and are constantly in use.

Though the Society has never solicited funds it is estimated that $100,000 has been given to carry on its work. From the International headquarters, 96 Fifth Avenue, New York City, nearly $60,000 has been expended in the past five years to make others happy.

Newspaper Aid.

The newspapers must be given credit in a large degree for the growth of the Society. Originating in a newspaper office it has everywhere received the endorsement of the press until today over 200 papers are regularly carrying Sunshine departments.

The Society has a publication of its own called the Sunshine Bulletin, of which Mrs. Alden, the founder and president-general, is editor.

Features of Sunshine Work.

Each State division of the Sunshine Society endeavors to have some established feature besides the individual sunshine each member strives to scatter. This work takes the form of day nurseries, homes for crippled children and aged ones, maintaining beds in hospital wards, fresh air and outing cottages, Sunshine libraries, lunch rooms for working girls, etc., etc.

The greatest evil the Society has to contend with is the fake sunshine societies grafters organize to defraud the public. The popularity of the Society and the ready response that every appeal of Sunshine receives has made it possible for these grafters to reap a rich harvest. Readers should remember that the only authentic Sunshine Society has Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden as its president-general and is called the International Sunshine Society.

THE BEGGAR TRUST.

REGULARLY ORGANIZED FOR THE PURPOSE OF MULCTING THE PUBLIC.

Ingenious Make-Ups and Cruel Devices Practiced—Arrest Made and the Principals Sent to Prison.—Famous Orient Beggar.

As old as is civilization, so old is the history of the beggar kingdom, for wherever have been found any collection of men, the beggars there played their business despite indifference and the scorn of the majority, yet always reaping their harvest from the philanthropic. The nearer one draws to the warmer countries more and more numerous one finds the professional beggar. Egypt, India and Italy are the worst examples. In countries which boast of their higher civilization beggary flourishes not through want or privation, but through a class of people who make beggary their profession and who have made a fine art of the methods of reaching the soft hearted. And beggars of this class do not seem to stop at criminality.

A recent case was noted in press dispatches of unusual brutality practiced by a beggar upon three children in Austria who had been kidnapped from their parents. The children told a terrible tale of suffering at the hands of the beggar who had broken their legs in two places and then twisted the limbs out of shape, so that in knitting together the bones would not set straight. The man sent the children out to beg for him and their pitiful condition made compassionate people give large sums because of their apparent misery.

Fake Deformities.

While a number of the beggars found in large cities are really deformed—blind, lame, maimed, crippled, or deaf and dumb, yet it is a known fact to the police authorities that there are establishments where idle, worthless and lazy persons are readily manufactured into objects of charity. The theme of one of the best of the Sherlock Holmes' stories is a wonderfully "made-up" beggar who fools the police and the regular detectives and in fact everybody but the astute Sherlock. Yet old hands in the detective force state that this principal situation is in no way overdrawn as applied to actual conditions.

THE KING OF BEGGARS.

A Close Corporation Suit.

Following the example of large corporations which form combines for mutual protection and profit, there was recently established in New York a "beggar trust" through the efforts of a one-legged youth who had left a comfortable home to engage deliberately in begging. His remarkable insight into business methods would probably have reaped him a greater reward than was derived through beggary. Organizing a community of interest among the mendicants of Park Row, he picked out favorable points throughout the city to which were assigned certain men. A lame youth would be placed at one point, a blind one there and a badly-scalded mendicant at another. That these beggars might not be molested in their work, lookouts were appointed for each, and at the same time made hourly collections of the money passed out by a generous public. These earnings were placed in a large pool, part of which was used in payment for legal representation when one of the "trust" might be arrested. At one time there were thirty men in the corporation, but the police of New York gradually got one by one of the members into the toils of the law and the "trust" was broken up.

PROSPEROUS SPANISH BEGGAR.

By Telephone.

"This is the residence of J. Pierpont Morgan. The house is on fire. Send an engine at once. This is Herbert L. Satterlee, Mr. Morgan's son-in-law, talking."

There was unusual excitement at fire headquarters recently when the telephone rang and the foregoing words came over the wire.

The engine was sent, and no team ever made a quicker run. When the firemen arrived at 219 Madison avenue, the home of the multi-millionaire, they found Mr. Satterlee in the doorway. The only sign of fire was a slender sheet of flame shooting out of the chimney.

"For heaven's sake, do not use any water," Mr. Satterlee begged. "You will ruin irreplaceable paintings if you do. The fire is in the chimney. But please be quick."

The firemen yielded to Mr. Satterlee's request, and used hand grenades instead of the hose. They found Policeman Daniel Kelleher on the roof. He had almost extinguished the fire by throwing salt down the chimney. The fire caused no damage.

Quickly Disposed Of.

A certain colonel is an authority on all military matters, and he is often besieged by cranks with pneumatic rapid firing guns, rifles, dirigible war balloons, and other martial inventions.

On one occasion he was sitting in his private room at the barracks with a friend when a servant brought in a card.

"Oh, send him in," said M "His business won't take more than a minute or two."

There was shown in a wild-eyed, long-haired man, twisting his soft hat nervously in both hands.

"Colonel," he said, "I have here"—and he took out a small parcel—"a bullet-proof army coat. If the government would adopt this——"

"Put it on. Put it on," said the soldier, and he rang the bell. The servant appeared as the inventor was getting into the coat.

"Jones," said his master, "tell Sergeant Brown to order one of his men to load his rifle with ball and cartridge and——"

"Excuse me, sir, I forgot something," interrupted the inventor, and with a hunted look he disappeared.

BULL RUN BRIDGE.

One of the Historic Landmarks of the Civil War.

About this bridge clings some of the heroic history of the United States—the old Bull Run bridge, and Bull Run, the little stream flowing under its arches. In the South a creek is called a run, and this stream in the North would be called Bull Creek. The bridge marks where the Warrenton turnpike, the war-worn road across Northern Virginia between the Potomac and the Rappahannock crosses the stream. It was here that the sanguinary battle of 1861 began—Tyler's division of the Union army on the east side or the right of the picture, and the Evan's brigade of the Confederate army on the west or left hand side of the picture. There was fighting in the neighborhood of the bridge in 1862, and a man standing on this old bridge could have heard the guns of a score of fights in the Civil War.

OLD VETERANS' HOME.

TWELVE HUNDRED OLD SOLDIERS ARE CARED FOR IN COMFORT AND PLENTY.

Maintenance of a Great Institution Through Compulsory Contributions of Men of the Regular Army.—Has Beautiful Grounds.

The National Soldiers' Home, in the District of Columbia is the only institution of its kind in the United States. The home was founded March 3, 1851. The idea of the establishment is said to have originated with General Winfield Scott, after whom the main building of the Home is named, and of whom there is a fine bronze statue in the grounds. During the occupation of Mexico General Scott exacted a sum of money from that country. The money was paid to him, and he asked Congress that it be set aside for the establishment at Washington of a home for disabled enlisted men of the regular navy and army. This was done. The Home is maintained by exacting from every enlisted man and officer 12 1-2 cents from each months' pay. Fines from court martial and money due deserters is turned into this fund. Improvements at the Home are contemplated, which call for the expenditure of over one million dollars. The Home has on deposit in the Treasury of the United States a fund of more than two million dollars. It should be borne in mind that the Government of the United States does not contribute one dollar to the support of this great institution.

No women are employed at the Home excepting those in the corps of trained nurses in the Home hospital. Much of the work at the home, farm work, dairying, gardening, road maintenance, housework, cooking, waiting on table, etc., is done by the inmates, who are paid for their services out of the Home fund.

There are about 1,200 veterans in the institution. Many of them are civil war soldiers, some were disabled in the West Indies, others in the Philippines, some in the Indian campaigns, and some were discharged from the service for disability incurred in camp and garrison. Many of the Home inmates are mere youths. Every honorably discharged soldier or sailor, who needs shelter, finds it at the National Soldiers' Home.

Scott Hall stands in the center of Washington's finest park. It is glorious in summer and majestic in winter. Washingtonians know this, and in fair weather a throng of persons afoot, awheel and with horse or auto show their appreciation of the beauty of the place. The grounds embrace five hundred acres of hilly or gently rolling land and fine vistas of the city and its environs may be had.

SCOTT HALL.

During the year a new administration building has been constructed, and a large addition to the hospital has been made. A new mess hall is projected. The plans for the new hall call for an imposing building of white marble, rock-faced, to conform in style of architecture with the Scott building.

According to last report of Gen. H. Hawkins, governor of the Home, there were 1301 permanent inmates on June 30. Some of them were actually in the grounds, some of them receiving out-of-door relief, some being in the government hospital for the insane, some absent on furlough and some in the general hospital at Fort Bayard, New Mexico.

What did she mean? Did she know what she was saying. Probably not, he decided. What had he said himself a minute ago? He could not remember. What did anything matter now? He went without a word.

The Other Man stared straight in front of him. His face was a mask. For a minute they sat very still. Then he turned round.

"Come," he said in an ordinary voice, "it is time to move."

She gave him her hand, and he helped her over chairs and wooden forms till they were at the back of the building. "Here?" she asked.

"No," he said, and spread his coat on the floor; "Here, please. The nearer the ground, the less smoke, you know."

She sat down silently, and motioned him to share the coat. Then suddenly she laughed.

"It's queer, isn't it," she said, "that we should think about getting our clothes dusty——now?"

He did not answer. He was twisting a button on his overcoat round and round; it came off in his hand. Suddenly he spoke. "You are very brave," he said.

She drew a quivering breath. "I'm trying to be brave enough for two," she said in a low voice.

He made no reply: he did not want to understand.

"I'm glad," she added hurriedly, "that we moved. Perhaps——he will not find us here."

He turned swiftly, with a rush of joy. "Elizabeth!" he cried.

"Then you are content here with me?"

She brushed her hand across her eyes. "Oh, I don't know what I'm saying. I'm angry and distressed and humiliated. I don't want to die; but if I've got to, I'd rather be near somebody brave like——like you.

"Elizabeth," he said passionately, "Don't you know——?"

She started. "Oh, hush!" she murmured. "It is so near——the end."

"That is just why," he said, and laughed recklessly. "In a few minutes it must all be over. Haven't we a right to make the most of them? Do you love me, Elizabeth?" He drew her towards him, and she did not resist. She was thinking shamefacedly of the grayness of her husband's face as she had last seen it. The blood of a dozen generations of pioneers and warriors was surging through her own veins and she scorned impending fate.

"Yes," she said absently, "I believe I do."

"Ah, say it again," he urged, "without the 'believe.'"

The smoke was rapidly thickening. She tried not to think of it. "I love my love with a B," she said flippantly, "because he is brave, and I hate my—— him with a C, because he is a Coward ——a Coward!"

His arms relaxed suddenly. "Ah, dear don't!" he cried. "Is that all? Is that the reason?"

"All?" she echoed. "Isn't it enough?"

"No," he said bitterly; "I'm a cad, but not as bad as all that. Are you blind? Don't you know what was the matter with him?"

"He was afraid," she whispered. "My husband, afraid!"

Neither of them noticed that in front of the blazing stage the fireproof curtain had suddenly finished its arrested descent, and that a semi-lull ensued.

"Yes" he cried with a revulsion of loyalty to his friend, "afraid of losing you. Surely you know what happened to his father and mother? Didn't you even wonder what he meant by "Not again this way?"

She shook her head. "Wives know so little of their husband's bachelor experience," she reminded him with a wan smile.

"They were burnt to death, when he was a boy" he said, "like this, in a theatre. He was with them, the flooring gave way taking them both with it, and leaving him on the broken edge, safe."

She covered her face with her hands. "Oh!" she murmured. I didn't know. What have I done?"

"He told me once," he went on, "that it had left him with the feeling that fire would never touch him, but that to think of anyone he cared for being in a fire made him—well, what you saw."

They were silent for an instant. "Hullo!" he said suddenly, "they've got the curtain down."

The two stood up. Firemen and policemen were everywhere.

"No danger! No danger!"

The words passed from mouth to mouth, and though they were not strictly true, the effect of the lowered curtain was magical. The crowd was preceptibly thinner, noticeably calmer, but round each exit were gruesome proofs of the violence of the panic.

"Elizabeth!"

They looked at each other. "It's John," she said faintly.

"Yes," he said, and his smile was bitter, "It's John. Good-bye. Forget it all, Elizabeth. Do you know"——he looked at his watch——"it's all happened in less than ten minutes?"

"Really?" she said. "It can't be possible." But her eyes were searching for her husband.

The Other Man noticed it. "Elizabeth!" he said, half shamefacedly.

"Yes," she answered, her eyes searching the crowd.

"You are going to make up to him somehow for——for saying that to him?"

Her eyes softened and she held out her hand. "That was nice of you," she said gently. "Yes, I am going to make up to him. I pray God, he will never know what I thought."

"Elizabeth!" He had found her at last. The Other Man slipped away.

"I've found a way," he exclaimed breathlessly. "Come along."

"Oh," she cried, "you've hurt your hand; it's bleeding."

He held out the other to her. "No, no; it's nothing. I had rather a bother with the doors and windows. That's why I've been so long."

She followed him silently.

When they were in their carriage and on their way home there was an awkward silence. Elizabeth had just finished bandaging his hand with the aid of both their handkerchiefs.

"Dear," he said at last, "would you mind telling me why you——you asked me to go away?"

She looked at him a reproachful pout. "Must you inquire into all your wife's weaknesses?" she asked

"I only wondered————"

"Of course," she interrupted, "I knew you would, and I meant to tell you. But you'll despise me. You've got a very unheroic wife, John. When I asked you to go I was——she went on steadily——"I was nearly dead with fright, and I couldn't bear to have you to see it; so I said the first thing I thought of to get rid of you while I got over it; What did I say?——I didn't know what I was saying, John. But——I did get over it."

His face cleared and he bent and kissed her. His voice was very tender. "Elizabeth, my wife——" he said, "Do you know"——he laughed light-heartedly——"I've been worrying like everything about it. I fancied you thought I was in a funk about myself. I—I thought you meant that."

She stared at him, then burst out laughing hysterically and threw her arms round his neck. "Oh, you dear, darling old stupid!" she cried.

"Don't you know yet that women never mean what they seem to mean?"

He made a mock gesture of despair. "So now that you seem to mean you are——well, rather fond of me, Elizabeth, what do you really mean?"

She smiled up at him swiftly. "That I consider you just perfect," she whispered.

Upstairs in their own room, when he had gone down to give some orders to the servants, Elizabeth wandered to the window. Her eyes were troubled. Suddenly she knelt down and buried her face in her hands. "God grant," she supplicated, "that he will never know——I do love him. I have always loved him——but that I should have thought him afraid!" FEAT OF AMATEUR ROBBER.

Met With Entire Success in Separating Man From His Watch.

If a man who was robbed of a gold watch in Chicago, under peculiar conditions which he will recognize from the recital of the adventure by the robber, will communicate with Hobart J. Allen, of Irving Park, Chicago, he can have back his timepiece, along with a profuse apology.

Mr. Allen recently bought a revolver to protect himself from hold-up men who have fleeced several victims in a long subway under the Northwestern Railway tracks. He was kept at his business until quite late one night recently, and starting home he put his pistol in his pocket with a feeling of much satisfaction.

The approach to the subway was dimly lighted by a single lamp. He plunged into the cavern and walked through. A figure dimmed the exit, and as the two men met, the roar of passing trains startled them, and they brushed each other in passing. A moment later Allen felt for his watch. It was not in his pocket. He ran back through the subway and overtook the other man just as he was emerging.

"Hand over that watch or I'll blow your head off!" he shouted. The man leaped over a stone abutment and ran. Allen followed and cornered him against a wall.

"I'll give you another chance," he said, leveling his revolver. The man, apparently too frightened to speak, gave him the watch.

Allen went home and told his wife of his adventure.

"Why, your watch is in there on the dresser; you didn't take it with you," she exclaimed. Now Allen is looking for the man he held up.

Twenty Years a Bigot.

Bacon—Why, I've known him for twenty years, and in all that time I never knew him to think the same way as I have.

THE WOMAN IN BRONZE.

Striking Figure of a Woman Who Died of a Broken Heart.

A story of unrequited love is mutely told in cold bronze and marble in one of the cemeteries in the city of Washington, D. C.

The story runs that a beautiful young woman, daughter of rich parents, fell in love with a poor and struggling artist. The attraction was mutual, but her family aspired to a wealthy alliance. Finally, filial duty won the day and the girl was led to the altar by a rich suitor. They lived together for some time, and the brilliancy of the match was the talk of Washington society. The woman's love, however, still went out to the poor artist and her husband, who had been informed of the peculiar state of affairs, could do nothing to win his wife's affection. All the gifts that money could buy were showered upon her, but to no purpose.

ST. GAUDENS' REALIZATION

To his horror, one day several months after their marriage he found his wife lying dead in a room in their house, the poor girl having died of a broken heart. Although deeply attached to his wife, he was struck with admiration by her devotion to his rival, and when she was buried in the family lot in Rock Creek Cemetery, he commissioned St. Gaudens, the scuplitor, to make a bronze statue of heroic size, depicting her as she was found, dead and covered with her bathrobe.

The figure of the woman is seated, with the bathrobe drawn about her, and the work is one of great strength. The bronze is surrounded by marble beautifully carved. In front of it is a long marble seat, where one may admire the work of art. No name marks the spot, but at each corner of the lot is a small marble block, about six inches square, with the letter "A" carved in the top. The entire lot is surrounded by a dense growth of pine trees, so that one not familiar with the spot looks in vain for the figure.

Character of England's King.

The character of King Edward, while Prince of Wales, appears to have been greatly misunderstood. Many scandals were laid at his door; many journalists and prominent writers found themselves unable to resist temptation of making him the theme of extravagant stories without foundation, or at best based only upon hearsay evidence.

While making no pretence to being a saint, his morals were neither better nor worse than the majority of his countrymen and it was precisely that fact that endeared him to them. The great influence that no other Prince possessed, and which was possessed by him in a superlative degree, was very largely due to his remarkable tact.

Thanks more to him than to any other, hard drinking, carousals, coarse and profane language went out of fashion. He would tolerate in the houses of respectable people no men and women who had forfeited their right to remain within their pale, and no woman of questionable antecedents could with his sanction consort with ladies or with innocent girls. Few people had any idea how well read he was. It was generally reported that his reading was very limited, and yet the reverse was true. No new book of importance, whether in German, English or French, appeared that failed to receive his attention, and many such were read and discussed at Marlborough House before their review appeared in print. Not a few of the French authors were accustomed to send him their first copies.

His faults, never grave or serious, simply served to bring out in greater prominence the many attractive points of his character, and since his accession to the throne even those faults have grown less and his virtues and ability become brighter and greater.

From a Diplomat's Diary.

Home from the Philipines.

I've been thinking, since our boy returned to us one morning,
And in spite of all our doubts and fears
he stood before our view,
What was written by a friend of his, so cheerily and brightly,
"Not to ever trouble trouble till trouble troubles you."
The lad returned in safety, spite of chills and spite of fever,
Spite of all the many dangers of the land
and of the sea,
Spite of anything we dreaded, spite of faith evinced by neither;
Hereafter let no trouble trouble you nor trouble me;
For when the skies are darkest and a threatened storm surrounds us,
Shutting out the glorious sunlight from our nearer sighted view,
Then appears the "silver lining" that on every cloud is shining;
So never, trouble trouble till trouble
troubles you.
That every back is fitted for the burden that is given
Is a saying trite, if ancient, while it's always proven true,
And if the burden's grievous, the good
Lord will arrange it
That the trouble will be gone before the trouble troubles you.
"Tis shown that both our hopes and fears are half anticipation,
For midnight terrors vanish with the early morning dew,
And when the night is darkest the dawn is just a-breaking;
Then don't ever trouble trouble till trouble troubles you.

Let this "1900" Gravity Washing Machine do your Washing Free.

An unseen power, called Gravity, helps run this washing machine.

By harnessing this power, we make it work for you. You start the washer by hand, then Gravity-power takes hold and does the hardest part.

And it makes this machine turn almost as easy as a bicycle wheel does.

Gravity, you know, is what makes a stone roll down hill.

This machine has just been invented and we call it the "1900" Gravity Washer.

There are slats on the inside bottom of the tub. These slats act as paddles, to swing the water in the same direction you revolve the tub.

You throw the soiled clothes into the tub first. Then you throw enough water over the clothes to float them.

Next you put the heavy wooden cover on top of the clothes to anchor them, and to press them down.

This cover has slats on its lower side to grip the clothes and hold them from turning around when the tub turns.

Now we are all ready for quick and easy washing.

You grasp the upright handle on the side of the tub and, with it, you revolve the tub one-third way round, then gravity pulls it the other way round.

The machine must have a little help from you, at every swing, but Gravity-power does practically all the hard work.

You can sit in a rocking chair and do all that the washer requires of you. A child can run it easily full of clothes.

When you revolve the tub the clothes don't move.

But the water moves like a mill race through the clothes.

The paddles on the tub bottom drive the soapy water THROUGH and through the clothes at every swing of the tub. Back and forth, in and out of every fold, and through every mesh in the cloth, the hot soapy water runs like a torrent. This is how it carries away all the dirt from the clothes, in from six to ten minutes by the clock.

It drives the dirt out through the meshes of the fabrics WITHOUT ANY RUBBING,—without any WEAR and TEAR from the washboard.

It will wash the finest lace fabric without breaking a thread, or a button, and it will wash a heavy, dirty carpet with equal ease and rapidity. Fifteen to twenty garments, or five large bed-sheets, can be washed at one time with this 1900 "Gravity" Washer.

A child can do this in six to twenty minutes better than any able washer-woman could do the same clothes in TWICE the time, with three times the wear and tear from the washboard.

This is what we SAY, now how do we PROVE it? We send any reliable person our 1900 "Gravity" Washer free of charge, on a full month's trial, and we even pay the freight out of our own pockets.

No cash deposit is asked, no notes, no contract, no security.

You may use the washer four weeks at our expense. If you find it won't wash as many clothes in FOUR hours as you can wash by hand in EIGHT hours, you send it back to the railway station,—that's all.

But, if, from a month's actual use, you are convinced it saves HALF the time in washing, does the work better, and does it twice as easily as it could be done by hand, you keep the machine.

Then you mail us 50 cents a week till it is paid for. Remember that 50 cents is part of what the machine saves you every week on your own, or on a washer-woman's labor. We intend that the 1900 "Gravity" Washer shall pay for itself and thus cost you nothing.

You don't risk a cent from first to last, and you don't buy it until you have had a full month's trial.

We have sold approaching half a million "1900" Washers on a month's free trial and the only trouble we've had has been to keep up with our orders.

Could we afford to pay freight on thousands of these machines every month, if we did not positively KNOW they would do all we claim for them? Can you afford to be without a machine that will do your washing in HALF THE TIME, with half the wear and tear of the washboard, when you can have that machine for a month's free trial, and let it PAY FOR ITSELF? This offer may be withdrawn at any time it overcrowds our factory.

Write us TODAY, while the offer is still open, and while you think of it. The postage stamp is all you risk. Write me personally on this offer, viz. R. F. Bieber, General Manager of "1900" Washer Company, [illegible] Henry St., Binghamton, N. Y., or [illegible] Yonge St., Toronto, Canada.

BIG PROFITS IN CHICKENS.

GUY ELLIOTT MITCHELL.

We all know that there is big money in poultry. How much there is in it for us, depends entirely upon ourselves and whether or not we are keeping up with the procession in raising the kind of chickens which bring the most cash and in getting them into the market at a time when the demand is greatest. The value of poultry production for the United States this season was but a shade under that of wheat or cotton, amounting to over half a billion dollars. Since the perfection of the incubator, the importance of the industry has been greatly augmented. By the use of this splendid device it is now comparatively e sy to bring in large quantities of chickens for the winter and early spring market when p ces are very attractive. Hens can be urged but they can not be made to set if they do not wa to; the incubator can be set at any time. All that is necessary is a proper regard to the temperature, and to the brooding of the young chicks during the tender period of their existence. The incubator has interested thousands of women and children in the work of chicken raising, and it is not to be said that the returns are less profitable than plowing or other heavy manual labor.

Cheap Machines the Most Expensive.

There are many excellent incubators upon the market, but there are also many cheap, imperfect machines, the purchasers of which, failing to secure good results, become disgusted and inform their neighbors that artificial incubation is a failure and a fake. On the other hand, the purchaser of a good machine—one which will do its work well—is usually so successful that others in the neighborhood quickly follow his example. Nevertheless, there is no danger of the poultry business being overdone. It is one of the most staple and profitable lines of business in the world to-day, for its products are always in increasing demand in every town and city in the world, and throughout the entir year.

But before going into the incubator business it is necessary to have some good egg producing machinery, that is, good, laying hens and comfortable and cheerful quarters, along with a go d system of feeding, to induce them to lay. The fertility of eggs is also affected by the conditions of the hens.

The agricultural papers and poultry journals are replete with information upon the management of incubators, and many books have been published on the subject; but a great many farmers and farmers' wives do not see these journals or books. However, let it be known that the operation of an incubator is easy and simple, and once that almost superstitious dread that some people have of taking up something new and apparently intricate is overcome, and there will be little trouble in teaching the uses and management of the ordinary hatching machine.

Not Difficult to Manage.

While there is nothing complex or difficult about the successful operation of an incubator, close attention and exactness are necessary; yet the results are more than worth the effort. The woman who fills her lamps regularly every morning, and the man who winds his watch or clock at the same hour every evening, need not fear the task of running an incubator; but unless one is willing to attend to the few wants of his machine at the right time, it will be unreasonable to look for a good hatching of chickens from the best incubator upon the market.

The writer has used incubators and has found great delight in hatching large flocks of fine chickens from them, but it was necessary to do a little experimenting first to get the machine in good working order, to keep the lamp trimmed so that it burned a clear, white flame and to do a dozen other little things, which in a very short time made the owner as familiar with the incubator as with any other simple piece of farm machinery.

The period of incubation is always one of expectancy and when the chicks begin to come forth from the shell there is either keen joy or a decided dampening of ardor, according as to the results of the hatch. But don't become discouraged if the first hatch brings you only 50 per cent. of chickens. Go right ahead, determined to omit the mistakes of the first trial and aim for 85 or 90 per cent. of the next hatching, which you should get if you have a good incubator and handle it properly. After a little practice you come to know your machine, how it is acting and what it will do, as well as you know your driving horse, in fact you can gauge it even more closely, for it is a machine and you can control it to a nicety.

There are hot air machines and hot water machines, there are small machines and big machines—machines to meet every need and requirement; the only thing is to get a good machine.

An Attractive Side Line.

The poultry business on the farm has always been considered largely within the province of the women folks, and the enlargement of the industry by utilizing incubators has not changed the situation, except that many others than farmers' wives are now raising chickens from incubators.

"Modern chicken raising, as it has been adopted by thousands of people owning small rural homes," said an incubator agent to me recently, "accounts for the sale of an enormous number of our incubators and brooders. In fact, it is among this class largely that we do business, and they are making the money out of it. A vast field is still open among the more conserva'ive residents of the interior farm sections, who still stick to old methods, unaware of the comparative simplicity of a good incubator and of the great profit possible through its use."

Breeding Up the Flock.

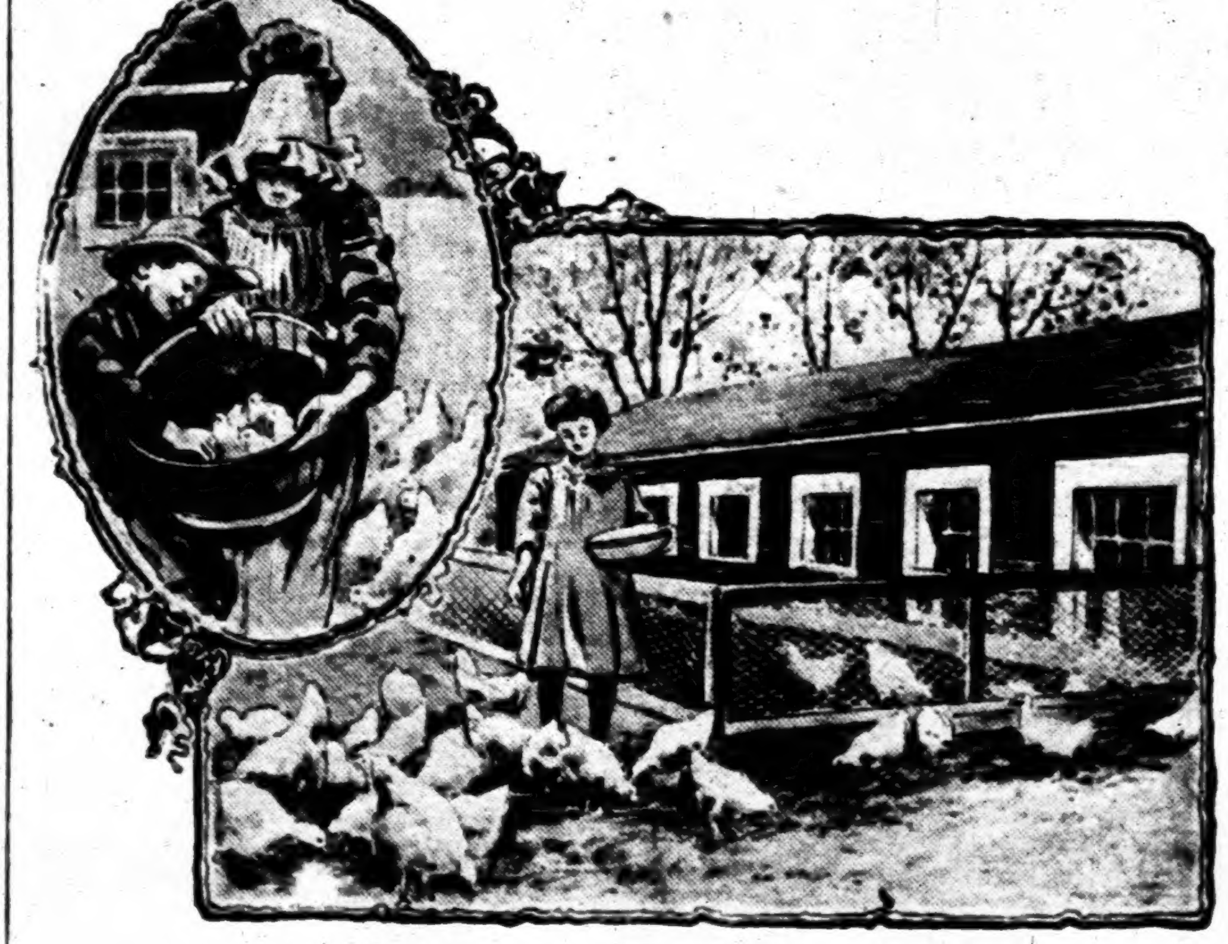
Even through the medium of the barnyard flock, regarded by ny farmers as a very insignificant part of their livestock, a very great addition to the yearly income is realised. The flock supplies eggs and meat for the home throughout the year, and even if no additional income results, the barnyard flock has served a great purpose. However, it is such an easy matter to breed up a nondescript lot of chickens into a big laying, heavy weighted and highly profitable flock, that it seems strange that there should be a single flock of dung-hills throughout the country. It costs no more to feed and care for a broad breasted Plymouth Rock, or a Wyandotte, or a huge Light Brahma, or any of a dozen other splendid standard varieties than it does for the common scrub, and with the low price at which good eggs, or practically pure bred cockerels can be had, it is the easiest thing imaginable to have, after two or three years of systematic breeding, a flock of chickens producing three times the profit of the original flock.

Standard Kinds of Chickens.

A fascinating little bulletin has been issued by the Department of Agriculture (farmers' bulletin No. 51) which is replete with illustrations of the principal standard varieties of chickens, the reading of which by any chicken grower, however small, should certainly stimulate a New Year resolution to make the flock a real money earner. This bulletin, while it will prove, probably, a mere stimulant for mo e extensive literature on the subject, can be obtained without cost from Senators and Members of Congress, or the Secretary of Agriculture, and the proof of its popularity is apparent in the seven or eight editions which it has been neessary to publish to supply the demand throughout the country.

Caponizing Fowls.

One of the most attractive features of poultry raising is the production of capons. This is a story all by itself. It is an experiment which one can enter into and with a very slight expenditure for a set of instruments, can follow it to any degree desired. It requires some judgment and a little attention, but caponizing is not difficult; it is one of those things which, while it looks, in the beginning, to be a hard proposition, gradually comes to you all of itself, so that the first thing you know you become almost an expert, and the reward is very considerable. Capons always sell readily and at a good advance in price. The birds become very docile and easily handled and are always money makers. The readiness wit which the new capon recovers from the wound is a revelation as to the splendid physical make-up of a chicken. Any boy or girl who has ever succeeded in skinning and stuffing a bird will take hold of the caponizing idea with avidity; in fact, caponizing is by far the easier job; it is as easy as the skinnng operation, for in bird mounting the stuffing is the really difficult part.



FAMILIAR POULTRY SCENES

ORIENTAL INCUBATORS.

Peculiar Facility of Chinese for Artificial Hatching.

If we are to look the beginning of any particular industry, we are usually told that we might find that this particular work was first carried on in China. This applies as well to the artificial hatching of eggs. Throughout China the hatching of eggs by heat is a very large and important industry and has been practiced since very ancient times. The Oriental who desires to hatch eggs by artificial heat first constructs a building of sun-dried brick, plastered on the outside with mud. Completely fill one side and the other also, except for door space and sufficient room for a man to test the eggs, are round, barrel-like mud brick walls with earthen jars set into them. This jar is very deep, and comes within six or eight inches of the ground. The conical bottom is filled with ashes to the depth of eight or nine inches, to keep the temperature more uniform and to avoid sudden changes of temperature when doors are opened and there is a strong wind. On the top of the ashes is thrown a bit of old mat or similar material to keep the baskets of eggs clean and to prevent raising a dust when they are taken out. For holding the eggs a basket is used that leaves a space of about an inch between it and the inner wall of the jar. Round and full, these baskets each hold from 1200 to 1350 eggs.

After the eggs are put into the basket a slow smoldering fire, made with very fine charcoal, is started. After a day the eggs are taken out, a handful at a time, and put into a similar basket. This is done from two to four times each day according to the temperature. The Chinese use no thermometer to test the degree of heat attained in the incubator, the eggs being simply touched to the eyeball. After being in the incubator for four days the eggs are tested to see if they contain a living germ, by holding them up to the light and looking through them. Eggs containing no living germs are sold on the street for food at about one-sixth of a cent each.

After being tested they are kept in the jars for seven days, being changed as before. This makes a total of eleven days in the jars. Then they are taken in a bamboo basket and rolled out on a mat on the platform above the jars. Here they remain until hatched. The only heat they receive is from the room, except during cold weather they are covered with a heavy quilt. After they are hatched the chicks are put in shallow baskets for a short time to gain strength and then they are ready for sale. The hatch by th remarkable method is from 60 to 70 per cent.

THE AMERICAN INCUBATOR IN TURKEY.

After testing, it is stated that 90 per cent. of those remaining will hatch.

This style of incubator probably would not suit American requirements, but the idea of utilizing the heat of the room during the later stages of incubation is very valuable, as it economizes both heat and space.

POULTRY FEEDING.

An Important Phase of the Chicken Growing Industry.

Poultry feeding is sometimes a most serious problem to those who desire to make this line a specialty. Experience has shown that there are certain special lines of agricultural operations with which poultry raising may advantageously be connected. In dairying there is usually a large quantity of skim milk or butter-milk which may be utilized to furnish a considerable part of the poultry ration. Upon the fruit farm fowls are also of advantage. They keep down insect pests and they may have a free range a greater part of the season without the possibility of doing any damage. Plum growers have found poultry especially useful in obliterating the curculio, and even the apple crop has been considerably benefited. If it is found that the fowls injure small fruits it is best that they be confined during the limited season when the fruit is ripening. Waste fruits, either in winter or summer, are a welcome and valuable addition to the poultry ration.

The market garden also furnishes a large amount of waste products which may be utilized for poultry feed. There is the waste lettuce, the small heads of cabbage, the unsold beets, carrots and potatoes, the green corn which cannot be marketed for any purpose, the waste of the small fruits, etc. If properly cared for the hens will bring a ste y and reliable income during the winter months. Dried clover, roots, tubers, etc., should be saved for them during the winter. These should be steamed and fed with the mash or cabbages, and beets may be fed raw. A catch crop of buckwheat or oats and peas will furnish much food at little expense. Bran, meat, meal, wheat screenings and oats purchased for poultry will bring good returns in eggs and will also dd materially to the fertilizer supply.

Had Learned the Business.

An honest and, singular as it may seem, a stupid Irishman, who had worked for a coal dealer half a year, and shown no capacity to learn his duties, was finally discharged. "Go to the office and get your money. I've been patient with you, but you are too thickheaded to learn anything," said the proprietor. "All roight, sir," answered Barney; "mebbe Oim t'ick-headed, as yez say, but Oi've learned wan t'ing, annyway." "If you have, and learned it well, I'll not discharge you," said the proprietor, banteringly; "now, what have you learned?" "Oi've learned, sor, that siventeen hundred makes a ton in this place," replied Barney, and he went back to work.

DR. J. E. ENNIS

Atlanta, Ga., Physician Addresses the People of Clanton on a Matter of Health.

"To Whom It May Concern:—Of late there has been a good deal of discussion in regard to advertised medicines, their value and power to cure.

I want to say to the people of Clanton that I believe the most valuable cod liver oil preparation, the best body-builder, health restorer, and strength creator, known to medicine to day is Vinol.

While Vinol does not contain the system clogging oil of old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions, it actually does contain all the curative, medicinal principles of the cod's liver in a highly concentrated form, and it is delicious to take.

I advise Vinol in my practice, and find it has no equal for healing coughs colds, bronchial troubles and sore lungs.

I have used Vinol in many cases of indigestion, mal-assimilation, and for patients who were anaemic and run down, with splendid results. I have found Vinol to be a boon to the aged, as it aids the enfeebled system to sustain life; it induces appetite, and restful sleep, it is a real body-builder, and thus prolongs life.

I believe Vinol to be well worthy of any honest physician's endorsement."

The Upchurch Drug co., sells Vinol to the people of Clanton on a positive guarantee; if it fails to give satisfaction the entire purchase money will be refunded.

Norway's Queen.

The new queen of Norway, as all the world knows, is the youngest daughter of King Edward and was married to Prince Charles of Denmark in 1896. She has one child, a little boy of two and a half years whom she idolizes. Indeed, her love of children is proverbial, and many good stories are told concerning her and the little ones. Once when a class was being examined before the princess she took a shy little girl on her knees, and every one was astonished at the way in which the child replied to the questions put to her. Afterward, when asked how she learned her lessons so well, the mite replied, "Please, the lady told me what to say." The queen is one of the cleverest members of the British royal family, and, like her husband, is extremely fond of sport. She is an expert linguist and can speak five languages. She is also a keen cyclist and has ridden through the crowded streets of London on her machine. As Princess Maud she was never fond of ostentation and often expressed her dislike of court life.

Sixty years ago England led Europe in the increase of population; now it ranks as sixth. The increase per million per year is 15,000 in Germany, 13,600 in Russia, 12,300 in Holland, 10,400 in Switzerland, 10,100 in Belgium, 9,400 in Great Britain.

Some Royal Nicknames.

Nicknames are very prevalent among British royal princesses, most of whom have names by which they are affectionately known by their relatives. The king's youngest daughter, Princess Charles of Denmark, was always Harry with her brothers at Sandringham, while her eldest sister, the Duchess of Fife, earned for herself the nickname of Her Royal Shyness, which is as appropriate now as it was then.

Princess Victoria of Sleswick-Holstein, the eldest daughter of Princess Christian, is called Thora, and in her case the nickname is almost a necessity, for among her late majesty's descendants the name of Victoria is too general to be distinctive. That, no doubt, is why the Prince of Wales' little daughter, who started as Princess Victoria, is now known as Princess Mary.

Princess Thora was one of the most constant companions of Queen Victoria, and the death of her royal grandmother was a great grief to her. She is a most charming and lovable woman and has many friends.

THE PULPIT.

AN ELOQUENT SUNDAY SERMON BY DR. DONALD SAGE MACKAY.

Subject: How to Grow a Soul.

New York City.—Sunday morning, in the Collegiate Church, the Rev. Dr. Donald Sage Mackay preached on "How to Grow a Soul." The text was from II Peter iii:18: "Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Dr. Mackay said:

In the course of my reading the other evening I came across this striking and suggestive sentence, "We can each grow a soul if we are willing to pay the price." These words set me thinking. What a tremendous possibility God has placed in the grasp of each one of us. We have in our power the opportunity of growing an immortal soul. That opportunity is this life—the question is, Are we willing to pay the price?

Do we realize what the growth of a soul within us means? Do we realize what life is without a soul? We hear it sometimes said of one that he is a "soulless man." Usually we understand by that description a man devoid of the ordinary feelings of our common humanity, lacking in kindliness and sympathy, and incapable of generous action. True enough, but a soulless man in the real import of the words, means a great deal more than that. To be soulless is to be dead at the vital centre of life. It is to be corrupt and degenerate at that point in character from which the divine and immortal springs into power. Soullessness is spiritual degeneracy. It is what Paul calls "Dead in trespasses and sins, without hope and without God in the world."

Is it worth while, then, paying any price if we can start within ourselves this growth of an immortal soul? "We can each grow a soul," said the writer, "if we are willing to pay the price. Assuredly it is worth it, for this is the one and the only victorious life." More than that—this is the heart of all true religion. If our religion is not developing spiritual life within us our religion is vain. That is the great thought of Christ's teaching, and in that He has emphasized the deepest thought of all the great teachers of the world. You may remember, for instance, the words of Socrates in his Defense, addressed to his accusers, when in describing the greatest work a man could do he said, "For I do nothing but go about amongst you, persuading you all alike, young and old, not to take thought of your persons or your properties, but to care about the greatest improvement of your soul." Than that statement of the great Greek teacher the Gospel of Christ can add no stronger emphasis to the tremendous significance which belongs to the growth of a soul.

And yet it is just at this point that, for most of us, the real tragedy of spiritual experience unveils itself. What is it that most troubles you in your religious life, if at any moment your give yourself to honest self-examination? What is the real discouragement that haunts us even in our keenest prayers and most fervent supplications? Is it not just this—our utter poverty in soul growth, the dreadful lack of any real evidence of progress in spiritual things? Judged by the ordinary standards of life our souls do not grow. At the very best they simply stand still, so that spiritually, even the best of us, are pretty much as we were fifteen or twenty years ago, with the same tendencies dominant, the same temptations present. With others of us it is worse than that. In spite of our prayers and aspirations we are conscious, when we are brave enough to face the fact, that spiritually we grow more stunted and dwarfed as the years pass on. Our faith becomes less fervid, the spirit of prayer dwindles, the sense of God evaporates in the stifling atmosphere of selfishness and wordliness that wraps itself like a sea fog around us. That, I repeat, is the spiritual tragedy that plays itself out in the secret places of our lives; spiritually we do not grow as we ought; our souls lack that touch of life which reveals itself in ever deepening strength and power.

Well, now having faced this two-fold fact—on the one hand that each of us can grow a soul if he is willing to pay the price, and on the other hand that this soul-growth is not being realized within us as it ought—let us see this morning what are some of the conditions in obedience to which soul-growth may become a glorious reality for each one of us.

1. Let us recognize in the first place what the soul is, what it represents. By the soul, we mean something deeper than "the machine which ticks in the brain, that calculates and memorizes, that learns the tricks of trade, and practices them in the world." That is not your soul, although I dare say it is the only apology for a soul some of us have. The soul is that in you and me which has kinship with God. It is the chamber in which the divine and immortal within us dwells. The soul is the holy of holies in a man's life. It is as Paul says, "The Temple of the Holy Ghost." When, for instance, you feel at times, as surely at times we all do, an almost overpowering yearning after God, to know Him, to be like Him, it is your soul that is speaking. It is the immortal within you, crying out for its kinship with God. The vitality of your soul, therefore, is the pledge of your immortality. Destroy the soul, and you destroy that within you without which eternity is unthinkable. That is why Christ put such emphasis on the awful possibility of losing the soul. "What shall it profit a man," He said, "if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" Nothing can compensate that loss. Christ does not say that "gaining the world" necessarily means loss of the soul; what He says is, that a prize even so great as the attainment of the whole world would not offset the loss of a single individual soul. Do we realize that?

The first condition, therefore, in soul-growth, is to realize the issue at stake, to recognize the infinite value of your soul as your one and only asset when death, with ruthless fingers, strips you of all else. "Think of living," said Carlyle, "for wert thou the pitifullest of all the sons of earth thy life is no idle dream. It is thine own. It is all that thou hast to face eternity with." True, but living without a soul is to make eternity a voidless blank. It is your soul within you, claiming its kinship with God, that is the only thing worth living for. That is the first point. When you recognize that, you have taken the first step in soul-growth.

2. The second condition is to recognize clearly the great hindrance to soul-growth. It is futile to ask why our souls do not grow naturally, as, for instance, the body does. Spiritual development is one thing, natural growth is quite another thing. The fact must be recognized, explain it how you will, that soul growth is tremendously handicapped and hindered by forces which conspire its ruin. In other words, our souls are in the grip of a deadly disease, which dwarfs and stunts them. What is that disease? A correct diagnosis is the first step to complete the cure.

Suppose for a moment you have a boy who, instead of growing into health and strength, is pinched and dwarfed and anemic in appearance. You take the lad to a physician, and he will tell you that that boy of yours is really suffering from a wrong habit of life. He is not being nourished properly. His digestive organs are being overloaded with food which he cannot assimilate. What the boy needs is not more food, but less; not richer diet, but simpler. Nature is being thwarted by artificial living, and artificial living is the seed-plot of disease. And the physician will doubtless tell you that, the boy being young, the cure is simple. He will say: "Give nature a chance by simplifying his daily diet." Well, it is even so with the health of the soul. Our souls are starved and stunted by a disease, which is created and aggravated by a wrong mode of life. We are so gorging our minds with all the elaborated and artificial forms of living, that the spiritual within us is stifled. Sin is the disease which kills the soul, but sin is simply a product of that sordid selfish life which clogs the great arteries of the soul. If deliberately we follow a life which makes no provision for prayer and communion with God, which cherishes evil habits and nourishes actions which begin and end in self, then we are deliberately killing the soul within us. What, then, is the price we have to pay if we want to grow a soul? We must change the mode of life which enthralls us, and make provision, not for the things of the flesh, but of the spirit. In that purer, sweeter, simpler atmosphere the soul will inevitably begin to grow. The vitality of your soul is wonderful. Its recuperative powers are marvelous, but these powers must have their opportunity. Here is a disease which is stunting and slowly killing my soul—am I willing to fulfill the condition which will eradicate that disease, and make spiritual growth a reality?

3. That leads to the third point. What is that condition? And who of us, by his own strength, is sufficient to meet that condition? We cannot certainly, by our own efforts, hope to reverse those natural tendencies within us which war against our souls. We cannot, by any strivings of our own, force spiritual growth. If we are unable to add a cubit to our physical stature, much less can we add to our spiritual growth. Yet, the call of Christ is to "grow in grace, and in His likeness." What, then, is the secret of that growth? The Gospel of Christ is the answer. Our souls grow as they come into living touch with Him. We cannot transform ourselves, but we are transformed into His likeness, as we reflect the spirit of Jesus, and we reflect Jesus in the measure that we reflect on Him. Make Christ the theme of your daily prayer and meditation, and every moment you spend in His presence is a springtide of spiritual growth within your soul. That growth you cannot check; no sin can hinder it if you are living in the atmosphere of Christ's life. It is not our strivings and strugglings that add to the stature of the soul; it is our faith, simple as that of a little child which, laying hold of the love of God revealed in Christ, builds up the soul, day by day, into His grace and into His likeness.

Now, I ask, is there anything strange or mysterious about that? Is spiritual growth subject to laws any different from those which govern any process of mental development? Surely not. To make any theme a subject of daily thought is to make that theme a potent influence in your life. The more deeply it lays hold of your mind the more profoundly it becomes a part of yourself. All you have to do is to fulfil the condition of continuous thought, and the object of your thought reacts upon you and becomes a dominant factor of growth. We speak, for instance, of a man being possessed by some master passion—it may be the love of money, or of power, or of sordid self-indulgence, or of some higher interest, but whatever it is, the result is the same. Constant dwelling upon it moulds character into its likeness.

So it is with the soul that surrenders itself to the influence of Jesus. As we think of Him, and as we enter into the spirit of His life, and breathe the atmosphere of His love and purity, gradually we are transformed, and the soul within us leaps up into glad recognition of its lawful Love. Every power we have, every faculty we possess becomes interpenetrated by His spirit, and because His spirit is life we live also.

Excited.

Rowland Hill used to tell this story of himself:

"People say when I preach the Gospel very earnestly, 'How excited Mr. Hill gets!' Why," said he, "I was walking through Wotton-under-Edge the other day, and saw some men digging gravel. All of a sudden the earth gave way and buried two or three of the men. I ran off as fast as my old legs would carry me, and I shouted, 'Help! help! help!' but people did not say, 'Poor old Mr. Hill is getting dreadfully excited!'

"Oh, no! he might be as excited as he pleased when men's lives were in danger; but when a man's soul was in danger the proper thing would be to say to him very quietly and calmly, 'My dear friend, unless something shall interpose, and you shall one of these days become somewhat different from what you now are, it will not be quite so well for you in another world as, perhaps, you might desire.'"—Belfast Witness.

The models of fashion here cannot even be certain of passing muster as the door mats in heaven.

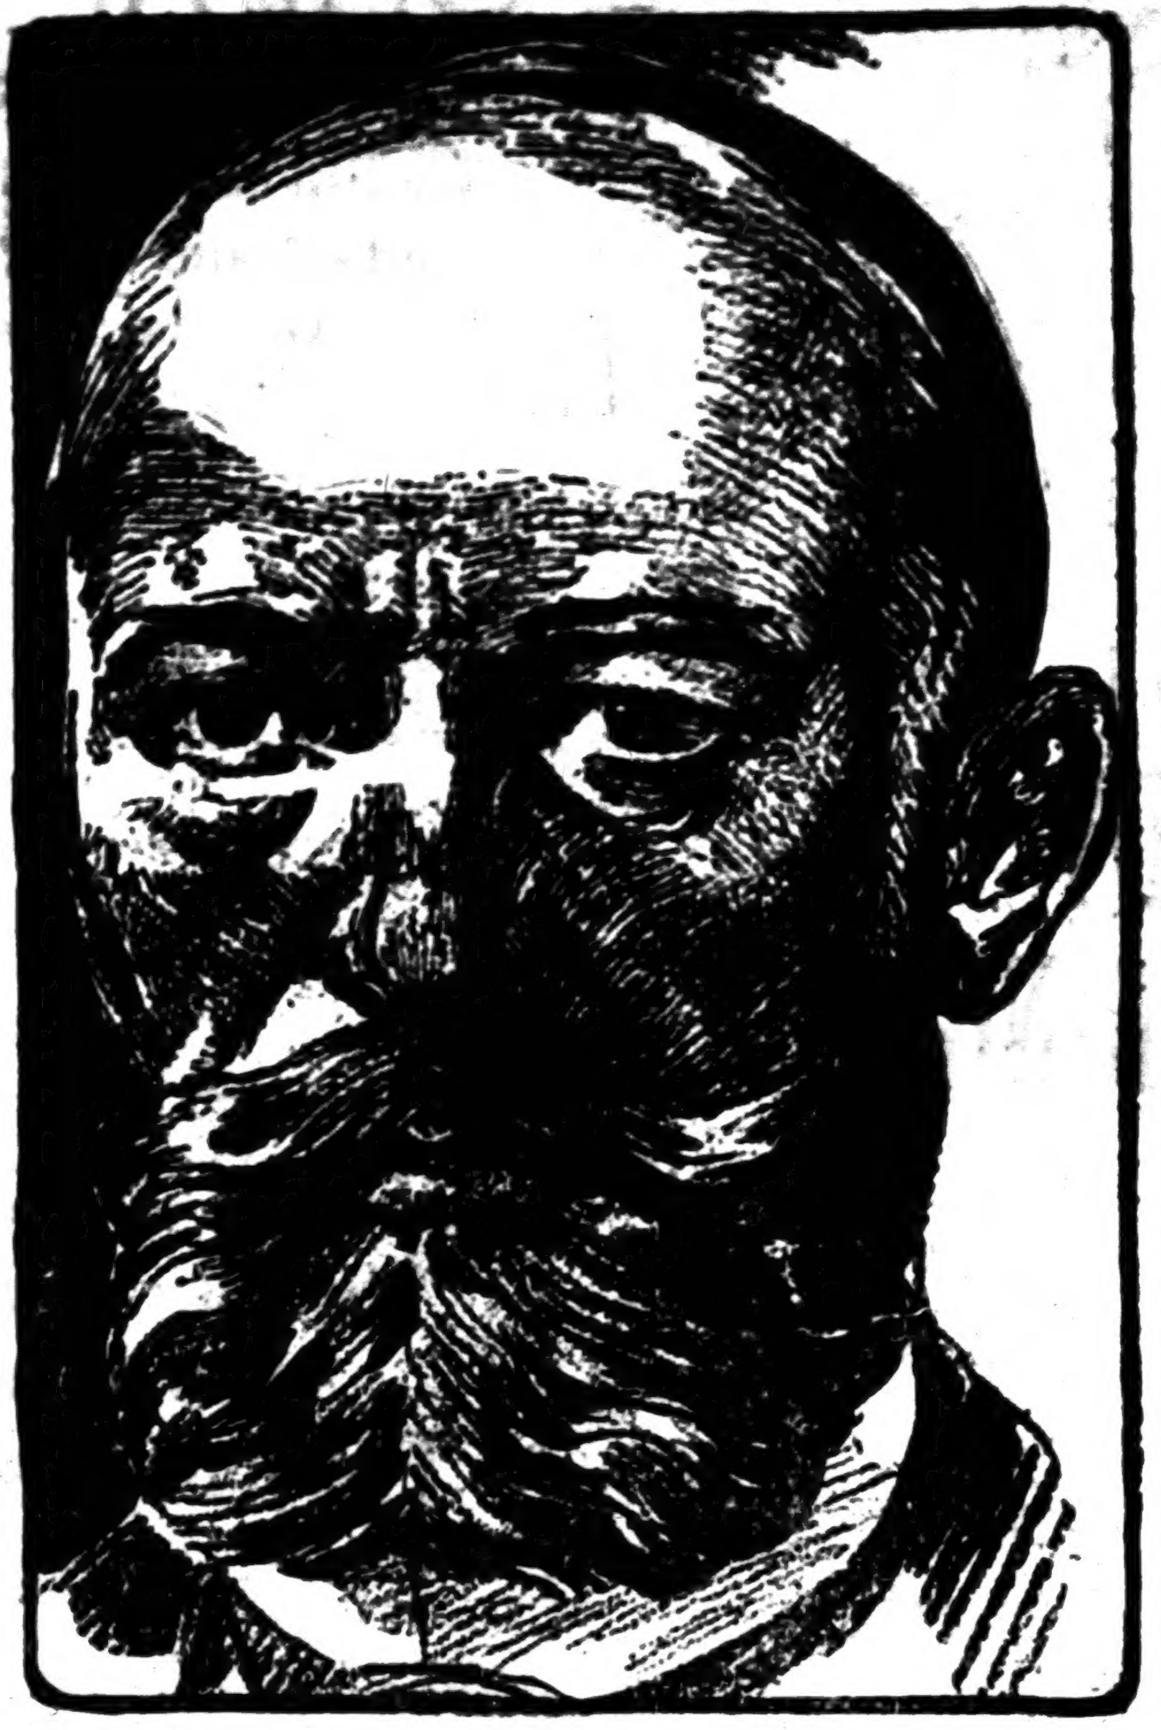
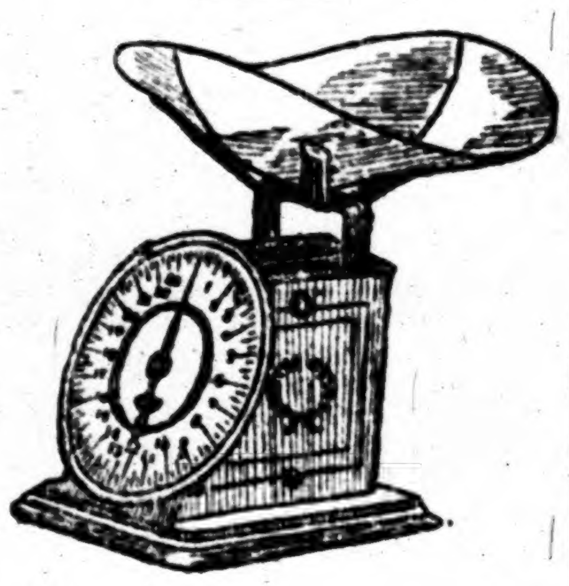
Von Behring, Who Found Consumption Cure



Dr. Von Behring is famous as the discoverer of the antitoxin for diphtheria. He is connected with the University of Berlin. After ten years of study on the subject he has again astonished the world by announcing the discovery of a cure for tuberculosis. His paper on the new cure, read before the Tuberculosis Congress in Paris, has caused discussion in medical circles all over the world. His final report on the consumption cure is being awaited with keen interest.

IMPROVED FAMILY SCALE.



The illustration shows an improved family scale of the dial type, the particular feature of which is the slanting position of the dial, thereby enabling the indications of the pointer to be read with greater facility. The ordinary vertical dial requires the user to bend over in order to distinguish with any degree of accuracy its indications. In other particulars the scale conforms to the conventional design of this type.—Philadelphia Record.

THE BRONZE PANEL REPRESENTING THE INAUGURATION OF WASHINGTON, PRESENTED TO THE HALL OF FAME.

GIFT TO THE HALL OF FAME

Chancellor MacCracken, of the New York University, was able to announce the first important gift to the Hall of Fame. The gift is a celebrated bronze relief by Thomas Crawford, representing the inauguration of George Washington in 1789 in New York City. The prominent persons represented are George Washington, John Adams, who stands on his right; Alexander Hamilton, Generals Knox and St. Clair, Roger Sherman and Baron Steuben. The relief is a replica of one of the panels of the bronze doors cast for the Senate wing of the Capitol at Washington, and was cast from the same molds and at the same time. The doors were cast in 1868 by James T. Ames.

Chancellor MacCracken said:

"This work was executed for the United States Government to form one of the panels of the Senate doors at Washington. The total cost of the doors was over $50,000. They were cast by James T. Ames, who before the models and molds were broken up was authorized by the Government to execute for himself a single panel, whichever of the six panels he might select. He chose the scene of the inauguration, which has been in the possession of his family ever since. The present representatives of his family, becoming interested in the accounts of the Hall of Fame, counted this a fitting place for the permanent preservation of this sculpture."

Special Teeth For Tars.

A dentist in the lower part of the city was at work on a set of false teeth that, to the casual observer, seemed fearfully and wonderfully made. Outwardly they appeared to be all right; but on the inner side the artificial molars were braced, riveted and otherwise reinforced.

"They are for a sailor," he explained. "I have to make teeth unusually strong for them. The ordinary kind would soon succumb to the tough salt beef and granite ship biscuit and leave him toothless perhaps for a long voyage.

"As a rule sailors have good teeth, and false ones among them are scarce. Sometimes it happens, however, that their teeth are knocked out by accident and then the false ones are inserted."—New York Press.

Nervous Women
Their Sufferings Are Usually Due to Female Disorders Perhaps Unsuspected
A MEDICINE THAT CURES
Mrs. M. E. Shotwell
Can we dispute the well-known fact that American women are nervous?
How often do we hear the expression, "I am so nervous, it seems as if I should fly," or, "Don't speak to me." Little things annoy you and make you irritable; you can't sleep, you are unable to quietly and calmly perform your daily tasks or care for your children.
The relation of the nerves and generative organs in woman is so close that nine-tenths of the nervous prostration, nervous debility, the blues, sleeplessness and nervous irritability arise from some derangement of the organism which makes her a woman. Fits of depression or restlessness and irritability; spirits easily affected, so that one minute she laughs, the next minute weeps; pain in the abdominal region and between the shoulders; loss of voice; nervous dyspepsia; a tendency to cry at the least provocation—all these point to nervous prostration.
Nothing will relieve this distressing condition and prevent months of prostration and suffering so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
Mrs. M. E. Shotwell, of 103 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:
"I cannot express the wonderful relief I have experienced by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I suffered for a long time with nervous prostration, backache, headache, loss of appetite. I could not sleep and would walk the floor almost every night.
"I had three doctors and got no better, and life was a burden. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has worked wonders for me.
"I am a well woman, my nervousness is all gone and my friends say I look ten years younger."
Will not the volumes of letters from women made strong by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound convince all women of its virtues? Surely you cannot wish to remain sick, weak and discouraged, exhausted each day, when you can be as easily cured as other women.

We will convince you that you can "increase your yields per acre" and you won't have to keep it a secret, either. Read what Messrs. Wherry & Son, of the Magnolia Fruit Farm, Durant, Miss., write: "From two acres of strawberries, on which 1,000 pounds of Virginia-Carolina Fertilizers per acre were used, we cleared a profit of $65.00 per acre more than the other 14½ acres of strawberries which had only 800 pounds of this fertilizer." WILSONVILLE, ALA., August 10, 1905.

DR. GRANGER MEDICINE CO.,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

GENTLEMEN: I have been selling your Uracura and have never sold a remedy that gave better satisfaction. I have used it in my own family and know from my own experience that it will do all you claim for it.

Very truly yours,
S. J. SPEARMAN.

What it will do for You:

It will absolutely cure you of any and all Kidney troubles, by going directly to the seat of the disease and replacing all abnormal conditions of the organs with healthy tissues. This is the reason that cures Kidney troubles to stay cured, instead of just soothing them temporarily as other remedies do.

Uracura is a purely vegetable compound, or concentrated extract of herbs and roots, so scientifically combined as to produce an absolutely certain cure. A great nervine tonic, blood alterative, liver regulator and kidney and bladder cure. Restores strength, renews vitality, purifies the blood, relieves biliousness and constipation and produces a healthy appetite and sound digestion.

The farmers are very busy getting ready to plant another crop This is a great place to raise vegetables and fruit for the Birmingham market. The farmers raise hundreds of bushels of sweet and Irish potatoes every year for the market.

We are glad to see from the Banner that Clanton is to have a building boom. We are going to have one up here too. The Baptists are going to build them a nice new church on the summit. Also Mr. Jack Williams is going to erect a nice residence and storehouse right away.

Miss Frances Crenshaw of Birmingham will soon have a fine two-story dwelling built on her lot. Also Miss Brown of East Lake is going to have a nice little cottage put up on the summit.

Mr. Levi Myers is putting up a saw mill. A stock company has been formed in Birmingham to build a large sanitarium here. They have already purchased a large tract of land. You see Clanton is not the only place that is growing.

The Ladies' Aid Society gave a valentine party on the night of the 14th. Quite a nice sum was realized for the benefit of the new church.

Miss Frances Crenshaw chaperoned a small picnic party from Birmingham recently. Those who composed the party were Misses Willie Hartwell, India Harris, Susie Howard, Myrtle and Inez Northington. Your humble scribe was invited to join them. It was greatly enjoyed by those that attended.

Mr. Sam Moor of Sand Mountain has been visiting relatives here.

Mr. Claud Shelby has returned from a trip to West Virginia.

Dr. Berry had a valuable horse to run away with a wagon and ran over a wire fence and killed himself.

Sick Headache.

This distressing ailment results from a disordered condition of the stomach. All that is needed to effect a cure is a dose or two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. In fact the attack may be warded off, or greatly lessened in severity, by taking a dose of these Tablets as soon as the first symptom of an attack appears. Sold by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Croup

Begins with the symptoms of a common cold; there is chilliness, sneezing, sore throat, hot skin, quick pulse, hoarseness and impeded respiration. Give frequent small doses of Ballard's Horehound Syrup, (the child will cry for it) and at the first sign of a croupy cough apply frequently Ballard's Snow Liniment to the throat.

Mrs. A. Vliet, New Castle, Colo., writes March 19, 1902: I think Ballard's Horehound Syrup a wonderful remedy, and so pleasant to take. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

People the world over were horrified on learning of the burning of a Chicago theater in which six hundred people lost their lives, yet more than five times this number or over 3,000 died from pneumonia in Chicago during the year, with scarcely a passing notice. Every one of these cases of pneumonia resulted from a cold and could have been prevented by the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A great many who had every reason to fear pneumonia have warded it off by the use of this remedy. The following is an instance of this sort: much cannot be said in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and especially for colds and influenza. I know that it cured my daughter, Laura, of a severe cold and I believe saved her life when she was threatened with pneumonia." W. D. WILCOX, New York. Sold by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Plant City, Fla, Feb. 22, 1906

Editor Banner—I do not wish to appear too often, but there is a few things I want to say, and first of all we have not had enough frost to kill potatoe vines, and it looks now like a good crop of oranges this year. My trees are blooming and I have hope that I will get something for the loss last year.

I must say something about strawberries, and what I am going to say will sound like a big fish story to some people, so I will give the names of the parties that grew the berries. Frank Fletcher planted two and a half acres and has sold to this date $2400 worth and will get at least $500 or $600 worth before the season is over, and J. R. Fletcher, a brother, has sold off of two acres $1500 worth, and J. C. Yates has sold $700 worth off of one acre. These men live in one and a half and two miles of Plant City, and I saw them and asked them about the matter. I do believe that in many respects, this is the best country for the industrious poor man in the world. I am glad to say that I am regaining my health With best wishes for the Banner and all the people of Chilton, I am sincerely yours,

S. M. ADAMS.

Lawley, Ala., Feb. 23, 1906

Editor Banner—In order to defend myself, please publish the following letter from Hon. I. W. Hill, State Superintendent of Education:

Montgomery, Ala., Jan. 25, 1906

Rev. P. G. Maness,
Lawley, Ala., R. F. D. No. 1.

My Dear Sir: Supt. Hill has your letter of Jan. 23d and in reply directs me to say that the Attorney General has given to this office an opinion in which holds that district trustees are exempt from paying poll tax, road duty jury duty, etc.

Yours very truly,
H. C. GUNNELLS, Chief Clerk.

This letter speaks for itself. Of course if a district trustee wishes to pay a poll, it is well and good, but if on the other hand a district trustee wishes to take advantage of the little compensation the law allows him, that also is alright. The non-payment of poll tax by a district trustee in no wise debars him from voting provided he has paid up for the other years in which he was not trustee since 1901. Of course Supt. Hill evidently knows his business. I have a similar letter from him, dated about a year ago.

Yours truly,
P. G. MANESS.

New Orleans, Feb. 26, 1906

Editor Banner—With your permission, I must express my regret of the death of my friend, Mr. J. J. Thompson. I have known Bro. Thompson since I was quite a small boy and must say that I was filled with the deepest regret on receiving the sad information of his death. Bro. Thompson was a man whose strong convictions led him to do that which he believed to be his duty to God and to his fellow-beings. He was a faithful and stanch friend who stood by the right no matter what adverse circumstances might present themselves. He was ever ready to help those in need. He was an earnest and faithful worker in his church and took special interest in the youth of his country, his earnest prayer being that they might be better people than their predecessors. The last time that I had the pleasure of talking with Bro Thompson he said that his greatest desire was to learn to subdue his passions that he might be a more perfect man.

In the death of Bro. Thompson his community lost one of its leading men; his church one of its most earnest workers and his family a devoted, loving and kind husband and father. His bereaved family should comfort themselves with the thought that our loss is his gain and should strive to be prepared to meet him in that happy beyond where there will be no more sad partings.

CLANTON, ALA

To make floor polish for the floor, put two ounces of white and yellow wax over a moderate fire in a very clean vessel, and when it is melted add four ounces of the best spirits of turpentine. Stir the whole until quite cool, then use by rubbing. The oil soon penetrates the pores of the wood, brings out its color, causes the wax to adhere and produces a luster equal to that of varnish. This, if properly done, will prove most satisfactory.

A CARPET CLEANING HINT.

Tea leaves, when sprinkled upon a carpet for sweeping, are apt to stain it if trodden upon. To prevent this, let the leaves stand for a few hours in a pan of water, then squeeze them dry just before using. They will not injure the most delicate carpet if treated in this way. Damp bran makes an excellent alternative for the tea leaves for it cleans the carpet during the sweeping process, and prevents the dust from rising also.

CLEANING LACQUERED BRASS

Lacquered brass should never be cleaned with ordinary metal polish, or with anything that contains any kind of acid. The very best thing to use is sweet oil; this should be rubbed on the metal with a piece of sponge, and it must afterward be polished with a soft cloth. Real brass ware should be cleaned with any metal polish that is well known and made by a trustworthy firm. Not too much polish and plenty of rubbing will keep the brasses in the house as bright and clean as can be wished.

WASHING MADE EASY.

Washing is the very hardest part of the house work. No woman should attempt to do it in the old way. One of the best managers I ever saw taught me her way; she says it lessens the work at least one-half. It is thus: Sort the clothes the evening before they are to be washed, and put the white clothes in clear water to soak. In the morning put the boiler on the stove and fill it half full of water which will usually take two bucket falls. Put two heaping tablespoonfuls of gold dust washing powder and two tablespoonfuls of kerosene in a vessel, add half a gallon of water and let it boil a few minutes, until it forms an emulsion. Pour this into the boiler, have the fine white clothes through a wringer and put them in the water. Let them boil 15 minutes, stirring occasionally to allow the suds to penetrate to all parts alike. Then lift them out of the tub put a little more emulsion into the boiler and boil the second lot of clothes. The first lot will need no more rubbing, but can be rinsed, starched and hung out to dry.

Save some of the clean suds or prepare more in the same way for the colored clothes, but of course, they should not be boiled. There will be no disagreeable odor when dry. This energetic housewife had her clothes all washed and hung out to dry by ten or eleven o'clock then prepared her dinner. I looked at her in amazement, but she taught me many helpful methods.—Jane, in Indiana Farmer.

No Authority for It in the Bible.

A story is told of the late Dr. Peddle, a Scotch minister, to whom his congregation had presented a pulpit robe. He had never worn a robe, and after acknowledging the gift, he said he would wait in the vestry five minutes after service to hear any objectors to the innovation. Nobody appeared but one old lady, who, on being asked what her objections were, answered that she had read the epistles of St. Paul, and could not find any reference to the Apostle wearing a gown. "What epistle did you read?" asked the doctor. "From Romans to Hebrews," answered the old lady. "Well, Janet," said her minister, "I have read from Romans to Hebrews also, and I could never find any reference to the Apostle wearing the breeks. What would you think if you saw me going into the pulpit without breeks?" Needless to say, the old lady departed satisfied with the explanation.

A Parrot of Evil Reputation.

The Kea parrot of New Zealand is a very curious bird. For many years it has been charged with killing sheep by pecking holes in their sides, and this alleged fact has been recorded in many works on ornithology and natural history. Accordingly, as the Kea is in danger of extermination, an investigation was recently undertaken to determine whether this bird really deserved its evil reputation. No evidence could be found to warrant the statement, and it was thought to be based entirely upon the curiosity which it manifests in looking over the carcasses of dead animals. —Harper's Weekly.

THE DOCTOR'S MISTAKE

CHAPTER I.

OH, dear! Oh, dear!"

Surely some one was crying close by. Dr. Hammond stood still a moment to listen. He was very tired. He had been called out of his bed soon after midnight to attend a patient, and now was returning home with the prospect of breakfast and an hour's sleep to cheer him on the way.

He gave a little involuntary sigh at the thought of possible hindrance, then turned aside from the beaten path through Ralford Woods, as the sound of distress was distinctly repeated. A few steps and he came upon the figure of a girl, prone at the foot of a big tree.

The thick moss had deadened the noise of his approach, and she started violently when he said:

"What is the matter? Have you hurt yourself?"

"I didn't hear you coming. How you startled me! Hurt myself? I should think I have! Dreadfully, horribly—oh! oh!"

A twinge of pain blanched her cheeks.

Dr. Hammond was down on his knees in an instant.

"Your ankle, isn't it? Yes, I see," noting the awkward position of the leg. "You have given it a nasty twist. You fell, I suppose?"

"Yes, I did," in cross assent. "I came out for a walk. I thought I'd like to see how the woods look in the early morning. Oh, dear, I wish I hadn't come—I never will again! And then I caught my foot in a horrid root that stuck out, and fell, and when I tried to get up I couldn't, and I have been lying here, oh, ages, and I thought no one ever would pass by."

"Poor little girl," said Philip Hammond, compassionately. "I dare say the time did seem long. Where do you live? I don't know your face."

"Oh, I am boarding with Mrs. Dawson at Myrtle Cottage. And how I am to get back there I don't know," and the tears trickled forlornly down the girl's pretty cheeks. For she was pretty—very pretty—the prettiest girl Philip thought he had ever seen.

"Oh, that's easy enough. I shall carry you."

"You carry me? Who are you, pray?"

"Philip Hammond, doctor, of this village, quite at your service," responded the young man, his recent fatigue entirely forgotten.

"A doctor! How lucky! But"—dubiously—"are you sure you can carry me."

"Certain."

And, suiting the action to the word, Philip lifted the slender form with gentle, capable hands.

The girl shuddered, but set her teeth close.

"I am afraid you will have to endure some suffering till I can bathe and bandage the ankle," said Dr. Hammond.

And before they had gone a dozen paces Philip saw that she had fainted.

CHAPTER II.

It was a bad sprain, and Lalla Halding—such Mrs. Dawson informed the doctor was her boarder's name—was a bad patient. She was peevish and irritable.

"I hate being ill, and, besides, I must go back to the city, I must," she declared.

"You can't," was Dr. Hammond's quiet rejoinder.

"But I tell you I must," with increased vehemence. "I have things to do."

"They must go undone. You certainly cannot travel yet."

"When can I? In a couple of days? Three days? Four?"

"No; neither in two, three nor four days."

"When, then? Oh, how provoking you are! I believe you are glad to keep me here ill!" cried Lalla, petulant tears dimming the brightness of her dark eyes.

Philip paused a moment before replying. The girl's words were in a measure true. He did not desire that she should suffer, but he would like to keep her there, not merely for a few days or a week, but for always. Until now women, except in the light of patients, had not interested him. But Lalla Halding had awakened the love which had been dormant in his heart during all his thirty years of life. He knew nothing about her. He fancied she was a governess or a typewriter spending her scant holidays at Monticello. But her occupation in life mattered naught to him. He loved her with an all absorbing passion. Presently, when she was stronger, he would tell her of his love.

"On the contrary, I am sorry that you should be in pain," he said, bending over the foot, which he was rebandaging.

In spite of his efforts at self control his voice and his hands trembled ever so slightly. The tears did not prevent Lalla's sharp eyes from noting these small signs of emotion.

"You are clumsy this morning; you hurt me!" she exclaimed, impatiently.

"I am sorry," rejoined the doctor, as he adjusted the last fastening.

It had been an ordeal to-day, tending and talking to this fractious patient, whose every mood allured and fascinated him.

"I can't think how you care to be always in the country," she remarked by and by.

"Can you not? My work is here," he replied.

"Yes, but the country is so dull."

"Perhaps, if I had had a choice, I might have chosen a city practice. But I succeeded my father, whom I had previously assisted. He died two years ago, my mother only last year—and my father succeeded his father."

"I see—a sort of inheritance. But you would like to live in the metropolis, would you not?" Lalla persisted.

"I might."

CHAPTER III.

"I may try to walk to-day, may I not?" Lalla's eyes were sparkling, her cheeks were flushed.

She looked radiant. Philip had thought her pretty before. To-day he deemed her beautiful. His glance fell and his pulses throbbed fiercely.

"Perhaps. I will see," he rejoined, in a low voice.

"How gloomy you look! Are you not well?"

"Quite, thank you," was the rather curt response.

"Then you must be cross. Fie! fie!"

Dr. Hammond made no reply. He was stooping over the limb, examining it, and Lalla, who was watching his downcast face, smiled a sweet, mischievous smile.

"Yes, I think you may venture today," he said, presently, straightening himself.

Lally clapped her hands gleefully.

"Joy—joy! Oh, you're a dear, good doctor!"

"You must be very careful—very careful, indeed," returned Philip, gravely. "Take my arm, and lean most of your weight on me. Bear very lightly on the injured foot."

Heedfully carrying out injunctions one tour of the room was successfully accomplished. Then, becoming venturesome, Lalla tried to be more independent, with the result that the ankle gave way under the strain, and, uttering a cry, she would have fallen to the ground had not Dr. Hammond held her tightly.

"That was foolish of me, I suppose," she said, with a nervous little gasp.

The foot, relieved of her weight, did not hurt now, but Philip's arms were clasping her closer and closer.

"I—I——" she began, then she met his gaze and her own eyes dropped.

"Oh, Lalla, my darling," he whispered, drawing her nearer to his breast. "You knew—you must have known—have guessed that I loved you."

"I fancied you did," she retorted, saucily. "Don't you think I have stood long enough? Ought I not to sit down now?"

"Of course you ought. What a selfish brute I am!"

And he drew her to the sofa without releasing his clasp.

She could feel the tumultuous beating of his heart as she leaned her head against his shoulder.

"When did you first begin to care for me?" she asked.

"When? Why, when I saw you lying helpless in the wood," he answered.

"What! That very first moment?"

"Yes, that very first moment. It was all I could do to restrain myself from kissing you as I carried you here. Your face lay against my shoulder as close as it is now, Lalla."

"What!" in a muffled tone.

"Don't hide your lips. It's useless. I am going to have my due."

"No, no. Not yet—later, perhaps."

And she covered her burning cheeks with her hands.

But Philip was a masterful lover. With one hand he imprisoned her fingers and with the other turned her face upward. And in spite of her blushes and protestations he obtained his desire.

CHAPTER IV.

At length Miss Halding was pronounced convalescent, and the day was fixed for her return to the city. What a blissful fortnight the last two weeks had been! Every moment that Philip could spare from his patients he had spent with Lalla. And she was such a fascinating little mortal—kind one moment, cruel the next. Now whispering words of tenderest affection, anon laughing at his vows of love. Cold and hot by turns. But in whatever mood she might be, she was still the one woman in the world to the young doctor. He had arranged to accompany her to the metropolis, but at the last hour was prevented. Hendrix Harcourt, one of the big guns of Monticello, was seized with an attack of internal gout, and would have no other medical man to attend him but Dr. Hammond.

"In a couple of days I hope to run up, darling; even if only for a few hours."

"Two days?" pouted Lalla, her eyes tender and soft. "What ages they will seem!"

"What ages they will be—to me. Oh, my darling, how can I exist apart from you? We must be married soon."

"We must not. I have a trousseau to get."

"Oh, bother the trousseau. That's soon bought. The home is ready, darling—ready and waiting for its mistress."

"But, Philip, I have told you I can't consent to live in the country. You must secure a practice in the big city."

Philip looked rueful.

"As soon as I can, dearest. I don't think I can afford it yet. But we will save all we can, and then it shall be as you wish."

Lalla smiled brightly.

"We will discuss it when you come up to see me. Mind, you must not be longer than two days."

But it was a week before Philip was free to seek his ladylove. Mr. Harcourt's seizure was more serious than any previous one, and Philip could not leave him till he was out of immediate danger. Then as fast as an express train could take him he hurried to the bustling city.

When his cab stopped at the address Lalla had given him there were three or four carriages waiting at the door.

"Evidently her employers are very fashionable people," thought Philip, as he alighted and paid the driver. Nothing definite as to Lalla's position had ever been said, but he had the impression that she earned her livelihood as a governess.

He asked for Miss Halding, and his name was passed from one obsequious servant to another, till at last the door of a large, sumptuously furnished parlor was thrown wide, and "Dr. Hammond" was announced in stentorian tones.

There were many people in the big apartment, but he clearly saw Lalla as she rose to greet him, her hand outstretched and a radiant smile on her countenance.

She was pouring out tea. She gave him a cup, and a footman handed him cake. He ate and drank like a man in a dream.

Then one by one the visitors took their leave, and Lalla and Philip were alone.

She came up to him then and laid her hands on his shoulders, and lifted her lips for the anticipated kiss.

"Oh, my love, my love!" she murmured, "the time has been so long, and then those people, I thought they would never go."

But Philip stood cold and unresponsive.

"Is this yours?" he queried. "Are you the mistress here?"

"Certainly I am."

"Why that masquerading at Monticello?"

"There was no masquerading. I went there for a little quiet. I was tired of the city gayety and dissipation, and wanted simplicity for a change."

"But you led me to suppose that you were a governess?"

"No, I did not. Reflect a moment, and you will remember that I never led you to suppose anything of the sort. It was purely your own supposition. But, Philip," coaxingly and tremulously, "it makes no difference, does it, that I am rich instead of poor?"

Almost roughly he put her from him.

"No difference!" he repeated harshly. "I, a poor village doctor, could not venture to marry an heiress such as you must be. I wish you good-by, Miss Halding."

CHAPTER V.

It had been a winter of bitter cold and biting frost, and the spring was late and unpleasant. Philip had passed the time with an aching smart at his heart, that now was settling to dull, gnawing pain. He had loved Lalla with such intense passion, such sudden, fierce ardor. In that short halcyon period she had grown to be almost a part of himself, and now he must pass his life without her. Oh, the orderings of fate were cruel!

He would do his best to forget her—he must. And, as an aid to this laudable end, he invariably, whenever he passed through Ralford Woods, visited the scene of their first meeting.

To-day the east wind was blowing its worst; still Philip turned aside, as he had done so many times before. But this time there was some one seated on the root which had been the cause of Lalla's accident. The some one was a woman, who lifted her drooping head as a twig snapped under Philip's foot.

It was Lalla. Lalla, pale and sad, and with dark rimmed eyes.

"You!" she cried, rising. "Why do you come here?"

"Why do you?" was the counter query.

"Because I must," she burst out. "Oh, Philip, Philip! if you do not mind for yourself, have mercy on me. You want a city practice—you said you did, at least. Buy one with my money. Use it for what purpose you will, but, oh, don't let it stand between us and happiness. I love you, Philip, and is my love to be of less account than my money?"

He stood speechless, motionless.

"Answer me, Philip," she pleaded; "say you love me still, say you will do what I ask you—what I beg you to do!"

Her hands touched his own timidly, and at the contact a sudden quiver thrilled him from head to foot. He caught the girl in a fierce embrace; he rained hungry, passionate kisses on her cheeks and her lips.

"My darling—my darling!" he burst forth, "I cannot live without you! I have tried, but I cannot. Rich or poor, you belong to me! I must have you!"—New York Weekly.

He opened wide the bakeshop door,
As boldly as you please;
He calmly looked the showcase o'er,
And asked, "How much are these?"

"Them cakes," replied the salesgirl fair,
The bargain glad to drive,
"To you, young sir," she said, "them ere
We sells at 6 for 5."

He measured only four foot three,
His years were but fourteen,
"Oh, 6 for 5," repeated he—
My life, but he was keen!

"Then 5 for 4, and 4 for 3,
And 3 of course, for 2,
And 2 for 1, and, Q. E. D.,
One's nought—why, one will do!"
(He got it.)

"You take the cake," the counter queen,
Dumfounded, murmured, "Shorty,
If that's your way at ente fourteen—

MRS. COTTONTAIL'S PALACE.

"See what I have!" shouted Duane Newton, as he rushed into the house one bright morning with a pair of tiny white rabbits in his hands. His mother gave permission to keep them, and when his father came home that night and saw the two little white rabbits contentedly munching cabbage leaves in the box which Duane had hastily converted into a cage he laughed and said:

"My dear boy, you can't keep them in there; they'll soon be too large to turn around in that box."

"Oh, papa, but I am going to make a nice big cage for them to-morrow—Joe and I," he said.

"Well, Duane, I have an idea for a cage for your bunnies which doesn't need any cleaning out, and from which the cruel dogs can't snatch them, as they did your last family," said his father.

"Won't need any cleaning out!" repeated the small boy eagerly, that being a task he greatly disliked.

"Yes, and where they can raise some little bunnies without your handling them to death, too." For Duane's past experience in raising bunny families had been, to say the least, discouraging. The mother had cruelly deserted her weak, naked babies when they were two days old, because Duane had too often exhibited them proudly to an admiring crowd of noisy boys.

"Well, it will have to be high up in the air or deep down in the earth, then, if Duane is to be kept from exhibiting the babies to the gaze of the world," remarked his mother.

"You shall see in due time," said Mr. Newton, mysteriously; "but I'll guarantee no prying eyes shall see the babies until Mrs. Cottontail herself exhibits them."

So after dinner Mr. Newton led the way to the shed, and looked around. Spying a small nail keg, he emptied the contents into a box, and set the keg out in the yard. Then taking down from the shelf an old piece of stovepipe he placed that inside the keg.

The next day Mr. Newton selected an out of the way spot, where the sun shone only part of the day, and dug a hole two feet deep, large enough to hold the keg laid on its side.

Then he nailed a board over the open end of the keg and made an opening in the centre of the board large enough to admit the end of the stovepipe in a slanting position. He placed in the keg a quantity of clean excelsior, and, putting the keg in the deep hole, with the end of the stovepipe just on a level with the ground, he filled in the hole entirely, covering keg and all. Nothing showed but one end of the stovepipe, and that only a very little.

All this time Duane had been silently watching, but now he danced up and down with excitement, saying:

"Oh, I see what that pipe is for now, papa; it isn't for a stove, but a tunnel—a tunnel into the nest, isn't it, papa?"

"Yes, my son, it is a rabbit hole, only a 'new-fangled' one. The pipe keeps the dirt from getting into Mrs. Bunny's bedroom."

"She should have a door to the tunnel," said Duane, after considering the open hole a moment. "How can she keep cats and rats from getting in and eating her babies? A bunny is such a helpless little thing, you know; they can't scratch like a cat or bite like a rat."

"No, Duane, but they have a weapon for defending their young, if they have no sharp claws or teeth," said papa. "Mother nature has given rabbits a set of muscles in their hind legs which enables them to give a very hard kick. I have seen a full-grown rabbit turn and kick at a cat that was chasing him, bowling the cat entirely over, thus giving himself a chance to escape."

As a further protection, however, they procured a piece of chicken wire and erected a fence around the buried nest, leaving one end so it could be opened enough for Duane to slip in and out when she wished.

Duane soon brought his pets, and taking them from the basket he lowered them over the wire into the little yard. First they hopped solemnly about in the inclosure till one of them spied the hole in the ground. With a quick flirt of his tail it disappeared, and the other was not long in following.

They seemed to like their new quarters very much and would pop down the hole into the nest so quickly sometimes that Duane could only see a flirt of something white and bunny was gone.

HON. SAMUEL D. WEAKLEY

Appointed—Will Be in the Race for Chief Justiceship.

Montgomery, Ala.—The political event of the week was the appointment of Hon. Samuel D. Weakley, of Birmingham, as chief justice of the supreme court to succeed the late Judge T. N. McClellan. It was not a surprise to the citizens outside of Montgomery so it is said. The friends of Judge John R. Tyson and Judge Weakley were busy for some time getting endorsements, but Tyson it was thought by his friends, had the best of it. The friends of Judge Tyson thought he was a sure winner.

The appointment of Judge Weakley is only till the election, when a chief justice is to be elected. His appointment will give him a strong pull for the place. The friends of Judge Tyson assert he will be in the race for chief justice before the convention which has been called by the state committee to meet in this city and nominate two associate justices. It is expected that he and Judge Weakley will be the only two candidates. Associate Justices Dowdell and Tyson would have had no opposition for these places, but as it is now an almost assured fact that Tyson will be in the race for chief justice, there will be many out for associate justice, it is thought.

Judge Weakley is now at work getting familiar with the duties before him. They are not entirely new to him, because he at one time acted as a special associate justice. Soon after he took the oath of office he announced that he would be a candidate for the place.

Lineville, Ala.—The postoffice here was robbed this week, the safe being blown open and $600 stolen, including about $300 worth of stamps. The postoffice is in the store building occupied by Killgore-Moore Company, across the street from the hotel. It seems that nitro-glycerine was used, as the little safe door used by Postmaster Killgore was completely wrecked. There is no clue. It would seem that the robbers knew the situation well.

LETTER FROM WHEELER.

Letter Was Written by the General About a Month Before His Death, but It Was Not Mailed.

Montgomery, Ala.—A letter has just come to the desk of Hon. J. Kirk Jackson, private secretary to the governor, that gave him a shock. It bore the date of "Brooklyn, N. Y., February 18, 1906," and was addressed in the handwriting of Gen. Joseph Wheeler, dead and buried long before that date. It brought to mind in a vivid way the old general and the happy relations that existed between him and the recipient of the belated message. Mr. Jackson looked long at the envelope before breaking the seal, recalling the many good things that were a part of the life of the well-known and well-beloved Alabamian.

After opening the letter it was found to have been written by General Wheeler at the Imperial Hotel in Brooklyn on January 18, just one month before it was mailed. It had been left unsealed, and was discovered by his secretary in winding up the affairs of the general and getting up his last correspondence. He wrote a note along with the letter to tell Mr. Jackson that the letter was written before the death of general Wheeler, and thought it might be regarded by him as valuable. It simply requested Mr. Jackson, addressed "Dear Kirk," in an affectionate way, that he send a copy of the new constitution of Alabama. Mr. Jackson will keep the letter as a memento of the man who was in his lifetime kind to him in many ways.

TYSON A CANDIDATE.

Campaign for Head of Supreme Court Bench Promises to Overshadow the Race for Governor.

Montgomery, Ala.—Judge John Russell Tyson, of Montgomery, associate justice of the supreme court, will oppose Chief Justice Samuel D. Weakley for election to the office he now holds.

Judge Tyson has authorized the announcement of his candidacy. Judge Weakley announced his candidacy immediately after he had taken the oath of office as chief justice.

It was well known in political circles that Judge Tyson would place his name before the people as a candidate for chief justice. He was an applicant for the appointment to the chief justiceship after the place had been made vacant through the death of Judge Thomas N. McClellan. He received endorsements from throughout the state, and it was universally supposed that he would enter the lists against Judge Weakley.

Carnegie Aids in Rebuilding Library.

This means that Mr. Carnegie will give about $6,000 for rebuilding, the sum received from insurance being $6,000, and the original building, established with money donated by Mr. Carnegie, costing $12,000. The new building is already in process of construction, and brickmasons among the students are furnishing the labor.

Shortage Compromised.

Scottsboro, Ala.—J. A. Ridley's attorneys have compromised with the court of county commissioners of Jackson county and the probate judge of the county to settle his shortage with the county. The compromise was for $2,000 and Ridley to pay all the court costs.

Ridley was the tax collector that Judge Purifoy checked up short in his accounts. Suit was ordered brought by the county to recover the alleged amount, and the above compromise was agreed upon by the attorneys of both sides. Ridley is in moderate circumstances, and this will take about all he has to pay it.

Huntsville, Ala.—Judge Alex Boarman, of Louisiana, has been appointed to hold the April term of the United States court in this city. The exact time for opening the court has not been set, but it will open either the first or second Monday in April.

Huntsville, Ala.—Sam Rodgers, a prominent young man of Fort Payne, has been arrested and lodged in jail there on a charge of attempting to defraud the government by making a false affidavit in a pension matter. The arrest was made by Deputy Marshal Arnold, of this city.

Girl Crushed to Death.

Columbia, S. C.—Miss Elizabeth Robertson, the 13-year-old daughter of J. Caldwell Robertson, a prominent citizen of this place, was killed at Hendersonville, S. C., by being crushed beneath a heavy stone which fell from the top of a gate post, catching her beneath it while she was swinging on the gate. Her body was brought to Columbia for interment.

DEMONSTRATION

Against Loubet. Notre Dame Cathedral Center of Riotous Scenes.

DISPERSED BY THE GENDARMES.

Police Still Have to Force Their Way Into Churches and Safes Have to Be Blown Open.

Paris.—The famous Cathedral of Notre Dame was the center of much excitement Saturday, which later took the form of a disorderly manifestation against former President Loubet. Crowds assembled in the Place Notre Dame expecting the authorities to come and take an inventory of the chapter house. A force of 150 policemen patrolled the surrounding streets expecting trouble within the edifice, but as the authorities did not attempt an inventory this did not take place.

The crowd outside gradually increased in numbers, however, and finally several hundred persons marched to the Rue Dant, where M. Loubet has taken up his residence. The manifestants passed before the house of the former president, uttering insulting cries against him. The police then drove off the crowd, which, however, reassembled and returned, only to be dispersed again. A slight affray took place between the police and the manifestants as the latter sought to return once more, and a dozen arrests were made.

The explanation of the movement against M. Loubet is that the bill for the separation of church and state became a law during his administration.

Inventories have been made at several Paris churches. At the aristocratic Church of St. Thomas Aquinas the prefect of police, with a strong body of men, had to force his way through a long passage into the sacristy, owing to the resistance offered by a number of parishioners. The priests then refused to hand over the keys, and the prefect caused the safes to be blown open. An inventory of the property was then made. Ten arrests were made, General Recamiert being among those taken into custody.

David B. Henderson Dead.

Dubuque, Ia.—Former Speaker David B. Henderson, of the national house of representatives, died at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon at Marcy hospital of paresis, which attacked him nine months ago. He began to sink Friday afternoon, rallied Saturday morning, in the afternoon lapsed into unconsciousness and failed rapidly until the end came. All of his family, except a son in California, were at the bedside, but Colonel Henderson had been unable to recognize any one but his wife since a week ago, except on Friday when he partly regained his mental faculties.

Tennessee Feud Breaks Out.

Woodbury, Tenn.—The Johnson-Motley feud in this (Canon) county has broken out afresh and as a result the following are fatally wounded:

Sam Blair, shot four times in stomach.

Bob Motley, shot twice in groin.

Richard Johnson, throat cut.

The trouble between the Motleys and the Johnsons, two large families of the Pea Ridge neighborhood, near the DeKalb county line, originated ten years ago over the operation of an illicit distillery, when blood was shed and has broken out intermittently since. Last night's renewal came at a young people's candy pulling, where, it is said, some liquor had been drunk. Both Motley and Blair were shot by Johnson, but who cut the latter's throat is unknown.

The sheriff has gone to the scene, which is in a wild mountainous district and hopes to prevent any further trouble, although it is said considerable excitement prevails.

Loses Her Life.

Chicago, Ill.—Returning to her flat to get her money, Mrs. John Hanley met her death in a burning apartment house. Mrs. Hanley had gone from the building with her son at the first alarm. When the firemen had put the blaze out they found the woman unconscious in a closet of her apartment on the third floor. She expired a few minutes later. The fire was in the structure at 6050 Washington avenue. Three other persons were injured. The loss was $5,000.

Gambier, O.—The buildings of Kenyon Military Academy burned at an early hour Saturday, and are a total loss. Three cadets are missing and at least eight are injured, three of whom will probably die.

GUARDS DOUBLED AT CAPITAL.

Quarrel Is Reported in Palace Among Various Factions Regarding Selection of an Heir to the Throne.

Peking.—The guards around the forbidden city have been doubled, and all the palaces and residences of high officials are especially guarded. The police, who have hitherto carried batons, are now armed with rifles. All the officials that are accessible either refuse any information or profess ignorance of the reasons for the precautions that have been taken, and as a result many rumors are afloat. The chief of police and other officials were telephoned yesterday to report to the police, and the display of force immediately followed their conference. Possibly the only cause is the alarm of the empress dowager over the prevalence of revolutionary rumors recently.

The Chinese minister at Tokio a few days ago telegraphed the government warning it against several revolutionary students who are departing from Japan to China. Two packages of dynamite have been found in the street outside the gate leading to the palace.

Apparently they were dropped by some one afraid to carry them. One report finding credence is that there is a quarrel afoot within the palace between the partisans of the empress dowager and the emperor over the selection of an heir to the throne, but it is not confirmed.

Killed His Wife.

Richmond, Va.—Mrs. Mattie P. Hodges, of Durham, N. C., was murdered in her bed at an early hour this morning by her husband, John H. Hodges, according to his own confession. She was dragged from a sick bed by the infuriated man, her left arm being broken in the scuffle.

She was shot through the heart as she lay on the floor at her husband's feet. The tragedy was witnessed by the 19-year-old son of the couple, who was himself knocked down by his father when he attempted to interfere. Mrs. Hodges had recently instituted divorce proceedings against her husband. The murderer was promptly captured and confessed the crime.

Three Killed by Explosion.

Roanoke, Va.—A Times special from Bluefield, W. Va., says: Joe Deado, foreman of the gang, and three other Italians were killed near Rock by the explosion of a can of giant powder. The men were literally torn to pieces by the force of the terrific explosion. The victims were preparing a blast, and from some unknown cause the can from which they were using powder became ignited. That more men were not killed is miraculous. The men were employed in construction work on the Tidewater railroad.

Vanderbilt Mobbed.

Florence, Italy.—W. K. aVnderbile is detained at Pontedera, on the road to Pisa, having had an automobile accident in the street, by which a boy was injured. The boy is not seriously hurt. The incident involved the detention of both Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., and their chauffeur, and turns out to have been much more serious than at first reported. Mr. Vanderbilt and his chaffeur were mobbed, and the former drew a revolver, and both Mr. Vanderbilt and his chaffeur were arrested and taken to the police station. Mrs. Vanderbilt was escorted to the best hotel in the place, where, according to the latest advices, she was awaiting developments.

Killed Over Whisky.

Canton, Ga.—Cleveland Picklesimon shot and instantly killed Thomas Grey in the road about eight miles from here. It is stated that the men quarreled over some whisky they had made together. Grey leaves a widow and several children.

Killed By Train.

Birmingham, Ala.—J. D. Cole, 47 years of age, a well known farmer of Mt. Pinson, was struck by a work train on the Louisville and Nashville railroad known as the "Dude," at Fifth avenue and Thirty-third street Saturday night and instantly killed.

Hensky Under Arrest.

Saratoff, Russia.—Matus Hensky, the absconding assistant of Father Gapon, was arrested here. He was located by a committee of St. Petersburg workmen, but refused to deliver up the $21,000 belonging to the funds of the workmen's organization. Hensky will be taken to St. Petersburg for trial.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The Indianapolis Sentinel has suspended publication and announced that owing to its operation being unprofitable its affairs would be gradually wound up. The daily subscriptions and the physical plant have been taken over by the Indianapolis News. The Sunday Sentinel will be taken over by the Indianapolis Star.

The Facetious Hatter.

Down in Nassau street there is a hatter who calls attention to his wares by arranging his windows with freak devices, the latest form of which is to fill his shop front with nothing but straw hats.

In the spaces not occupied by the unseasonable headgear big signs are displayed, one bearing the announcement that these are the "fur caps of the Panamas." Another sign reads: "Isn't this funny?" and the passing crowd evidently thinks so, for few of its units went along without stopping to look and grin. The hatter made a distinct contribution to the gayety of New York for a few days at least.—New York Press.

German Law on Soldering.

Germany prohibits the use of acids or chloride of zinc for soldering cables or other similar electrical conductors.

NO CONCESSIONS

Beyond Certain Limit. France Will Not Bow to Germany. No Fear of War.

GOVERNMENT'S STAND IS FIRM.

War Will Not Necessarily Follow, as It Is Believed the Kaiser's Nation Is Not Anxious to Fight.

Paris.—The officials of the foreign office emphasize Premier Rouvier's statement in the chamber of deputies Friday that "France wants peace only on conditions assuring her rights and dignity" as summing up the government's intentions at Algeciras.

This is couple with the view that the government's right and dignity have already reached the furthest limits of concession, and that therefore from the standpoint of the government authorities it is preferable that the agony of the conference be not prolonged, as France prefers to continue the status quo in Morocco as though the conference had not tried to deal with the question.

This attitude does not involve any thought of immediate war. On the contrary, the highest authorities here are firmly convinced that the failure of the conference will not bring war, first, because their advices show that Germany does not want war, and, secondly, because French official and public opinion is strongly against war. It is therefore the expectation in government circles that the deadlock in Algeciras will drag along until a disagreement is manifest and then some colorless action will be taken, leaving the main Franco-German issue where it was before the conference was decided upon.

The effect of this will be to establish the status quo, which France prefers to anything short of the conference conceding her paramount position in Morocco.

Concerning the possibility of European unrest leading to eventual war, some important information has been received in high quarters. This shows that Austria's place in the triple alliance does not assure her taking up arms against France, as it is definitely known that the Hungarian troops would not participate in an Austrian movement against France, owing to Hungary not sharing Austria's support of Germany on the Moroccan question.

The officials are also firmly convinced that the underlying cause of Germany's course at Algeciras is a desire to break up the Anglo-French understanding, but it is asserted that the failure of the conference will leave the Anglo-French accord as strong as ever. In this connection King Edward's coming passage through Paris on his way to Biarritz causes comment in the newspapers, which assert that the king will see President Fallieres and Premier Rouvier in order to give renewed evidence of the vitality of the Anglo-French agreement.

Pittsburg, Pa.—Two street car accidents in which forty persons were seriously injured, three of whom will die, occurred Saturday evening a few miles above this city on the Millvale and Etna division of the Pittsburg Railway Company.

The accidents were only about twenty minutes apart and resulted from a similar cause, the warm weather bringing frost from the ground, causing the rails to spread. One car left the track near Bennett, and went over a fourteen-foot embankment, injuring thirty passengers, while the second car was evidently derailed opposite the Rising Sun Hotel, going over a fifteen-foot embankment and hurling ten of the seventeen occupants. That many persons were not killed outright is considered miraculous, as both cars were demolished as a result of the terrible impact when they struck the tracks of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, which runs parallel below the street car tracks.

Acquitted of Murder Charge.

Austin, Tex.—Roland Browne, on trial for the murder of Congressman Pinckney at Hempstead a year ago, was acquitted by the jury after a week's trial and after an hour's deliberations.

Brakeman Becomes Insane.

Parsons, Kas.—Edward Ellerton, a Missouri, Kansas and Texas brakeman on his way to the company hospital in Sedalia, suddenly went insane on the flyer just after it had left Parsons for St. Louis. After cutting two passengers he ran ahead of the train, laid down on the track and allowed the wheels to pass over his body, severing his head from his shoulders.

Agnus Well Again.

Baltimore, Md.—Gen. Felix Agnus, publisher and editor of the Baltimore American, who recently underwent an operation for appendicitis, has recovered.

Paper Mill Burned.

Plymouth, N. H.—The paper mill of J. B. Henry & Sons at Lincoln burned Saturday. Loss, $150,000.

KILLS UNCLE WHO WRONGED HER

Italian Girl Also Makes Attempt to Kill Her Aunt and Confesses to the Crime.

New York.—Mrs. Josephine Terranova, aged 17, an Italian, declared that she killed her uncle, Gaitano Riggio, and attempted to kill his wife, and declared that she was justified in doing so. When arrested she told the police that her uncle had taken advantage of her innocence with his wife's knowledge, and had so mistreated her that on the day of her wedding, two months ago, her young husband left her.

Sufferings from the jeers of her friends, she said she put on all her wedding finery, went to her uncle's room and after firing two shots from a revolver at him and missing, fatally stabbed him and wounded her aunt. She escaped arrest until today, when she was found by the police a few hours after her uncle died at a hospital.

WOULD ENFRANCHISE WOMEN.

Sir Charles Dilke's Bill Proposes That They Shall Not Only Vote, but Enter House and Lords.

London.—Sir Charles Dilke, member of parliament for the Forest of Dean division of Gloucestershire, has actively entered the list as champion of the enfranchisement of women, and if his bill is adopted woman soon may be sitting in the house of commons, and peeresses also acting as legislatresses in the house of lords.

The measure provides that every man and woman shall be qualified to vote at parliamentary and other elections, and no persons shall be disqualified by sex or marriage from being a member of either house of parliament.

MURDERER GIVES HIMSELF UP.

John Cross Hammond Was Charged With Killing Wife and Putting Body in a Trunk.

Albany, N. Y.—John Cross Hammond, whose first wife's body was found in a trunk in their home in the south end of this city last November, nearly two weeks after she is supposed to have been murdered and ten days after he himself had disappeared, walked into police headquarters Saturday and surrendered. He confessed to having killed his wife. Since his disappearance the authorities have traced him to Canada, thence to Arizona, thence to Montana, where all trace of him was lost.

Marquis Townsend Insane.

London.—According to the Daily Mail Marquis Townsend, 29 years of age, who six months ago married Gladys Sutherst, and about whose recent movements there has been considerable mystery, with rumors of disappearance, etc., has on petition of his father-in-law, Thomas Sutherst, barrister of law, been certified of unsound mind and is detained by order of a lunacy commissioner in his Brook street residence in London under control of his wife.

Loss of $1,000,000 by Fire.

Moncton, N. B.—The Canadian government sustained a loss of $1,000,000 by a fire which destroyed practically the entire plant here of the Inter-Colonial railroad in this city. The financial loss is the greatest caused by fire in this province since the conflagration which obliterated the business section of St. John in 1877. The Inter-Colonial railway is owned by the government, and the headquarters of the entire system are located in this city. The station and the large general offices of the railroad were saved.

Tornado in Hattiesburg.

Hattiesburg, Miss.—A tornado descended upon the southwestern suburb of Hattiesburg Saturday morning during a heavy storm. The home of Mrs. M. E. Dearmon was lifted up, carried twenty feet and demolished. She and her son escaped from the wreck with serious injuries. Fences were demolished and trees pulled up by the roots and twisted into splinters. The greatest damage was confined to an area of a block. Telephone poles in the vicinity were blown down.

London.—The correspondent of the Tribune at Pekin says: The court is nervous over the possibility of trouble. The president of the Chinese board appreciates the possibility of an anti-dynastic rising. The German legation has doubled its sentries on account of the posting of anti-foreign placards at Tien Tsin.

Killed While Resisting Arrest.

Louisville, Ky.—The Evening Post had a brief dispatch from Hindman, Ky., saying that in an attempt to arrest Fairo and Perry Stone and Henry C. Short at a place eight miles from Hindman the Stone boys were killed and Deputy Internal Revenue Collector Holliday and Short wounded.

Birmingham—Calvin Hampton Keith who was struck by an electric car Saturday near Twenty-fourth street and Rush avenue, died at his home in North Haven late Sunday afternoon from the effects of his injuries. At first it was not believed that he was fatally injured, but he took a turn for the worse Sunday and late in the afternoon he passed away. He was a man of family.

Good old Chilton is hard to beat. Time and again some of her sons wander off to fresh fields and pastures new, but after a time they return to home, sweet home. The attractions of the new place do not contrast favorably with the old home left behind, and the heart yearns to return.

The latest to return is D. N. Riggins, who has been trying life in Arkansas the last few years, but is glad to come home again. Recently, C. C. Mitchell returned to Cooper, after trying life in Louisiana. But after all old Chilton suits them best pecial Correspondence of The Banner.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 26, 1906

It's getting along about that time of the political calender when Presidential possibilities are talked about, so I am going to get in line and have my say. If my good fellow Democrats throughout this country were in touch with matters political as closely as I am, I could make an accurate prediction as to our next nominee. The Democratic party is in the hands of a lot of political pirates, and our first effort must be directed to saving the party from these Wall street cut throats, whose sole object is to rob the people and enrich themselves at the expense of our National party. It's high time to wake up and pave the way for the nomination of an honest Democrat to lead us to victory at the polls. That kind can't be found in New York, nor anywhere else where Rayan and Belmont have control of things. We have a winner in our party, one whom we know to posess all those qualifications to be desired in a champion of the people. That's Senator Charles A. Culberson of Texas. Lets all get busy linin ɣ up for him, and show our Republican friends at the next election what the Democrats can do with a real man at the head of their National ticket. With his name there we will win.

With the Republicans, its different. Nobody can tell what the trusts and corporations are going to do. But from present indications, it looks as though the man on the inside track for the Republican nomination is Senator Foraker, who is rapidly forging into publicity by his attitude on the railroad rate bill and statehood fight. This is just a guess. Its too soon to say.

CHARLES A. EDWARDS.

UNDOUBTEDLY A PUBLIC DUTY

Road building is undoubtedly a public duty which rests upon the government in some form. The bills before Congress present a feasible way to a solution of the long vexed trouble, and it is gratifying to note the strong sentiment in every part of the country for their enactment into law. This proposition offers a policy of co operation and seeks to bring in the general government as a factor to work in connection with any State or subdivision thereof, the United States to pay one half of the cost of improvement and the State or subdivision to pay the other half. There is every reason why the people of the country should receive this help. It is not, in fact, an innovation. Government is ordained for the common wellfare. The Constitution of the United States has been found to favor appropriations of public moneys to promote private enterprise and special interests; ot build up the seacoast States through river and harbor improvements at the expense of the inland States; and to take of the people's treasure to build roadways and otherwise improve conditions for half civilized and uncivilized inhabitants of the islands of the seas. Surely that Constitution cannot be summoned as a barrier against the progress and development of the people at home. Government aid to road building is within reach if its friends continue the struggle. National aid to highway improvement is a national obligation because improved highways would bring national blessings where now exist conditions that are hurtful to national life and prosperity.

Write to Hon. W. P. Brownlow at Washington for a copy of his good roads bill.

Don't frown—look pleasant. If you are suffering from indigestion or sour stomach, take Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. Hon. Jake Moore, of Atlanta, Ga., says: "I suffered more than 20 years with indigestion. OBITUARY.

On the morning of Feb. 10th, the people of our entire community was made to feel sad and lonely by the departure of the spirit of Mr. John Broadhead from this earthly home, to a brighter home in the realms of eternal glory.

It is mysterious to us that God would take one of his loved ones while in the prime of life, yet God has a nobler, better work for him, and we must consider that God doeth all things well.

Mr. Broadhead was born April 1st, 1871, and died Feb. 10th, 1906. He leaves a loving wife and two children, and a host of friends and near relatives to mourn his loss. He joined the M. P. Church in early life and lived a consistent member until his death, and this gives us the sweet assurance that God has only called him to rest. He is not only missed by his family, but the entire community. He has lived in Sardis community for many years, and has proved to be a christian gentleman.

Now, to the grief stricken family we will say, weep not, dear friends, for our loss is his eternal gain. Life is as a vapor which passes away with the morning sunlight. We shall soon see him again. He cannot come back to us, but just a little while and God will call us too, then we will not only be with him, but an immense host of loved ones who have gone on before us. His loving wife and little boys have the sympathy of our entire community. We commit them to God and earnestly pray that they may consecrate their lives to the service of God.

"One by one we're passing over
To the land of love and light,
Where the heart is never weary,
Where the day is never night,
Where a tear-drop never glitters
In the love light of the eye.
And the sigh and sob are silent
On the shores of 'by and by.'"

STOCK'S ALRIGHT.

Verbena, Feb. 27, 1906

Editor Banner—To relieve the strain upon the minds of certain individuals in and about Clanton, I write to say that I have lost of my recent shipment of horses only two, and one native horse, one with a plain case of pneumonia, the other shipped, one by lick on the head top Also the native horse, the latter dying from lockjaw Have only seven left, one of which is now well from case of pneumonia. All have had acclimation fever, but all are now safe and ready for sale and use.. I have refused in a number of cases to sell because I felt more able to to bear the loss in case of death than the poor farmer to whom I expected to and have sold them Unscrupulous and designing people have taken great pains to circulate damaging reports giving notes of warning to prospective buyers, not to go to Verbena to buy, for the reason that "All Gulledge's horses have some unknown disease," and it is to relieve this class that I write this. Will say further that I have not sold one that is not sound and a good worker and can't be bought back at price sold for.

I have a nice pair match mares 4 and 5 years old Also pair pony horses, two combination saddle and harness horses, one of which is a Tennessee horse, the other a native grade Hambletonian, all sound and good workers. Also have few good proven brood mares, as well as few mules unsold. Now think I will carry lot to Clanton, next Saturday, March 3d.

Impoverished Soil

Impoverished soil, like impoverished blood, needs a proper fertilizer. A chemist by analyzing the soil can tell you what fertilizer to use for different products.

If your blood is impoverished your doctor will tell you what you need to fertilize it and give it the rich, red corpuscles that are lacking in it. It may be you need a tonic, but more likely you need a concentrated fat food, and fat is the element lacking in your system.

There is no fat food that is so easily digested and assimilated as

Vinol THE COD LIVER PREPARATION WITHOUT OIL

Vinol is fast superseding old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions because, without a drop of oil or disagreeable feature, it contains all the medicinal elements of cod liver oil, actually taken from fresh cods' livers. By our process the oil, having no value either as a medicine or food, is separated from the medicinal elements and thrown away. Unlike old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions, Vinol is deliciously palatable, agreeable to the weakest stomach, and therefore unequaled as a body builder and strength creator for old people, puny children, weak, run-down men and women, after sickness, and for all pulmonary diseases. Everything Vinol contains is named on the label.

OUR GUARANTEE—We have such faith in VINOL that if you will take it we promise if it does not benefit or cure you we will return you your money without question. We take all the risk.

The farmers' interest in this community is making rapid progress. The farmers are done sowing oats and are now preparing their corn and cotton ground with their usual skill and good judgment. The farmers of this community are stirring men, and we may look for good results next fall, if hard labor and close application can produce such results.

St. Valentine's day has come and gone, but we enjoyed it very much while it stayed with us. We had a very nice drawing at the home of Mr Robert Jones, which seemed to be enjoyed by all present. And now we can only look forward to the annual return of this pleasant holiday, though many of us may have gone to that home from whence none return.

We had the pleasure of attending an apron party at the home of Mrs. M. M. Durbin a few nights ago. It was the first one of that kind we ever had the pleasure of attending, and it was remarkably funny to see the boys and young men attempting to hem aprons in their awkward and fumble-fist style. The awkwardness in their manner of holding the goods and using their needles excited a great deal of laughter, comment and ridicule. Mr. Grover Harris won the prize for the best work and Mr. Rufus Popwell for the worst; Miss Lula Sims won the candy for tieing the nicest tie. The evening passed off pleasantly and every one seemed to enjoy the entertainment very much.

Mr. Mike Williams and family, who were for several years residents of this community, but who have made Billingsley their home of late, have gone to make their home in Jacksonville Ala. We hope very much that they will like their new home, be satisfied and prosperous. Best wishes to the Banner and its readers.

THE PULPIT.

A SCHOLARLY SUNDAY SERMON BY THE REV. A. H. C. MORSE.

Subject: Evangelization.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—In the Strong Place Baptist Church, Sunday morning, the pastor, the Rev. A. H.-C. Morse, preached a foreign mission sermon, the subject being "Evangelization." The text was from Joshua xiii:1: "There remaineth yet very much land to be possessed." Mr. Morse said:

There is an ancient Israel, and there is a modern Israel. The task before the former was the establishment of the kingdom of God in the land of promise. And the task before the latter is the establishment of the kingdom of God in all the world. The work before these ancient people was preparatory and temporal. The work before the church is final. What remains beyond the work appointed to us is yet hidden behind the hills of eternity.

The supreme thing, then, is the evangelization of the world. And I make no apology this morning when I call your attention to this stupendous subject. It will do us good to lift our eyes from our own immediate field, and look at the world which is the field of God; and to leave our own little beaten track, and to swing out into the circle where sweep His mighty plans. Centuries have elapsed since our work was announced, and herculean tasks have been performed. Mountains of prejudice have been leveled; rivers of blood have been forded; fires of persecution have been endured, and whole kingdoms have been taken. "But there remaineth yet much land to be possessed." I want to speak to you then on "The Authority for Foreign Missions, and Their Aims and Inspiration."

In a single word, the authority for Christian missions must be found, not in the truths we hold, but in the Person whom we love. This may be seen in the very etymology of the word, for authority is something added—added to the abstract truth or duty. There is no authority apart from a person. When an attorney is asked his authority, he cites the decisions of a judge; and when a scholar is asked his authority, he does not exploit his opinions, but he names his author. The same principle holds in religion. And the ultimate authority must be a person, and that person must be the highest, and moreover he must be known. It is easy to see, therefore, that authority is ruled from the so-called religion of pantheism, for it posits no personal being. It rules authority also from rationalism, for reason, fallible and dependent, cannot be the highest. And it takes authority from agnosticism, for that declares that God cannot be known. But I shall not pursue this subject into the mazes of philosophy. I simply lay this down as an opening thought that the authority for Christian missions is found in Christ because He is a person, and because He is the highest person, and because He can be known. It is in view of this that He can say, "All authority is given unto Me in heaven and on earth. Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations."

Authority belongs to Christ because He is the eternal word, and is also the only God with whom we have to do. I know there are secondary sources of authority to which we must give obedience, such as to parents and teachers and to the laws of the State. But back of all these and over them all is the personal Christ, and He alone has a right to tell me what are truth and duty. And authority belongs to Him because He has undertaken to dispel the darkness of the world by a special revelation of the love of God. He has joined Himself to humanity to save it. And it is this revelation of God that is added to all the truth we hold that constitutes the authority for missions. Missions are the propaganda of Jesus, and His method of reconciling an apostate humanity. And even if He had not uttered His great commission, still world-wide missions would have their claims, for they are but the answer to the call from the ends of the earth; for humanity sundered from God feels its destitution and misery. The whole world groans in its hunger. You can hear it in the plaintive song of the bird, and the sighing of every breeze. And after all a world-wide mission is only an answer to a world-wide need.

The authority for missions is "God manifest in the flesh." But what flesh? The flesh of the Anglo-Saxon. We are a wonderful people. Let us freely admit that we are the most virile race upon the earth, that our institutions are the best; that we possess the bulk of the world's culture and refinement; that we are the subjects of the best government; and are the most ingenious and inventive and wealthy. But how came we to have this premier position? We are only the great-grandchildren of heathen and barbarous fathers. We owe our superiority to the remaining heathen nations to the fact that the Gospel was first preached to us. Wonderful we are. But we are not the sum total of the race of men. "Who do men say that I the Son of Man am?" The son of what man? Of Abraham? Of the Anglo-Saxon? Of the man of India? Or of Africa? Or the man of the islands of the sea? The manhood of humanity was in the flesh of Jesus, and I fall back upon the humanity of Christ as my authority for a world-wide mission. And that is what makes me confident that the Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to India and China and Africa, to the islands of the sea. Not that we hope to make these peoples but a pale copy of the Anglo-Saxon; but that we shall develop that gift of thought and heart which God has wrought into their texture, and that they shall be patterned, not after us, but after the Son of Man. The authority for missions is found in a universal hunger of the heart.

So much then for the authority for foreign missions. Now I speak of their aim and inspiration. And this is a phase of the subject which is not always clear in the public mind. I have read in a missionary paper, even, that if foreign missions are to accomplish permanent results, we must aim at the total reorganization of the whole social fabric of the countries into which we go. Now that is an evil doctrine. You can find nothing to justify it in the history, nor in the experience of the church, nor in the example of our Lord and His apostles. They did not aim at reconstructing the social fabric, but at implanting the life of Christ in the human heart. They sought to renew the lives of men, and they knew that these new lives would demand new social combinations. They knew that no human tyranny could exist where Jesus Christ was King.

We must not confuse the immediate aim with the secondary aim, nor with the ultimate result of missions. There is no work in all the world so powerful to accomplish secondary results as the work of foreign missions. Of course, the habits are changed and the civic life reorganized. But that is not the immediate aim. The immediate aim is not social nor civilizing, but religious. And I had rather, as Mr. Speer says, "Plant one seed of the life of Christ under the crust of heathen life than cover that whole crust over with the veneer of our social habits, or the vesture of Western civilization." We are trustees, but not primarily of better social customs, but of a life which will shape its own civilization.

The aim of missions is evangelization, and that is the publishing in all the world of God's glad tidings. The aim is to make Christ known in all the world. I state it thus, for though it does not shift our responsibility, it does lighten our burden. It does not remove the obligation to hasten with the proclamation of Christ, but it does relieve us of the impossible burden of converting the world. We cannot convert a single soul; how shall we convert the world? But we can present the Gospel in such a way to every soul in all the world that the responsibility for what is done with it shall rest no longer upon the church nor upon any person in the church, but upon the man himself. We can so present the message of evangelization that we can fling the responsibility for the world's conversion back upon God Himself, for He alone can renew a human heart.

I do not preach upon missions because I want to challenge your sympathies for the philanthropic results which they achieve. My object is larger than that. I want your aid in making Jesus known. I know these other things will follow. I believe that God is King, and that the hand that shaped the world at first is in all the forces that to-day are shaping life. He holds the reins of politics and commerce and civilization. It was John Newton who said, he read the New Testament to see how God loved the world, but he read the newspapers to see how He governed it. And I am convinced that all our everyday affairs do run into the great goals of God. And these things, our governments and customs and inventions, are but as the chaff before the wind as compared with the supreme purpose that God, who is King, shall reign as King, and rule as Lord of Lords.

We are getting to understand the problem, and these last years are witnessing wonderful movements. The annual accessions to the churches in the foreign fields far outnumber those of the churches at home. And in many instances their offerings to this great work go far before our own. More work is being assigned to the native churches, and greater responsibilities laid on them. Modern missions are young, but we can almost see the day when mission boards will not need to send to foreign fields great sums of money, nor large numbers of preachers. For the native churches are prolific in preachers of their own who can find the hearts of their people much better than we can. And already the day is come when our largest attention is given to the teaching and education of the preachers, and to the general administration of the work. That is the meaning of this call for endowment for the great Christian colleges and seminaries which are growing up in those far off lands.

Paul said he was a "prisoner of Jesus Christ." That is the essence of the missionary life. The Lord's prisoner—not the prisoner of Rome, though he lay in a Roman prison, and was scourged of Caesar. He said he was an "ambassador in bonds." He didn't look like that. His old rusty chain rattled on his wrists, and clanked in his empty cell. But he said I am conducting an embassy in chains. Oh, what limitations the missionaries have endured! Sickness and suffering and infirmity and separation from wife and children. And what are they doing? Conducting an embassy for heaven in chains and in a limitation which God permits. They do not complain, they feel their freedom, and are the happiest men in all the earth. I have seen them, battered and worn, return to the churches at home. But I never applaud them as some do when they speak at national meetings. We who remain at home are not worthy to unloose the latchets of their shoes.

The story of modern missions reads like a romance. One hundred years ago it was a forlorn cause. Then the doors of the nations were locked, and the church itself was either unmissionary or anti-missionary. Now the sky is ablaze with light and there is no self-respecting church in all the land that will tolerate a man in its pulpit who does not publish foreign missions. And all over the world are to be seen the camp fires of those who have gone away with the great evangel.

Can we not read the signs of the times? Great days are crowding upon us, and after years of prayer and patient labor, the Lord is giving us the attention of this great section of the city. Can it be saved? Do we believe in the strong arm of the Gospel? Then pour your life into this great work. The church—this church, exists for no other purpose than to give the Gospel to the world. Be large in your interest in our immediate work. But that is not enough. Be large in your effort in world-wide evangelization.

Christian Experience.

Henry Ward Beecher once said: "Shallow waters are easily muddied. After a night of storm the waters of the bay, along the beach, are foul and black with the mire and dirt. But look beyond, out into the deep water, how blue and clear it is! The white caps on the surface show the violence of the wind, but the water is too deep for the storms that sweep its surface to stir up the earth at the bottom. So is Christian experience. A shallow experience is easily disturbed; the merest trifles becloud and darken the soul whose piety is superficial; while the most furious storm of life fails to darken or disturb the soul which has attained a deep experience of the things of God."

The Modern Battle.

By Thomas F. Millard.

TODAY circumstances place a commander completely out of sight of his army. He is usually located at least ten or fifteen miles from the firing-line, and in many instances is even further away. He sits in a room whence radiate telephone and telegraph lines to remotest portions of the field, placing him in instantaneous communication with his principal subordinates.

The famous painting of Napoleon at Austerlitz represents, in the popular eye, a commanding general directing a great battle. But it belongs to the warfare of the past. The artist who aspires to depict the direction of a modern battle must show a man seated at a table on which is spread a huge map dotted with little flags indicating the location of the opposing forces, with an ordinary desk telephone at his elbow. In an adjoining room is a switchboard, where sit alert operators ready to connect the commander with any of the field headquarters. From this room also comes the steady clicking of a score of telegraph instruments busily receiving and sending messages.

But for the military uniforms of the messengers and the going and coming of staff officers the man at the table might be a stock operator directing, through his brokers, a deal in Steel or railroad securities. Even the stenographer at his elbow is not lacking, but sits quietly taking messages under dictation, to be transmitted presently by telegraph. Other officers copy these messages and file them away, after putting them under a time recording stamp to show the hour they were sent, so that afterward delinquencies may be located and responsibilities fixed.

Thus, apart from the excitement and horrors of the battlefield a general sits at a desk and calmy directs the battle. He hears that this attack has been repulsed, that reinforcements are needed here, that ammunition is running low there, that this division has been cut into pieces, that those troops have been two days without food, and so on, along his forty miles of front, and takes his measures accordingly.—Scribner's.

Revenue From Traffic.

Is the Self-Interest of the Railways Always Ample Protection to the Shipper?

By Charles A. Prouty.

A RAILWAY is a business enterprise, its revenues come from its traffic. Without traffic it has no revenue and yields no return. Its transportation charges must, therefore, be so adjusted as to develop its business—such that its lumber can move from its forests, its coal from its mines, its iron from its furnaces. The self-interest of the railway often compels it to establish rates, in order that its traffic may move, which are lower than would be fixed by any government tribunal invested with that authority. Laying hold on this undoubted truth, the opponents of railway regulation insist that the self-interest of the railway is ample protection to the shipper, since the rate will not be so advanced as to interfere with the movement of the traffic.

It is certainly true that this principle is an important one in its application to railway operation, and that it has exercised a high salutary influence upon the development of the resources of our country. It is a most substantial reason why railways should be given the initiative in the making of their rates; but it does not afford adequate protection against the imposition of unjust rates, for the reason that the rate may be too high and the traffic still move.

Consider once more our cattle case. Here was an advance of 25 per cent. in cattle rates to market—an addition of four millions of dollars annually to the revenues of those railroads and a hundred millions to the value of their properties. And yet the testimony in that case shows that its effect upon the movement of the traffic was comparatively slight. The amount of loss through reduction in tonnage was as nothing compared with the gain through increase in the net revenues.

Will the astute traffic manager kill the hen which lays the golden egg? No, but if the animal is confided to his exclusive custody, he may appropriate all the eggs, and he certainly will appropriate more than his share.—The Century.

The Hostility to Large Fortunes

By J. Laurence Laughlin.

THE hostility to large fortunes does not diminish with time and events. The violent denunciations of the discontented classes, or the more extreme socialists, find an echo in the ranks of the more conservative groups. Into these expressions, evidently based on strong convictions, has entered the sting arising from a passionate sense of wrong; that these enormous accumulations are possible only at the expense of the poor; and that women and children go cold and hungry in order that others may go warmly clad and live luxuriously. In this point of view there is a hopelessness which serves as the incentive to brute force, to wild assaults upon the bulwarks of property and institutions. What are we coming to? Are the times out of joint? Certainly we are forced to face the facts as found in the thinking of great numbers of people.

To say that a man is a multi-millionaire is, to many, equivalent to saying that he is an enemy of society, reaping where he has not sown, and protecting himself in his vast possessions only by the corrupt control of municipal councils, legislatures, and even the highest courts. It is this state of mind which leads some intelligent writers to hint of another French Revolution, and of prison bars for the financial kings. Yet, as we look back a century, there was not, at least in the United States, any such antagonism between the rich and the poor. Perhaps the contrasts between the rich and the poorest were far less marked then than now, and the causes of dissatisfaction due to impotent rivalry were more generally absent. In those earlier days obviously, the total wealth of the community in all forms was very small in comparison with its diffusion today.—The Atlantic.

ROOSEVELT'S CREED.

President Tells How Men Achieve Greatness.

The President once answered in this wise a man who had expressed admiration for his successful career:

"It has always seemed to me that in life there are two ways of achieving success, or for that matter, of achieving what is commonly called greatness. One is to do that which can only be done by the man of exceptional and extraordinary abilities. Of course, this means that only one man can do it, and it is a very rare kind of success or of greatness. The other is to do that which many men could do, but which, as a matter of fact, none of them actually does. This is the ordinary kind of greatness. Nobody but one of the world's rare geniuses could have written the Gettysburg speech, or the second inaugural, or met as Lincoln met the awful crises of the civil war. But most of us can do the ordinary things which, however, most of us do not do. Any hardy, healthy man, fond of outdoor life, but not in the least an athlete, could lead the life I have led if he chose—and by 'choosing' I, of course, mean choosing to exercise the requisite industry, judgment and foresight, none of a very marked type."

"Choosing to exercise the requisite industry, judgment and foresight"—here is the key to the President's physical and intellectual prowess. He chose; and, choosing wisely, he has blazed the way for any hardy, healthy man who is fond of outdoor life.

He began his choosing when a small lad. It was not so difficult then, for he had an inspiring companion constantly by his side. The President was more than ordinarily fortunate in the possession of such a father as Theodore Roosevelt, first of the line. It is not enough to say of him that he was well born, and that he was a man of means, of intelligence and cultivation, and of high character. He was the "finest man" the President "ever knew."—McClure's Magazine.

CHINESE REVOLT

Begins—Two Missions Destroyed—English Family of Four Murdered.

GUNBOAT GOES TO THE RESCUE.

Outbreak Occurs Four Hundred Miles Up the Yangtse River—Same Tactics as Before Boxer Riots.

Washington, D. C.—Consul-General Rodgers at Shanghai cables the state department Monday that the American missionary stations at Manchange and Kiense have been destroyed. The probable cause is local.

Telegrams received from those points state that the fourteen American missionaries at those places escaped, but the Kingham family, English, two adults and two children, are reported to have been killed.

The American gunboat El Cano, at Nankin, was ordered to proceed immediately to Kiukiang, probably arriving Wednesday. The scene of the trouble is about 400 miles up the Yangtse river.

A still later dispatch from Mr. Rodgers received at the state department says that the inland British missions are reported to be safe.

A cablegram from Commander Fletcher, the senior officer of the Raleigh, at Shanghai, received at the navy department Monday, confirms substantially Consul-General Rodgers' report.

A dispatch says: President Roosevelt has grown suspicious of the good faith of the Chinese government as the result of a policy which it seems to be pursuing. He has been given assurances through Minister Rockhill which are not in keeping with the acts of the Pekin authorities.

Apparently there has been adopted at the Chinese capital tactics such as were observed in 1900, prior to the Boxer outbreak. The diplomatic corps was told then most positively that the reports of a general uprising were without foundation and that the government had taken ample measures to suppress local disturbances and to prevent injury to life and property. The result of this representation was the failure of foreign powers to take action for the protection of their subjects and interests until it was too late.

The administration sees in the present situation a parallel with that which existed prior to the Boxer outrage, with this single and important difference—that the present unrest is not confined to two provinces in the north, but prevails all over the empire.

The state department is advising mission boards to bring in all missionaries stationed in outlying districts inaccessible to warships or troops, and place them at points where they can be protected. Rear Admiral Train, commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet, is giving similar advice to the missionaries themselves.

United States consuls also are warning missionaries and other Americans that the situation is of such a character as to warrant them in taking precautions to fly to points of safety the moment the disorders break out.

Neither the navy nor the war department is abating its efforts to be ready to act the moment the president gives the word.

Trainman Killed—Passengers Injured.

New Orleans, La.—One trainman was killed, another injured and nine passengers bruised in a wreck on the New Orleans and Northeastern, eleven miles south of Meridian, at 6:30 o'clock Sunday night. The local passenger leaving Meridian at 6 o'clock and a train of empty coaches from New Orleans used in bringing carnival visitors met head on. Both engines were derailed, but all the other cars remained on the track. Engineer J. D. Lee, of the northbound train, who had been in the service of the company for twenty years, was killed. Engineer Cissna was slightly hurt. None of the injured passengers had bones broken. The property damage amounted to $10,000. Train service was delayed for three hours.

Negro Woman Burns to Death.

Scottsboro, Ala.—Lizzie Malone, a negro woman of this county, was burned to death last Wednesday. She was crazy at times, and during one of her spells she was locked up in the calaboose for fear she would harm herself or some one. While confined in the city prison in some way she came in contact with the stove, and when found by the marshal her clothing was burned almost off of her body, and her face, arms and lower limbs were burnt to a crisp. She died in a short time after being found.

Drowned in Tub.

Birmingham.—Susie Ruth Bass, the 18-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Bass, of Irondale, was drowned late Saturday evening at her home while playing at a tub of water sitting in the back yard and which was used for horses to drink from. The burial tok place at Hebron cemetery at 11 o'clock this morning, conducted by Shaw & Son.

Hetty Green's Activity.

The possession of something like $30,000,000 or $40,000,000, and the reputation of being the richest woman in America, do not seem to weigh very heavily on Mrs. Hetty Green, if one may judge by the reports of her continued activities in these days. She is still as fond of money and as anxious to add to her millions as she fifteen or twenty years ago. Mrs. Green's father was a New Bedford (Mass.) man, Edward Mott Robinson, who became rich in the whaling business, leaving her $9,000,000; she got other millions from her aunt, Miss Sylvia Howland, to get which involved some litigation and charges of forgery against her. She was quite a belle in her youth, and yet never seemed susceptible to any sentiment except money getting; so that she was married to E. H. Green, who had made a fortune in the China trade on a business basis. She owns railroads, mines and other things too numerous to mention, and she has a son, Edward Howland Robinson Green, who is a capable and enterprising railroad manager in Texas. Mrs. Green has a reputation for a hard and grasping nature, and for living as poorly and dressing as shabbily as if she had not a penny in the world. How much injustice is done her by these tales of her miserly ways and narrow and wretched life it is not for us tosay. But if they are only measurably true there is not a woman in the world more unenviable than Mrs. Hetty Green.

The present population of Paris is 2,700,000.

FOOD AND STUDY

A College Man's Experience.

"All through my high school course and first year in college," writes an ambitious young man, "I struggled with my studies on a diet of greasy, pasty foods, being especially fond of cakes and fried things. My system got into a state of general disorder and it was difficult for me to apply myself to school work with any degree of satisfaction. I tried different medicines and food preparations but did not seem able to correct the difficulty.

"Then my attention was called to Grape-Nuts food and I sampled it. I had to do something, so I just buckled down to a rigid observance of the directions on the package, and in less than no time began to feel better. In a few weeks my strength was restored, my weight had increased, I had a clearer head and felt better in every particular. My work was simply sport to what it was formerly.

"My sister's health was badly run down and she had become so nervous that she could not attend to her music. She went on Grape-Nuts and had the same remarkable experience that I had. Then my brother, Frank, who is in the Postoffice Department at Washington city and had been trying to do brain work on greasy foods, cakes and all that, joined the Grape-Nuts army. I showed him what it was and could do and from a broken-down condition he has developed into a hearty and efficient man.

"Besides these I could give account of numbers of my fellow-students who have made visible improvement mentally and physically by the use of this food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

UP TO DATE RECRUITING.

Phonograph and Stereopticon Used to Get Labor for Queensland Plantations.

Thousands of natives of Polynesia are needed to work on the sugar and other plantations of Queensland. These plantations are in the low coast regions; and as the climate is tropical white labor is not successful.

For many years sailing vessels have been visiting the islands to recruit Kanakas for the Queensland plantations. The trade gave rise to abuses which have been suppressed by law, but the natives are not so eager to emigrate as formerly and it is hard work to fill the vessels.

A sea captain in the Kanaka trade has introduced a new method of making emigration attractive. Before he sailed from Queensland a year ago he visited a number of the plantations where South Sea Islanders are employed.

He had a camera and a phonograph. Going from one plantation to another he photographer groups of natives and also took individual pictures of well-known fellows from the New Hebrides, Solomon and other groups.

Then he brought the phonograph into service. The best known natives who had a large acquaintance in the islands were induced to talk into the instrument and tell their friends the kind of life they led in Australia and how they were getting along on the plantations.

These phonographed letters were obtained from Kanakas who formerly lived in about a dozen of the islands which the recruiting vessels are in the habit of visiting. Then the ingenious shipmaster had his photographs turned into lantern slides and off he sailed for the islands well equipped to astonish the natives.

According to a Queensland newspaper the scheme has been a great success. The captain had an ample supply of lantern slides showing emigrants from each of the islands he visited.

Everybody was on hand to see the show and the natives were beside themselves with delight when they saw the well-known visages of their friends and acquaintances thrown upon the screen. But the greatest wonder was when each picture actually talked to the crowd in the very tones and accents which many of the auditors connected with the man upon whose face they were gazing.

The man sent them greetings from his plantation home 1,000 miles away. He told them he was doing well, that he liked the life and that Queensland was a good place to come to. He talked about the country, the money he earned and the good treatment he received.

Pictures were shown of the huts occupied by the emigrants, the fields they worked in and groups of laborers whose sleek appearance and smiling faces seemed to show that they were enjoying life.

The result is that the stereopticon and phonograph have proved to be valuable recruiting agents. Even the natives who have had the worst misgivings about emigration become enthusiastic converts to the idea when they see their friends actually before them and hear their well-known voices.

The captain had no difficulty in making up a load and other captains engaged in the Kanaka trade say they are going to employ the same expedient.

Pelican Island.

In that long, narrow lagoon on the east coast of Florida known as Indian River, there is a muddy islet three or four acres in extent. Originally it doubtless did not differ from hundreds of similar neighboring islets; but, for some reason past finding out, this islet, and this alone, forms the nesting resort, the home, of all the pelicans of the Indian River, if not, indeed, of the east coast of Florida. The brown pelican, unlike its white cousin, nests normally in low trees and bushes; and there is evidence that when the original pelican colonists landed on the islet which now bears their name, it was well grown with black and red mangroves in which the birds placed their scaffolding of sticks. Exceptionally low temperature and high water—perhaps also excessive use by the birds, which sometimes build as many as seven nests in a single mangrove—have killed tree after tree, until at present only three serviceable trees remain. Still the birds come back, the impelling motive which prompts them to return to this particular spot being evidently stronger than that which induced them to nest in trees.—Century.

Ate the Heart of Louis XIV.

There is no need to be skeptical regarding Mr. Labouchere's story that the late Dean Buckland swallowed the mummified remains of the heart of Louis XIV, and that it now rests in the dean's body in Islip churchyard, when one recalls the many weird dishes that the famous divine consumed in his life time. At his dinner parties, which were attended by leaders of science and literature, the menus were often of a most eccentric character. On one occasion pickled horse tongue was greatly relished by the guests until they were told what they had eaten. Alligator was served up as a rare delicacy, and puppies occasionally, and mice frequently. At other times hedgehogs, tortoises, potted ostrich and sometimes rats, frogs and snails were prepared for the delectation of favored guests. What more likely than that the dean should have a fancy for a royal heart?—London Chronicle

HIGH CLASS DRUGGISTS

AND — OTHERS.

The better class of druggists, everywhere, are men of scientific attainments and high integrity, who devote their lives to the welfare of their fellow men in supplying the best of remedies and purest medicinal agents of known value, in accordance with physicians' prescriptions and scientific formula. Druggists of the better class manufacture many excellent remedies, but always under original or officinal names and they never sell false brands, or imitation medicines. They are the men to deal with when in need of anything in their line, which usually includes all standard remedies and corresponding adjuncts of a first-class pharmacy and the finest and best of toilet articles and preparations and many useful accessories and remedial appliances. The earning of a fair living, with the satisfaction which arises from a knowledge of the benefits conferred upon their patrons and assistance to the medical profession, is usually their greatest reward for long years of study and many hours of daily toil. They all know that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative remedy and that it gives universal satisfaction, and therefore they are selling many millions of bottles annually to the well informed purchasers of the choicest remedies, and they always take pleasure in handing out the genuine article bearing the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package. They know that in cases of colds and headaches attended by biliousness and constipation and of weakness or torpidity of the liver and bowels, arising from irregular habits, indigestion, or over-eating, that there is no other remedy so pleasant, prompt and beneficial in its effects as Syrup of Figs, and they are glad to sell it because it gives universal satisfaction.

Owing to the excellence of Syrup of Figs, the universal satisfaction which it gives and the immense demand for it, imitations have been made, tried and condemned, but there are individual druggists to be found, here and there, who do not maintain the dignity and principles of the profession and whose greed gets the better of their judgment, and who do not hesitate to recommend and try to sell the imitations in order to make a larger profit. Such preparations sometimes have the name—"Syrup of Figs"—or "Fig Syrup" and of some piratical concern, or fictitious fig syrup company, printed on the package, but they never have the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of the package. The imitations should be rejected because they are injurious to the system. In order to sell the imitations they find it necessary to resort to misrepresentation or deception, and whenever a dealer passes off on a customer a preparation under the name of "Syrup of Figs" or "Fig Syrup," which does not bear the full name of the California Fig Syrup Co. printed on the front of the package, he is attempting to deceive and mislead the patron who has been so unfortunate as to enter his establishment, whether it be large or small, for if the dealer resorts to misrepresentation and and deception in one case he will do so with other medicinal agents, and in the filling of physicians' prescriptions, and should be avoided by every one who values health and happiness. Knowing that the great majority of druggists are reliable, we supply the immense demand for our excellent remedy entirely through the druggists, of whom it may be purchased everywhere, in original packages only, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, but as exceptions exist it is necessary to inform the public of the facts, in order that all may decline or return any imitation which may be sold to them. If it does not bear the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package, do not hesitate to return the article and to demand the return of your money, and in future go to one of the better class of druggists who will sell you what you wish and the best of everything in his line at reasonable prices.

Value of Nitrogen.

Nitrogen is so vital to the growth of plants that large sums are expended for fertilizers rich in that element. So far chemistry has done nothing effective in the way of obtaining nitrogen from the atmosphere. Yet it is calculated that the nitrogen in the air weighs no less than four billion million tons.

The Apron party given at the home of Mrs Durbin, on the night of the 24th, was certainly a success. People gathered there from far and near, the girls in one room and the boys in another Little Miss Bessie Durbin stood at the door to receive the girls, while her brother, Mr. Glaucus, received the boys.

The basket of handsome ties were passed around, and the boys having secured one, the girls marched in, wearing their aprons. The boys seem to have been practicing, for they hemmed the aprons in half an hour. When their task was over the Misses Lottie Johnson and Belle Popwell and Mrs. Moore were appointed judges.

Mr. Grover Harris won the cake on his excellent hemming, while Mr. Rufus Popwell won a boquet on the worst. Miss Leila Sims won the candy on making the nicest necktie.

The work being over, the girls chose their "best" to break candy with. The table was beautifully decorated with candies and fruit.

After refreshments were served we enjoyed several nice pieces on the guitar by Miss Lottie Johnson. Everyone seemed to enjoy themselves We sincerely hope that Mrs Durbin will see fit to allow us that privelege again soon. ucess to the boys who can sew

One would think the Laxative idea in a cough syrup should have been advanced long before it was. It seems the only rational remedy for Coughs and Colds would be to move the bowels and clean the mucous membranes of the throat and lungs at the same time. Kennedy's Laxative Honey and Tar does this. It is the Original Laxative Cough Syrup, the best known remedy for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Whooping Cough, etc. Tastes good and harmless. Sold by Upchurch Drug co.

REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature."—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

Shades Mountain.

As spring approaches there seems to be quite a number of enquiries for choice locations on Shades Mountain for truck farms and summer cottages. Recently several sales have been made of good sites at prices which show how persons acquainted with the many advantages and attractions of that high altitude regard the desirability of owning such property. Most of the sales of small tracts have been made near Hale Springs, on top of the mountain, just above Oxmoor, as it is only in that vicinity that the land has been laid off into small lots, but just beyond this locality there are some large tracts fronting on the brow of the mountain and affording a view of twenty five miles which the owners contemplate dividing up later on and offering for sale.

There was one sale recently made which netted the seller over $500 per acre, and two or three sales were made previous to this which realized about the same figures. These prices were obtained for very choice bluff front lots.

Among those already owning property in the vicinity mentioned are Messrs. J. H. Yeats, Jr., M L. Hannahan, secretary and treasurer of the Birmingham Fertilizer Co., J. A. Sharpley, Mrs. M. Crenshaw, recently from Verbena, Ala.; Mrs. J. T. Patton, Dr R. A. Ben, Jonas Schwab. Messrs Elmore Dison, Northington, Chas. Moore, of the Louisville & Nashville railroad; John Shannon, of the Sloss Sheffield Co.; R. S. Saunders, D. P., W. M. and Wm Hale, Dr. G. M Latham, J. T Tyler, T. M. Foulkes, J. T McCarv, John Towers Perry Glasscock, of Indiana; Hugh Morrow Dr R A Berry and quite a number of others.

It is the intention of one of the telephone companies to extend its line to the top of the mountain from West End and establish a small community exchange. The superintendent of the company went out only a few days ago to put matters in motion.

Mr. Jack Williams has bought a lot just where the Oxmoor road reaches the top of the mountain and will at once begin the erection of a storehouse in which he will conduct business.

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shenick, 220 So. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I on my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Editor Banner—It seems that the school election was next to a failure in Chilton county, 502 for the tax and 191 against it; this only leaves a majority of 311. This is the poorest showing of interest that I ever saw on so great and needed a subject. What was the matter? It is this: the people did not believe it would be used in the interest of the children. Now don't criticise me, but look at 2,000 voters and see how it went. That speaks for itself. Now, we feel the need of longer and better schools, but how in the name of common sense are the farmers going to get it under the present system? So our prospects are dim. Yes, we need more money, and if assessed I won't kick, but I don't see any encouragement for our commissioners to levy under the present vote. Now I don't lay this to a mistake in the tickets, but as above stated the people need a better light on the subject. Now, this all may be wrong, so let our leaders lead us for the best and I will follow.

Editor Banner—Please give me a small space in your valuable paper for the purpose of saying a few words to encourage the farmers of Chilton in goober raising, especially to those who raise cotton to buy their meat with. I ask you to please leave off two acres of your cotton land and plant it in goobers for the purpose of raising your meat at home, it will save you fifty per cent on the two acres of land. Last year I raised goobers for my hogs; after taking them off of my goobers I feed fifty bushels of corn and killed 4,445 pounds of meat. Try raising meat one year and see if you don't succeed.

Their many friends are as one in wishing for them a smooth path in life, strewn with roses from which the thorns have been taken. From the marriage the young people went to Mr. G. W. Willis' for a singing. The golden sunlight gleamed lustily through the window, and the plum bush in the corner of the yard and the peach tree at the back door scattered the fragrance of their blossoms in the wildest profusion upon the balmy breeze; as the mocking bird across the little vale blended its cheerful notes with the voices of the young people in singing praises to the Creator of all. The crowd dispersed with that joyful feeling that comes to young people only by pleasant associations, and with a feeling of gratitude to Mr. Willis for his kindness to them.

EIGHTEEN CARS WRECKED.

Second Section of Freight Wrecked at Calhoun, Ga.

Calhoun, Ga.—Eighteen cars out of a total of thirty of the second section of southbound freight No. 9 were derailed near Legg Bros.' brick yard, in North Calhoun, Saturday afternoon at 3:50 o'clock. Fourteen of the cars are badly wrecked. The wreck was caused by one of the journals on a car being run off, causing the arch bar to drop and catch in the switch bars at the brick plant. The track was torn torn up for a great distance, and some of the cars are at the bottom of a fill, having rolled down the embankment. The cars wrecked were loaded with hay and grain.

KNIFE BLADE IN HIS SIDE.

J. T. Barton Was Seriously Cut by W. S. Ellison—Had Fight in Saloon.

Atlanta, Ga.—J. T. Barton, a white man, was cut in the left side and had a portion of a knife blade left sticking between his ribs, when he and W. S. Ellison, another white man, had a fight in a Decatur street saloon.

Nobody seemed to know how the row started. There were some loud words, a scuffle, and then Barton was lying on the floor with a cut on his left side. He was taken to the police barracks by Officers Wells and Cooper and Detective Bedford, and from there sent to the Grady Hospital, where it was ascertained that he was seriously cut. A portion of a knife blade was found in the wound and was removed by the hospital physicians. Cases were made against both Barton and Ellison.

TERRIFIC TORNADO

Strikes Meridian Leaving Death and Destruction in Its Path.

MANY ARE KILLED AND INJURED.

Tornado Passed Through Densely Populated Section of Poor Houses, Which Took Fire.

Meridian, Miss.—A terrific cyclone struck Meridian at 6:27 Friday evening, demolishing almost the entire Front street, including the Tom Lyle store, Meyer-Neville Hardware Company and numerous other buildings, many dwellings being blown down on Twenty-second avenue near the depot.

Numerous dwellings and factories were demolished and a number killed and injured. Many bodies have been taken from the debris. All telephone wires were down throughout the city, and it was very difficult to get a full account of the terrible event.

The loss of $1,000,000 will be practically total. There was not more than $100,000 cyclone insurance carried in the city, and the largest policies were held by several firms which suffered comparatively little.

Several solid blocks of the wholesale business section of the city, practically the two blocks near the Union passenger station, will have to be rebuilt entirely, and through the poorer residence section of the city the storm practically swept away all the residences in a path several hundred feet wide and a mile long. It is probable that 1,000 houses were either demolished on both sides of the city or so badly damaged that they will have to be torn down and rebuilt.

It was estimated that there were between 3,500 and 4,000 homeless people in the city and suburbs. They were cared for as rapidly as possible, and in many instances were temporarily at the homes of their neighbors and friends.

Following a drizzly rain during the afternoon, a premature darkness settled over Meridian shortly after 6 o'clock Friday night. Eye witnesses say that day faded into night without the usual period of dusk. Accompanying the dense black mass of clouds was a wind that rapidly assumed the proportions of a cyclone, striking the city from the southwest, without other warning than a rapid increase in the velocity. As described by eye witnesses, the cyclone assumed the shape of an elevated ball of fire as it swept upon its pathway of destruction. It sounded as if two trains had crashed together, and many state that it so impressed them.

Among its other freaks the wind carried a little baby of Jim Stewart away from his home, swept it through the air many feet above the ground and finally let it fall gently to mother earth uninjured.

The wind played a peculiar freak when it struck a one-story portion of the Meridian cotton mill, in which there were a great many machines. This structure is about 250 feet long and half as wide. The two end walls were blown away almost completely, leaving the side walls standing, and these supported the roof, which was not blown away.

Twenty-eight fine horses were buried alive in M. Thornton's livery stable, which was demolished by the walls from the Meyer-Neville Hardware Company. The groans of the injured horses could be heard for some time after the cyclone, but finally all sounds ceased. There was some $15,000 invested in the horses, which were buried. The horses were found mashed, their limbs broken, their backs crushed, their skulls fractured—all of them more or less mangled. Many of the animals must have suffered tortures before death relieved them.

One of the sad tragedies of the cyclone was the cuicide of Claude Williams, floor manager of the Meyer-Neville Hardware Company. Mr. Williams was at the center of the first floor when the building collapsed. His cries for help were heard, but all efforts to reach him were futile.

When he realized his doom he ended his suffering by slashing his throat with his pocketknife. His body was recovered at 7 o'clock Saturday morning.

A partial list of the dead and injured is as follows:

William R. Nelson, former chief of police.

Policeman T. P. Tarry.

Claud Williams, employe of Meyer-Neville Hardware Company.

Mrs. Ella Singleton, killed in collapse of residence at East End.

Maxie Slaughter, granddaughter of Mrs. Slaughter, killed at same place.

James Stewart, killed in collapse of residence at Eighth street, Georgetown.

Clarence Stewart, aged 14, son of John Stewart, killed with father.

John Smith, engineer on Southern railway, killed in Elmire's restaurant.

Mrs. Babe Smith, killed in collapse of home at Thirteenth street, Georgetown.

Mrs. Clarke, knocked down by flying scantling and burned to death in home in Georgetown.

Patrick McGinnis, conductor on Mobile and Ohio railroad, killed at Elmire's restaurant.

Cliff Edwards, flagman on Mobile and Ohio, killed at Elmire's restaurant.

The negroes killed:

Ben Botts.

Tom Sherrod.

Ed Brown.

John Ramsay.

Three negro bodies badly charred and unidentified.

Infant child of William Wright, killed in collapse of home.

Feast of Poison.

Marysville, Kas.—About seventy-five persons were poisoned by partaking of a free lunch at a public sale at a farm near here. The lunch served was apparently of the best quality, but soon after eating it persons were taken violently ill with symptoms of poisoning. While all were very sick there will probably be no deaths resulting from the unfortunate affair. The county health officer is making a rigid investigation.

TROOPS ARE READY.

It Is Hoped That the Precautionary Measures Taken Will Have Effect Upon the Pekin Government.

Chicago, Ill.—A dispatch from Washington says:

Besides making preparations in the Philippines to dispatch an army to China to protect American interests, the secretary of war, in accordance with instructions from the president, has given directions for troops in the United States to be ready at a moment's notice for service in the far east.

The president is hopeful the precautionary steps he has taken will have the effect of causing the empress dowager to adopt repressive measures immediately and thus avert an outbreak.

Such steps were imposed upon her by representations she has received from all sections of the empire sent by consuls and their agents and information obtained from other sources. These reports prove that a condition of unrest prevails and that Americans and their property are in danger in consequence of the feelings created by the boycott instituted last summer.

The president has found that while the Chinese government ostensibly promised to suppress the boycott, it actually has taken no steps in that direction. The foreign officers at Pekin insist it simply agreed to stop disorders which were the result of the boycott, and it was not possible to order its subjects to buy goods of one merchant instead of another. In the end the boycott doubtless will affect American trade, but it has not done so up to this time.

Attempt to Wreck Train.

Corona, Ala.—An attempt was made to wreck the Corona accommodation, the Southern railway passenger train, commonly known as the "Dude," Friday afternoon at a point less than half a mile east of the Little Warrior river, between Littleton and Bryan. Little damage was done, and nobody was hurt. The train was stopped within less than a hundred yards of the trestle over the river. Some miscreant had driven a spike between two rails, and the "pony trucks," or small wheels of the engine were derailed on coming in contact with it. The derailed wheels made considerable noise bumping along on the crossties, and Engineer Orr immediately reversed his lever, and came to a halt within about a hundred yards. Mr. Orr instantly began an investigation of his locomotive, finding the "pony trucks" off and the right cylinder burst. Within a short time the engine was repaired and replaced upon the track. Meanwhile Conductor R. D. Taylor and several passengers had gone back to discover the cause of the trouble, and they found, as stated above, that some one had driven a spike between two rails.

Rockefeller Sues for $500,000.

New York.—Frank Rockefeller, a brother of John D. Rockefeller, began a suit in the supreme court Saturday against various individuals and brokerage firms in this city and Cleveland. Mr. Rockefeller, who lives in Ohio, is seeking to recover $500,000. The suit is the outcome of stock transactions with Leland W. Prior, who committed suicide in Cleveland on January 9.

Sizing Up Situation.

Paris.—The Journal publishes the result of an investigation made by its correspondents along the German frontiers. The paper says the Germans do not desire war, but the German army is ready and its mobilization plans permit of a rapid invasion of territory. The Journal counsels the abandonment of French reliance on fortifications and the adoption of the German plan of a rapid invasion of the enemy's territory.

Anarchists Arrested.

St. Petersburg.—Two anarchists, armed with bombs, were arrested at a railroad station here as they were boarding a train for Tsarkoe-Selo, where the emperor is at present sojourning.

TEN THOUSAND

People Said To Have Perished in Great Storm. Big Loss of Property.

CYCLONE SWEEPS THE ISLANDS.

Fears Entertained that Death List Will Be Large—Damage to Plantations Bring Hardships to Natives.

San Francisco, Cal.—The Evening Evening Post states that 10,000 persons perished during the storm on Tahiti and adjacent islands, several of which, its account says, have disappeared. It places the damage at $5,000,000.

Papeete, Tahiti, via San Francisco.—The most destructive cyclone ever experienced in the Society and Tuamotu Islands occurred on February 7 and 8. The damage in Tahiti is estimated at $1,000,000, and presumably a similar amount of property was destroyed on the Tuamotu Islands. The city of Papeete was inundated and about seventy-five buildings destroyed, including the American consulate and the French government building. The shipping in the harbor of Papeete escaped injury owing to the direction of the winds, but fears are entertained for vessels which were cruising near the Tuamotu Islands.

It is feared that there have been heavy losses of life in the lagoons of Tuamotu Islands, though the guardian's death at the quarantine station in Papeete is the only fatality reported.

The schooner Papeete was submerged for an hour near Anae, Tuamotu. Her captain, Philip Michaelli, estimated that the waves were sixty-five feet high. It was impossible to see twenty feet away. At 3 o'clock in the day time the sailors had to be lashed to the vessel.

Bridges and roads were badly damaged on the Island of Tahiti. Bread fruit, banana, cocoanut and plantain trees were blown down in great numbers, which will result in hardships to the natives and materially affect commerce during the next two or three years.

The French gunboat Zelee has gone to the Tuamotu Islands with supplies of food and fresh water. The Britisn consul has appealed to his government for aid for 500 British subjects. Some Americans have sustained heavy losses and probably there will be a few instances of utter destitution. The Americans are hopeful of securing help from the United States. Money and food is required.

The cyclone or hurricane reached the velocity of 120 miles an hour. It struck the island about midnight on February 7 and continued until about 4 o'clock on the next afternoon. The Island of Anaa, Tuamotu group, is believed to have been the center of the storm.

Gang of Hoodiums.

Glasgow, Ky.—The particulars of the cowardly treatment of the family of Grant Britt, an aged citizen of Boles, Monroe county, has just reached this place. It is alleged that Clovis Rhoton, Benton Crawford, Mack Hudson and Hugh Hix, all of whom were drunk, went to the home of Britt and began abusing the family and smashing gurniture. So boisterous and desperate did the men become that the family was driven from their home. After turning over the stove and table and breaking up the bed the men started away. When in the yard, only a few steps away, one of the men, said to be Rhoton, threw a stone at the lamp and burst it. The oil took fire, and in a few minutes the building was burned to the ground. The people in that community are indignant and will have the men prosecuted to the full extent of thel wa. Hudson, Benton, Crawford and Hix have been arrested and placed under bond, but Rhoton made his escape.

Capsized By Waves.

Stebenville, O.—Waves from the Virginia, the largest steamer on the Ohio river, capsized a row boat in which were four men, at Mingo, drowning Jose Zerbe, agent for the Belmont Brewing Company; Gregory Maul, a broker, and Gebhart Springer, a saloon keeper. The men were seining.

Nashville Pastor Killed.

Nashville, Tenn.—Rev. W. H. Strickland, pastor of the Spruce Street Northern Methodist Episcopal church of this city, was run down and killed by a street car. Dr. Strickland attempted to cross the track in front of a rapidly moving car. He was dragged several yards and horribly mangled, his body being almost cut in twain.

Development Company.

Guntersville, Ala.—Articles of incorporation of the Henderson Land and Development Company, with a capital stock of $100,000, have been filed in the office of the judge of probate here. The incorporators are H. C. and D. G. Henderson and others. The purpose of the corporation is to build houses, improve farms, develop coal and other minerals owned by the company, as well as a general real estate and improvement business.

FORMER GOVERNOR HOGG DEAD.

Famous Texan Passes Away at Houston—Had Been in Failing Health For More Than a Year.

Houston, Tex.—Former Gov. James Stephen Hogg died Saturday at the residence of Frank C. Jones, his law partner. Governor Hogg had been in failing health for a year or more. His condition was not considered dangerous by his physicians and he was planning a trip to Battle Creek, Mich. Governor Hogg reached Houston Friday night, and feeling indisposed took to his bed. He died at 11 o'clock Saturday.

FOUND DEAD IN ROAD.

Prominent Marengo County Man Is Believed to Have Died of Heart Failure.

Linden, Ala.—News has reached here from Jefferson that Dr. C. B. Whitfield, one of the most prominent and well known men in this part of the state, died very suddenly. He was a member of the wealthy and distinguished Whitfield family. Mr. Gains Whitfield, the oldest brother, had been very ill at the Whitfield homestead in Demopolis, and the whole family had been attending him. Deceased had left Demopolis to go to his country home below Jefferson, and his horse appearing at the farm house dragging his cart, caused an immediate search for him. His lifeless body was found in the public road, but showed no signs of violence, and it was supposed that he died of heart failure.

Over $4,000,000 in Appropriations.

Jackson, Miss.—A summary of the appropriation bills approved by the governer and filed with the secretary up to the noon hour Saturday shows that the legislature has already allowed $4,841,732.14 for various purposes. This does not include some of the very largest appropriation bills. Among those not included in the list are allowances to the deaf and dumb institution, Mississippi Insane hospital, penitentiary, Industrial Institute and College, Mississippi A. & M. College, Alcorn A. & M. College, University, Vicksburg and Natchez hospitals and the department of archives and history, none of these bills yet being in perfected shape.

Indications are that the total appropriations for the session will be in excess of $6,000,000.

Warring Factions.

Chicago, Ill.—During the last few days numerous fights have taken place between factions of the Teamsters' Union, and William Kelly, secretary of Coal Teamsters' Union No. 104, was shot in the leg and seriously wounded by Lawrence Ready, connected with the Ready & Callaghan Coal Company. Ever since the teamsters' strike of last June there have been in the union factions supporting President Cornelius P. Shea and factions opposed to him. The Shea men have been asking the other teamsters to strike on a number of jobs, and the men opposed to Shea have declined to do so. Early Saturday a fight took place at Wabash avenue and Van Buren street, and later another along the tracks of the Illinois Central at the foot of Van Buren street. No arrests were made in either instance, the fighters disappearing before the police arrived.

Bloodhounds Trail Murderer.

Decatur, Ala.—A pair of thoroughbred bloodhounds owned by T. K. Boggs, of this city, in Cullman county chased down a young white man named Tom Wowden, wanted on a charge of attempt to murder and half a dozen other charges. Wowden has escaped the sheriff of Cullman county a dozen times. When Mr. Boggs reached the scene the trail was nineteen hours old, but the dogs followed it through a drenching rain and finally located Wowden in his father's home near Brooklyn, fourteen miles east of Cullman. He was arrested and taken to Cullman and placed in jail.

To Mark the Graves.

Washington, D. C.—Senator Pettus and Representatives Underwood and Taylor asked the president to appoint Gen. Charles M. Shelly, of Birmingham, Ala., commissioner to mark the graves of Confederate soldiers who died in federal prisons during the civil war, the appointment being restricted under the Foraker act to a former Confederate soldier.

There are two candidates for postmaster if Girard—J. H. Carlisle and Prof. F. A. Threadgill. Postmaster Glass, the present incumbent, will resign soon. There is quite a spirited fight for the place.

But this does confirm the fact that they are al- the most profitable for the prac- shepherd to purchase. Rather, a mistake cannot be made than buy a highly fitted prize winner, matter what the price may be. Why?

Because such a ram almost invari- proves infertile or incapable of vice. It is hardly possible to injure lamb by too heavy feeding, pro- exercise to a limited extent is but treat in the same manner that is, fit up highly—yearlings and of more mature age, and the sult is that they become practically thless in the breeding flock. LAWS OF BREEDING.

Lecturing recently upon this sub- Professor Shaw said that the great laws are that like pro- es like, that like producers unlike, that the characters of some an- tors may crop out with unexpected nsity in a given animal. Of these the first is the strongest. Like her like son. Breed from the best if you expect to breed up and down. In selecting a sire prepo- ncy is of the first importance. Pre- ency is the ability to put into the geny the desired qualities pres- in the sire or in his ancestors. In king for prepotency regard as most portant the individuality of the sire of his immediate ancestors. If dam was a good milker, and if grandams were good milkers, and four great grandams were of su- rior merit, these facts are of more portance than traces back to some digy in the distant past. It is better to have the immediate pedi- strong than to record a trace the blood of some splendid animal far back that it could not much ect the character of prepotency of given animal. The next point to considered is to see if the bull is bred—that is, that he traces to through animals that have been d for the purpose to which his ves are to be devoted. In this y the bull has an accumulation of ces all tending in the same direc- In-breeding, except in the hands an expert, is dangerous, but line- eding should be followed by every desirous of improving his herd. bull should, of course, be a pure- Never breed from a cross- d animal, because a cross-bred ani- cannot be prepotent. The pure-bred is more apt to be prepotent because his lines of force are derived from parallel channels, all tending in the same direction. Finally, both in his form and carriage the bull should evidence physical vigor. Having determined what kind of a herd you are going to breed, and having definitely decided as to the point at which you are aiming, select your bull accordingly, and having begun on this line do not vary.—American Cultivator.

FEEDING IDLE HORSES.

The farm horse that has practically nothing to do during the months of winter is a costly proposition to feed if he must be kept on the regulation ration. It is really more profitable to find some work for the animal to do which will enable one to afford full rations, as in the summer, for then the horse is likely to be in much better shape to take up the spring work. Of course, if one is located where the horse can be on pasture more or less during the winter months the cost of wintering the animal is materially reduced.

In colder sections one must rely on the sheltered yard to give the horse needed exercise and largely on the grain one has; do not attempt to keep the horse through the winter on roughage alone, for the plan will only result in having a run down animal in the spring, which will be a costly experiment. Horses are not fed nearly the quantity of roots they should have, and those who winter idle animals will find it profitable to grow roots, especially for them to feed with the grain ration. In the absence of roots, oil meal bran or some similar articles which will keep the digestive organs in good condition must be a part of the daily ration. One can get along very nicely on feeding considerable roughage and corn if considerable bran or root crops is also used. Remember, too, that good grooming and a clean, light stable will do much toward keeping the animal in good health, and help to enable him to enjoy even the roughage.—Indianapolis News.

Consideration.

George Elliot once recorded in a letter to a friend a little incident in which the confusion of ideas evinced was such as to remind one of the deliciously bemuddled wits of Shakespearian rustics. A blind man was walking along the sidewalk. A woman crossed the street, ran up to him, touched his arm, and addressed him by name, adding in tones of complacent pride, "You see I know you, though you are dark!"

Mrs. Binns of Hentley, whose intellect is manifestly of the same order, was mildly reproved the other day by her daughter Emmeline as the door closed upon a departing guest.

"Mother," said Emmeline, "do tell me why you have been shouting so at Miss Doane all the afternoon. I haven't heard that she is growing deaf, have you?"

"If you'd known the Doane family as long as I have, you wouldn't need to," rejoined Mrs. Binns, serenely. "Her Great-Aunt Jane and both her sisters have cleft palates, and are the hardest people to understand I ever talked to. As for Eliza, I haven't heard her spoken about particularly, as I know, but a Doane's a Doane, and it's as well to be on the safe side. It's more considerate."

"But, mother," protested Emmeline, feebly, "ears and palates aren't the same thing. You wouldn't have to shout at her even if —"

"There, there, that'll do," interrupted Mrs. Binns, a trifle loftily. "I hope I'm willing to take a little trouble for a family I've known as long as I have the Doane girls. We lived next door to 'em a year; that was before you were born. Poor things! I'm sure I don't begrudge shouting a while, even if it does hoarse me up some. You'll find a paper of lemon-drops in that luster teapot, Emmeline. I wish you'd hand 'em down."—Youth's Companion.

Mechanical Refrigeration on Railways.

The scientific engineer has achieved one more victory over natural ice, and now has constructed a refrigerating machine for freight-cars, which forms an integral part of the car, and does away entirely with the necessity of constantly refilling the refrigerating-chamber with ice during its journey.

This new device, which has recently undergone successful tests, consists of a small refrigerating-machine for each car, located in an enclosed casing beneath the car, and deriving power by gearing connected with the axle on one of the trucks. The machine includes a compressor for condensing the gas, usually carbondioxide, circulating pipes which cool the car, and a condenser for abstracting the heat from the condensed gas. The principle underlying is that common to most systems of mechanical refrigeration, and is based on the fact that a gas expanding extracts heat from the vicinity, while a gas being compressed absorbs heat. The function of the condenser is to withdraw the heat from the gas that has been compressed, and for this purpose water is employed, which in case of need can be supplied from engine hydrants, while rain-water from the roof of the car is also employed.—Harper's Weekly.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

MAKING TOY BALLOONS.

Was there ever a toy more fascinating to wee folk than the balloon, and was there ever a baby heart that did not beat joyfully or a tiny hand that did not reach out involuntarily when the balloon man came in sight with his bobbing mass of wonderful red and blue globes?

It might surprise many of you to know that such a fragile toy as the balloon brings in annually many, many thousands of dollars to France, the country where balloons, for the most part, are made. Of late years the French balloon manufacturers have added a great deal of money to their incomes by various new inventions on the order of balloons. They are called in France bibis, and include all sorts of grotesque animals, birds, snakes, and even boats made of rubber and inflated by means of a tube. The most popular and the funniest of them all are the so-called "dying pigs." These odd little figures, with which most of you are probably familiar, are very plump and jovial looking creatures when blown up; but, as the air gradually leaves them, they utter a mournful squeal and become thinner and thinner, finally toppling over in a dejected heap in the funniest possible way. A lizard that twists about, a flying serpent, and a curious little airship are some of the other recent inventions on the same order. More than a million francs worth of the "dying pigs" were sold in Paris in one year, and, says a Paris journal in speaking of the fact, "It was enough to excite the jealousy of Chicago."

To make these frail little toys the very best of rubber must be used, otherwise it would break when stretched to such a fine point. The pieces, after being cut the proper shape, are welded together by machine pressure and vulcanized, being given the greatest possible elasticity. They are then tested by blowing it up, which is the final process. Sometimes the balloons are decorated with fanciful designs, which work gives employment to many young women who are expert in that line.—Christian Register.

TALE OF A TAILLESS CAT.

It is a well known that Manx cats have no tails, only slight stumps, and that the offspring of such in other parts of the world, in the first generation at least, are in the same abnormal condition. While living in Scotland thirty years ago we had a Manx kitten given to us, which although born there, was tailless. The door of our breakfast room was spring shutting, like most of the screen doors in this country, but opening only toward the inside. Before the kitten was full grown he had learned to let himself in by pushing from the outside, but never learned, although we often tried to teach him, to pull it open from the inside.

It was not, however, the opening of the door from the outside to which I wish to call attention—any cat could have easily learned to do that; but the fact that invariably, after he had so pushed it and got his body partially in, he made a rapid turn or whirl to prevent the tail that was not there (but heredity impressed upon him the fact that it ought to have been) from being caught between the closing door and its frame.

This he did dozens of times every day so long as we had him, and was always willing to show off before our visitors, as he never seemed to recognize the fact that he had not a tail like his neighbors.—Scientific American.

AN ELEPHANT'S TOILET.

Does it ever occur to you that an elephant that is well taken care of must be looked after quite as carefully as a well-kept horse? It sounds strange to talk of grooming an elephant, but that is just what is done. In the first place, Mr. Elephant has his nails manicured. This manicuring is done on an extensive scale, for two men are required to do the work, and their instruments are a file and a saw. Each of the elephant's feet has five toes, and some elephants have five nails on each of the front and four on each of the hind feet, while others have only four on the front and three on the hind feet. In captivity these nails often grow quite long, so that they have to be cut with large instruments. The elephant's skin is thick and soft, and in order to keep it in good condition oil is used; and then the keeper attends to his ears. The oil is in a large pail and is applied with a mop. It is evident, therefore, that the elephant's massage treatment is even a more extensive performance than his manicuring. This treatment must be a great relief to the huge animal, for the skin often becomes hard and dry, a condition which the oil tends to remedy.—New Haven Register.

GETTING UP A DOLL PARTY.

A pretty affair was a doll party, at which a little miss entertained 15 of her little friends, says The Pilgrim.

They came with their dolls arrayed in their prettiest clothes.

They went at once to the nursery, where they played school, going to church, and various games with their dolls. They cut paper dolls to their heart's content, looked at picture books and amused themselves in their own sweet way. They were left entirely alone, with the exception of an occasional peep from some older member of the family.

A most appetizing dinner, such as would be suitable for children, was served. The dining-room was gracefully festooned with chains made from holly leaves and berries were [illegible] dren. In the centre of the table there was a [illegible] of feathery ferns, from which was suspended a wedding bell made of small red flowers. Under this stood dolls dressed as bride and groom, on a mound of ferns. From the chandelier triple chains of holly leaves and berries were festooned to each corner of the table and fastened there with bows of red ribbon.

The place-cards were dolls, dressed in costumes of different countries, carrying baskets filled with candy, and tiny cards containing the children's names tucked in the baskets.

A HORSE'S HANDS AND FEET.

Now the horse never puts his heel on the ground, nor even the ball of his foot. He stands up on the very tips of his toes, and this is, in part, the reason why he can trot so fast. Dobbin's heels are half way up his hind legs, and what we call his knees are really his wrists. The part corresponding to the upper arm is short, and is so embeded in the muscles of the shoulder that the elbow comes next the body. But the horse has only one digit on each limb, and the wrist bones are comparatively small. The so-called ankle, then, is the knuckle where the digit joins the hand or the foot, and the "foot" is only a single thick finger or toe, with a great nail for a hoof. The lower half of the horses's fore leg is really a gigantic hand with only the middle finger and a piece out of the middle of the palm, while the corresponding part of his hind leg is a big, single-toed foot.—St. Nicholas.

PLAYING STORE.

The children will find a good deal of amusement, and at the same time learn a great deal, by playing store. Cloth may be represented by long strips of paper neatly folded; sugar, coffee, etc., by little sacks of sand. Shoes, jewelry, ready-made-clothing, etc., may be cut from old catalogues. Money may be made by cutting round pieces of cardboard of the right sizes and writing the value on each one. Then one of the children may be storekeeper, while the others come with their cardboard money to buy. Give them a litle help at first in making change and inspire them with pride in not making mistakes, and they will soon get so they can change quite accurately, and will learn a great deal about numbers in the doing of it.—Mothers' Magazine.

WHY HIS FATHER LOVES HIM.

Little Georgie is the apple of his father's eye, and it would seem that he deserves to be. A little while ago a rough looking individual came to the house where little Georgie lives, and grasped him by the collar.

"If you don't tell me where your father keeps his money," growled this exemplary person "I'll knock yer 'ead orf yer shoulders, an' arfter that I'll eat yer!"

"Oh, please don't do that, sir," whimpered Georgie. "You'll find all the money we've got in an old waistcoat in the kitchen."

Two minutes later a bruised and battered wreck was heaved through the front door of little Georgie's dwelling place, and sat for a while in the gutter and blinked.

"That kid's too smart—unnatural smart," it muttered. "Never said a word about 'is old man bein' inside the weskit."—Answers.

More Phantoms for "Rojy."

Admiral Rozhdestvensky becomes more and more pathetically like those unfortunate people who complain to Police Magistrates of the persecutions of enemies who will persist in rolling lumps of thunder at them. He has admitted to the Paris Journal's correspondent in Tokio that at one time what, with strenuous British denials and one thing and another, he really did begin to think that he was the victim of a hallucination off the Dogger. But in Tokio he found reassuring proof postive to the contrary. One of his interpreter-attendants in hospital was a Japanese naval officer with his arm in a sling—on account of rheumatism, so he said. But one day another attendant let out that the "rheumatism" was really a wound, and Admiral Sherlockholmesky had a clue at once. Discreetly, "in a roundabout way," he pumped a third attendant, and found that the "rheumatic" one had been to Europe with torpedo boats, while yet further sleuthing disclosed that his return to Japan "coincided in a striking manner with the Hull incident," following just at the right interval. That was conclusive, of course. But whether poor Rozhdestvensky saw phantom attendants or that third attendant is now concealing behind an impassive Japanese countenance an unholy joy at having pulled an Admiral's leg, we decline to guess.—London Pall Mall Gazette.

According to the Berlin Export, the total exports of German drugs, dyes and chemicals, for the ten months ended October, 1905, amounted to about 1,200,000 tons. Increases in the amounts exported occurred in the following articles: Potassium of cyanide, calcium chloride, potassium chlorate, manganese chlorate, bromide preparations, aniline dyes, acetic acid, ammonia.

INTERESTING TO WOMEN

ENGLISH BRIDES.

As American brides like to borrow from England wedding fashions news of recent events of the kind is very interesting to them and of course everybody likes to read of picturesque bridal processions. An account of a late notable wedding runs: "At her wedding Lady Ruperta Carrington—whose unusual name is the result of her being named of an uncle—who married Lord Lewisham, wore a moire antique bridal gown. Over a lace veil she wore an enveloping one of tulle. The bridesmaids wore pale pink satin, embroidered in relief, and lace-trimmed hats with sable crowns, and carried sable muffs. Muffs seem to be quite the latest thing at English nuptials, and at the wedding of Miss Gwendolen Talbot to Guy Stephenson the attendants carried white muffs with white gowns and black picture hats. The bridesmaids of Miss Eloise Breese, who married Lord Willoughby de Eresby, also carried muffs. They were granny muffs of satin and lace, trimmed with mink to match the mink edging the skirts of their gowns. Their gowns, by the way, must have been decidedly changeable, for one English paper states they were blue, another lavender, and a third that they were French gray. They had full, round skirts, bordered with mink; deep belts of satin, and yokes of Venetian point. Quaint old-time fichus in chiffon the color of the gowns were draped over the shoulders, with ends falling down the front. The elbow sleeves had lace frills, and the large lace hats were also trimmed with mink. Miss Breese's gown was simple. It had a long, plain skirt of the white satin, the draped bodice had silver lace at the side it was draped, and a yoke of point lace. The draped sleeves were elbow length. Her veil was of Brussel's lace. The two little pages wore pale blue satin suits, topped by three-cornered black hats."—English Exchange.

LADY CURZON IN INDIA.

Lady Curzon, wife of the late viceroy of India, is shortly to visit this country. She is an American girl, by birth, most happy in her marriage, and the mother of a number of children. She was a Leiter of Maryland, before her marriage, but was brought up in Chicago.

During her life in India she came in touch with many native mothers and families, and her influence was extended to bring them into western ways of conducting the home. In certain portions of India it is the custom, where a young child is deformed, to kill it or leave it in the wilds exposed to the attacks of wild beasts. The natives believed that a deformed child has been marked by evil spirits and ought not to live.

Lady Curzon, meeting native mothers who felt that this should be, instituted classes among them with a view to educating them to care for and rear the unfortunately marked children. The work had to be done in the most diplomatic manner possible, for centuries of custom and religious training had taught the native women that what they did was right.

She began the work with an appeal to the instinct of motherhood, the appeal to the thought that although deformed, the child was part of the mother itself. From this argument she passed on to the old injunction of the Scriptures, "Thou shalt not kill," and she extended this to the teachings of Christ and His Love for the lame, the halt and the blind.

So effective was her work that before she left India she received from more than 2,000 Indian mothers a written testimonal informing her that they accepted what she and her assistants had taught; that life had been made more precious to them, and that from this on they would extend her work for the protection of the helpless child.

LETTERS OF INTRODUCTION.

To put it frankly, perhaps brutally, the right of introduction has been abused, in the matter of both asking and giving introductions. The abuse is evident; still the use remains. To whom, then, may we accredit the friend starting on his travels, "far countries for to see?" First: (if our relations warrant it) to the recognized "leaders," the men and women whose tastes and talents fit them for the offices society has conferred upon them. They are easily discernible, whether in a New England village or in a European capital. With them society is the serious business; there is room in their plan of life for its duties, among others the scrutin de liste of the strangers knocking at the door.

Second: to that friend, who, we believe, will have something to give and something to receive from the traveler.

I have made for myself these precepts concerning letters of introduction:

Beware! how you give them.

Beware! how you receive them.

Beware! how you ask for them!—Maud Howe, in Harper's Bazar.

REAL HOSPITALITY.

I have learned not to take too seriously the stranger within my gates. Nine times out of ten he prefers to be treated without ceremony, to be made free of my fireside, be made at home in my home, rather than to be dined, taken to clubs and to the finest houses I have access to. I remember the ennui of months of hotel life, the horror of endless table-d'hotes, and cheerfully invite even the rich and great to roast beef and apple tart. The best I have is none too good for him who comes in the sacred name of hospitality, myself, my children, my home, if he ask it—my little store of knowledge what life has taught me.

It is safe to assume that strangers will be more cordially welcomed by those who live in the smaller cities, than by people who dwell in the great centres, the stations on the world's highway of travel.—Maud Howe, in Harper's Bazar.

ADVICE TO GIRLS.

Do the little things, and then, if you have the time, dream of the great things.

Be natural. Remember there are others as lovely as you are.

Have many friends. A chum usually is disappointing and leaves a sore spot which might have been avoided.

Be conservative. Your acquaintances do not want your confidences.

At all times be womanly. A masculine girl does not retain admiration.

Be quick to believe good. Believe the good until the evil is evident.

Be pleasant at all times. A smile does more good in this world than all the preachings.

Think beautiful thoughts. "Beautiful thoughts are angels bright."

Remember that you are judged by your actions. "Do noble things, don't dream them all day long."

FOR AN ENGAGED GIRL.

A little while ago each girl friend of an engaged girl gave her a teacup. This gift is not so popular now as a contribution of lingerie for her trousseau. A handmade underwaist or nightgown is a favored present, and girls are finding out that it is no more trouble to make these dainty things than to embroider a centerpiece. They are sensible gifts, and as indicative of a return to fine needlework, after a long period when girls have been taught everything but sewing, their advent is to be welcomed.—Indianapolis News.

BUILDING UP THE HOME.

The home most endeared to the heart of husband and wife is that which has been built up bit by bit. A little now and a little later on, wherein each piece of furniture represents many loving acts of self-denial and personal sacrifices, and round which lingers the memory of the scheming and plotting the getting of it gave rise to, and of the pleasure when it was got. Ask the happy, aged couple to whom prosperity has been the growth of years, says Woman's Life.

They will tell you the happiest time in their lives were the first few years of married life, when, with mutual love and self-denying patience, they built up their little home and watched prosperity gathering round them.

STYLE AIDS DRESS.

How often one sees a very simple toilette outshining its more elaborate neighbors, the simple reason being that its wearer possesses what is somewhat vaguely described as "style." Analyzed, "style" would seem actually to consist of little else than a properly-developed figure and a grasp of the fundamental law of dressing—namely, the way to put one's clothes on. The simplest cotton well put on by a wearer who takes the trouble to carry her head at the proper angle, to expand her chest, and breathe in accordance with the laws of hygiene, will find the habit of dressing will follow by natural sequence.

FASHION HINTS.

The sleeves are most elaborate, but invariably fit closely to the arm from elbow to wrist.

Narrow lace and velvet ribbon trimmings are the most fashionable of any, with tucks and pleatings.

The chiffon taffeta is soft and pliable, and wears far better than the taffeta of a few years ago.

Crepe de chine and chiffon are very much in demand on this side of the water.

Cut-work and open embroidery are used also as trimmings for the separate waists, one most charming model having yoke and front of cut-work; the color of the silk is a bright blue, several shades lighter than the blue cloth of the costume.

Sable and seal and chinchilla for the favored few to whom money is no object, while mink, broad-tail, and caracul meet the requirements of fashion equally well, and, incidentally, cost enough to satisfy the most extravagantly inclined.

Negligee jackets and tea-gowns continue to be of most engrossing interest to the feminine minds, and after all there are no garments more distinctly feminine.

The beauty of many of the lingerie waists of course lies in the exquisite hand work, and there is no especial difference in style from the summer fashions in this respect.

One faction is in favor of the short skirt and the severe "tailor-made" order of street dress; the other contends for the long skirt and the elaborate style.

Government Road Building.

The government of the United States has built highways in Cuba, in Porto Rico and the Phippine Islands, and Congress is even now preparing to appropriate money to blaze the highways and establish means of communication in Alaska. But the astonishing fact remains that the government has taken no substantial part in building highways at home, and helping the people who sustain it, and furnish it the very sinews of existence as a government, although it is not forbidden by constitutional limitation or sound public policy from engaging in such internal improvement. Intelligent men all over the country know that the almost universal lack of improvement in our road conditions is directly referable to the fact that there has been no estabished system of policy pertaining to the question. According to the ordinary schemes for road building the farmers have been compelled to pay the burden of the cost. Road building is undoubtedly a duty of government. Government is established for the welfare of the people. Nothing that can be evolved from the brain of man will more directly affect material interests among the people than road conditions, for good or bad as the roads are good or bad. The question is one coming home to all the people. The proposition embodied in the Brownlow Good Roads bill is undoubtedly a thoroughly patriotic one. Congress is being looked to for relief in this road matter. The people are now aroused as they have never been in favor of this suggested system of co operation, aided, fostered and led by the general government. The money that has been expended in the Philippine Islands—money gathered as taxes from our own people—would have constructed a scientific system of roads in every State in the Union. The people are studying about the question of government levying tribute on them for the support and betterment of other peoples, while relief is denied to them at home. The subject is assuming the practical phase that will lead to legislation such as the Brownlow-Latimer bill, or something similar thereto.

Write to Hon. W. P. Brownlow and secure a copy of the bill.

CHILDREN

If You Have Any Ailing Ones This Will Interest You.

"We see so many little boys and girls about town who are weak, thin-legged and hollow-cheeked," said a member of the Upchurch Drug co. "It seems a shame to allow them to remain so for they will grow up into weak, sickly and nervous men and women without the vitality to work or enjoy life.

"If," continued he, "the fathers and mothers of such children would believe what we say of Vinol, we would see a great difference in the appearance of the younger generation of this city. You know Vinol is not a patent medicine, and is just the tonic growing children need. It will make for them good, healthy flesh, sound bone, hard muscle, and rich, red blood.

"True, Vinol is a cod liver oil preparation, but it does not contain a drop of oil, or any bad tasting feature. It is so delicious that all children love it, yet it actually does contain all the medicinal curative elements found in fresh cod's livers, and is the most wholesome and best medicine for children we ever sold.

"It is because we know what Vinol will do that we guarantee if it fails to make your children well, rugged and rosy, to refund your money." Upchurch Drug co.

SPECIAL COURSE FOR TEACHERS

There are at present in Chilton county eighteen school districts without schools—unprovided with teachers. This is an alarming statement, yet true. And why is it true? The reason is surely not to be found in indifference or lack of interest on the part of the people living in these districts. Certainly people everywhere are more keenly alive to the rights of the child and more responsive in matters of education today than ever before. It is not from any fault of the people that this condition of affairs prevails, but an answer to the question above is simply this: The demand for teachers far exceeds the supply. The burning need in the county today is the need of teachers.

Recognizing this necessity and in compliance with a request from a number of outside interested ones, the Board of Education of Clanton High School has undertaken to offer special advantages to those who wish to prepare for the state teachers' examination, and for those who desire a more liberal qualification for the profession. The teaching force has been increased, a teacher's course arranged, and other steps taken which will make the opportunity for the ambitious teacher a great one.

To the young man or woman who has ever entertained a hope of teaching there was never a greater inducement than now, and those who are already teaching never had greater encouragement to increase their proficiency and continue in the profession. The country needs more teachers and better teachers. Make this an opportunity for preparation and better qualification.

Special term for teachers opens Monday, March 12th. Full instructions will be given in all branches required by law for the three grades. Tuition per month $3.00. For further information apply to. R. E. Sessions, Clanton.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence of The Banner.

Washington, March 6, 1906.

While it is true that the average Democrat in Congress shies at the name of a ship subsidy bill like a moon eyed horse at a black stump, simply because the last two bills before the Congress were great grabs and nothing else, they have no right to shy at the one now before the Congress and which recently passed the Senate and now is before the House. It ought to pass in the interest of the merchants and manufacturers and the farmers of the country. It has no politics in it and has been endorsed by almost every trade organization in the country, notably by the cotton growers' association of the Southern states. We now are depending on foreign ships to carry 95 per cent. of our trans-atlantic business because those countries are ship owning and ship building countries and they have built up their shipping interests by the use of subsidies. Those countries require our cotton, wheat, corn, cattle and provisions and they send their ships to our ports for the goods they need, thus incidentally providing facilities for our European import traffic, but when we turn to our trade with Asia, Africa, Central and South America, and Australasia we find that conditions are radically different. Unlike the chief European nations, they are not ship owning lands.

We require from them a great quantity of imports, especially articles of food and raw materials for our manufactures, and the great bulk of these goods are on the tariff free list.

But these countries, unlike Europe, have no ships of their own to deliver all this needful merchandise in our own ports, and, of course, they do not supply the ships that are required for the proper expansion of our export commerce to their own ports. For this service both ways the United States is now dependent almost altogether on the surplus or inferior shipping of Europe. The European powers grant liberal subsidies to maintain great steam lines from their own ports to Asia, Africa, Central and South America, and Australasia, but they do not, if they can help it, allow any of their subsides to be utilized for the maintenance of steam lines to those competitive markets out of the ports of the United States.

Therefore, the manufactures, merchants, and farmers of America are at a very serious disadvantage compared with their European rivals in this competitive trade.

When the pure food bill passed the Senate its most pernicious features had been so removed by various amendments that Senator Heyburn required an introduction to it, as he could not recognize it as his own. Chas. A. Edwards.

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

The Rumseller's Sign.

I will paint you a sign, rumseller,
And hang it above your door,
A truer and better signboard
Than you ever had before
I will paint with the skill of master,
And many will pause to see
This wonderful piece of painting,
So like the reality.

I will paint yourself, rumseller,
As you wait for the fair young boy,
Just in the morn of manhood,
A mother's pride and joy,
He has no thought of stopping,
But you greet him with a smile,
And you seem so blithe and friendly
That he pauses to chat awhile.

I will paint you again, rumseller;
I will paint you as you stand
With a foaming glass of liquor,
Holding with either hand,
He wavers, but you urge him;
"Drink! Pledge me just this one,"
And he lifts the glass and drains it, and the hellish work is done.

And I next will paint you a drunkard,
Only a year has flown,
But into this loathsome creature
The fair young boy has grown.
The work was quick and rapid;
I will paint him as he lies
In a torpid, drunken slumber
Under the wintry skies.

I will paint the form of the mother
As she kneels at her darling's side,
Her beautiful boy that was dearer
Than all the world beside.
I will paint the shape of a coffin,
Labeled with one word, "lost."
I will paint all this, rumseller,
And paint it free of cost.

The sins and the shame and the sorrow,
The crime and want and woe
That is born there in your rumshop
No hand can paint, you know;
But I'll paint you a sign, rumseller,
And many shall pause to view
This wonderful, swinging signboard,
So terribly, fearfully true.
Rosa L. Ellis.

Dear Editor—Please allow me a small space in your paper to say to the people who have an interest in the Mt. Garmel cemetery that we are going to clean it off and put a wire fence around it, the 18th of this month. Everybody come and help that can and bring dinner and we will have a nice time, as we are caring for the dead.

Alps as Money Makers.

Three million persons are said to pass in at the gates of Switzerland every year, leaving $30,000,000 in the hotels alone. Add to this fares on railroads, for carriage hire, boats, etc., and the millions spent in shops for carved woodwork, clocks, toys of all kinds, souvenirs, laces, etc., and one begins to get a fairly good idea of what it means to Switzerland to have the Alps as a background for her financial progress and prosperity.

The City of Mexico has a population of 344,721.

Loss of sleep proves to be the curious effect that may limit man's mountain climbing. Dr. Bullock Workman mentions that in his camp in the Himalayas at 19,358 feet members of his party were kept awake by lack of breath, and on dozing off would suddenly awake gasping. He concludes that inability to sleep may itself be sufficient to keep climbers from going beyond 22,000 to 25,000 feet.

In the last 500 years Mexico has produced more silver than any other country in the world, the output for that period amounting to $3,050,000,000.

Relic of Painful Days.

When the floor of the operating theatre of the old hospital at Canterbury, England, was torn up the other day the rings were discovered through which were passed the cords for tying patients down on the operating table prior to the discovery of anaesthetics.

Mexican school children are given special lessons in urbanity and are taught to utter all manner of pretty speeches. A well-bred child in addressing an older person will say, "I kiss your hands," while a gallant will say to a lady, "I kiss your feet."

NEW FOOD LAW

People now demand the right to know exactly what they eat.

To be told by maker or retailer that the food is "pure" is not satisfactory.

Candy may contain "pure" white clay or "pure" dyes and yet be very harmful. Syrups may contain "pure" glucose and yet be quite digestible and even beneficial. Tomato catsup may contain a small amount of salicylic or boracic acid as a necessary preservative, which may agree with one and be harmful to another.

Wheat flour may contain a portion of corn flour and really be improved. Olive oil may be made of cotton seed oil. Butter may contain beef suet and yet be nutritious.

The person who buys and eats must protect himself and family, and he has a right to, and now demands, a law under which he can make intelligent selection of food.

Many pure food bills have been introduced and some passed by State legislatures; many have been offered to Congress, but all thus far seem objectionable.

It has seemed difficult for politicians to formulate a satisfactory bill that would protect the common people and yet avoid harm to honest makers and prevent endless trouble to retailers. No government commission or officer has the right to fix "food standards" to define what the people shall and shall not eat, for what agrees with one may not agree with another and such act would deprive the common citizen of his personal liberty. The Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., perhaps the largest makers of prepared foods in the world, have naturally a close knowledge of the needs of the people and the details of the business of the purveyors, (the retail grocer) and, guided by this experience have prepared a bill for submission to Congress which is intended to accomplish the desired ends, and inasmuch as a citizen of the U. S. has a right to food protection even when he enters another State it is deemed proper that the gov't take control of this matter and provide a national law to govern all the States. A copy of the bill is herewith reproduced.

Sec. 1 governs the maker whether the food is put up in small packages sealed, or in barrels, boxed or otherwise.

Sec. 2 governs the retailer, who may open a barrel and sell the food in small quantities. When he puts the goods into a paper bag he must also enclose a printed copy of the statement of the maker which was affixed to the original pkg. and inasmuch as the retailer cannot undertake to guarantee the statement of ingredients he must publish the statement of the makers and add his own name and address as a guarantee of his selling the food as it is represented to him which relieves the retailer of responsibility of the truth of the statement and throws it upon the maker, where it properly belongs.

The remaining sections explain themselves.

The Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., for example, have from the beginning of its existence printed on the outside of each and every pkg. of Postum and Grape-Nuts food a truthful and exact statement of what the contents were made of in order that the consumer might know precisely what he or she was eating. A person desiring to buy, for instance, strictly pure fruit jelly and willing to pay the price has a right to expect not only an equivalent for the cost but a further right to certainty as to what he eats. Or he may be willing to buy at less cost a jelly made part of fruit juices, sugar and a portion of glucose. But he must be supplied with truthful information of the ingredients and be permitted to use his personal liberty to select his own food accurately.

The people have allowed the slow murder of infants and adults, by tricky makers of food, drink and drugs to go on about long enough. Duty to oneself, family and nation demands that every man and woman join in an organized movement to clear our people from this blight. You may not be able to go personally to Washington to impress your Congressman, but you can, in a most effective way tell him by letter how you desire him to represent you.

Remember the Congressman is in Congress to represent the people from his district and if a goodly number of citizens express their views to him, he secures a very sure guide to duty. Remember also that the safety of the people is assured by insisting that the will of the people be carried out, and not the machinations of the few for selfish interests.

This pure food legislation is a pure movement of the people for public protection. It will be opposed only by those who fatten their pockets by deceiving and injuring the people. Therefore, if your Representative in Congress evades his patriotic duty hold him to strict accountability and if necessary demand equitable and honest service. This is a very different condition than when a faction demands class legislation of the Congressman. Several years ago the butter interests of the country demanded legislation to kill the oleomargarine industry and by power of organization forced class legislation really unworthy of a free people. Work people wanted beef suet butter because it was cheap and better than much unclean milk butter, but the dairy interests organized and forced the legislation. The law should have provided that pkgs. of oleomargarine bear the statement of ingredients and then let people who desire purchase it for just what it is, and not try to kill it by a heavy tax. Manufacturers sometimes try to force measures in their own interests but contrary to the interests of the people and the labor trust is always active to push through bills drafted in the interest of that trust but directly contrary to the interests of the people as a whole. Witness the anti-injunction bill by which labor unions seek to tie the hands of our courts and prevent the issue of any order to restrain the members of that trust from attacking men or destroying property. Such a bill is perhaps the most infamous insult to our courts and the common people ever laid before Congress and the Representatives in Congress must be held to a strict accountability for their acts relating thereto. But when bills come before Congress that are drawn in the interest of all the people they should receive the active personal support of the people and the representatives be instructed by the citizens. The Senators also should be written to and instructed. If, therefore, you will remember your privilege and duty you will at once—now—write to your Congressman and Senator on this pure food bill. Clip and enclose the copy herewith presented and ask them to make a business of following it through the committee considering it. Urge its being brought to a vote and requesting that they vote for it.

Some oppressively intelligent and carping critics may say this is simply an advertisement for Postum and Grape-Nuts. It is true that these articles are spoken of here in a public manner, but they are used as illustrations of a manufacturer seeking by example, printing on each pkg. a truthful, exact statement of ingredients, to shame other makers into doing the fair thing by the common people, and establishing an era of pure food, but that procedure has not yet forced those who adulterate and deceive to change their methods hence this effort to arouse public sentiment and show a way out of the present condition of fraud, deceit and harm.

The undersigned is paying to the publishers of America about $20,000.00 to print this announcement in practically all of the great papers and magazines, in the conduct of what he chooses to term, "an educational campaign," esteemed to be of greater direct value to the people than the establishment of many libraries. That is held to be a worthy method of using money for the public good. Tell the people facts, show them a way to help themselves and rely upon them to act intelligently and effectively.

The reader will be freely forgiven if he entirely forgets the reference to Postum and Grape-Nuts, if he will but join the pure food movement and do things.

C. W. POST.

TEXT OF PURE FOOD BILL.

If it meets approval cut it out, sign name and address and send to your Representative in Congress. Buy two or more publications from which you cut this. Keep one for reference and send the other to one of the U. S. Senators from your State. Ask one or two friends to do the same and the chances for Pure Food will be good.

The Secretary of Agriculture shall make necessary rules and regulations for carrying out the provisions of this Act, and is hereby authorized to employ such chemists, inspectors, clerks, laborers, and other employes, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this Act and to make such publication of the results of the examinations and anaylsis as he may deem proper. And any manufacturer, producer or dealer who shall refuse to supply, upon application and tender and full payment of the selling price samples of such articles of food to any person duly authorized by the Secretary of Agriculture to receive the same, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding one hundred dollars, or imprisoned not exceeding one hundred days, or both.

Section 5. That any person, firm or corporation who shall violate sections one and two of this Act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding two hundred dollars for the first offense and for each subsequent offense not exceeding three hundred dollars or be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or both, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 6. That any person, firm, or corporation, who shall wilfully, purposely or maliciously change or add to the ingredients of any food, make false charges, or incorrect analysis, with the purpose of subjecting the makers of such foods to fine or imprisonment under this Act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not exceeding one thousand dollars nor less than three hundred dollars, or imprisoned for not less than thirty days nor more than one year, or both.

Sec. 7. That it shall be the duty of every district attorney to whom the Secretary of Agriculture shall report any violation of this Act to cause proceedings to be commenced and prosecuted without delay for the fines and penalties in such case provided.

Sec. 10. That this Act shall be in force and effect from and after the first day of October, nineteen hundred and six.

The undersigned respectfully requests the Representatives from his district and Senators from his State to support this measure.

THE MAN THAT BLOWS HIS BUGLE.

The man that blows his bugle, you may not admire his style;
You may claim he is conceited and condemn him all the while;
You may term his method brazen or may even call it "brass,"
And the language that he uses you may designate as "gas;"
You may disapprove his manners as you pass them in review,
For no gentleman would burrow to the deeds that he will do,
But I think I ought to mention, for to me it's very clear,
That the man that blows his bugle is the fellow that we hear.

I've known some men whose bugles made a cracked, discordant note,
Somewhere between a peacock's yell and anthem of a goat,
And the people who first heard it always seemed to shrink and quail,
While they said, "Of course he's bugling, but he ought to be in jail."
But these men kept blowing, blowing, till the anxious, hurried throng
Said, "There must be merit in it or they wouldn't blow so long;"
